NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 84th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn., reports the present season much the best it ever has had for orders for fall planting.

BENJ. CHASE, Derry, N. H., says the way nurserymen are buying labels indicates they are cellaring stock in anticipation of a big spring business.

AQUILEGIAS are useful for planting among rocks. Plants grown from seed may be kept in rows in the open ground all winter, and in spring can be lifted and planted permanently to bloom.

PHLOX SUBULATA is a charming plant when in bloom, and even when devoid of flower it continues to nestle close to the ground and forms a decorative and luxuriant carpet of green until it is ready to flower again. In rocky places, where small pockets of soil can be found for the plants to take root in, nothing can beat Phlox subulata.

W. M. BOMBERGER, of Harlan, Ia., says that promiscuous seedling apples are variable in hardiness and behavior in the west, and it has been found necessary to discard them. But it has been found that Jonathan does well top-grafted on Haas; Grimes Golden will do finely, fifty per cent better, top-worked on English Golden Russet.

AFTER long litigation the Ellwanger will contest was settled before Surrogate Brown at Rochester October 16. The contest was over the appointment of William D. Ellwanger as executor of the estate of George Ellwanger, who left about $2,000,000. By the settlement the objections against the executor are withdrawn, and it is estimated that the granddaughters will get about $500,000.

HENRY W. ILLINBERGER removed from Brookline, Mass., five years ago, where he was employed by Mrs. Jack Gardner, to Lake Geneva, Wis., to take charge of the landscape work being done by N. W. Harris at his summer home there. He now has become associated with Klehm's Nurseries, Arlington Heights, Ill., and is in charge of landscape work they are doing at two places in Milwaukee.

FALL PLANTING.

At the opening of the autumn season J. Woodward Manning told his customers by circular letter:

"Fifty-three years' experience more and more emphasizes the fact that with the exception of a few trees, such as magnolias, tulip trees, mulberries and a few others (which, if inadvertently ordered, we will call attention to before below zero without injury. Its flowers are rather insignificant, but the fruit is attractive. W. N. CRAIG.

PRIVET FOR SHRUBBERIES.

California privet is so firmly entrenched in the minds of most people as the great hedge maker that it is seldom thought of or made use of for any other purpose. Privet in two or more varieties can, nevertheless, be used advantageously in the formation of shrubberies, especially when these shrubberies are laid out and planted with each kind in a group, as they should be. The beautiful formation and dark green of the privet foliage all through the season, and in many places well into the winter, as well as the ornamental habits of the various varieties, make it desirable for grouping. And again, if flowers are desirable, they are by no means wanting, either. M.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held October 19, with a good attendance. Eugene McCarron was elected to membership and several applications were received. There was a general discussion regarding the conditions of the rose, carnation and chrysanthemum crops in this vicinity. The reports were generally favorable, both as to quality and quantity. There was discussion as to the line of demarcation between the professional and the amateur florist. This brought out a diversity of opinions. It was the consensus of opinion, although no formal action was taken, that any persons who grow flowers either for wages or for sale should be considered as professionals. The matter of holding a series of lectures during the winter was also discussed and the executive committee instructed to consider the proposition and report at a subsequent meeting.

Various Notes.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Johnston, widow of Thomas J. Johnston, was attended by a large number of florists. Among those present was Alex Rennie, formerly of this city but now of Boston, who was accompanied by his wife.

Timothy O'Connor is busy for so early in the season, with wedding decorations and social functions. There have been a large number of fashionable weddings this fall.

The department stores have commenced the handling of ferns, palms and other potted plants this fall, at cut rates. Cut flowers also are being handled by them.

The annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society will be held in Churchill house, November 11 and 12. The circulars with prize lists have been sent out to growers and a larger show than usual is expected.

The business of the late William Butcher, 38 Pitman street, will be continued by his widow. W. H. M.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Conditions last week were about the same as the week before, with plenty of stock and no great demand for anything. There were quantities of stock for the street faker at almost any price, and on Saturday large lots were disposed of in this way. The continued warm weather has brought the mums on with a rush and there are more coming in than can be sold to the regular trade. Some extra fine Halliday, Touset and Ivory mums are coming in at present.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Milford Parks has had an attack of appendicitis, but is now improving daily.

There will be a meeting of greenhouse vegetable growers held in this city the last of this month. Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Pennsylvania will be represented. An organization will be formed to better their interests.

Fred W. Griffin has been showing some attractive windows of late.

George Heintz, of Toledo, spent a few days in Cleveland, visiting friends. He has just returned from a health-seeking trip abroad, which no doubt has done him a world of good, for he surely looks it.

Harry Jones, of the J. M. Gasser Co., entertained some close friends at cards on Monday evening, and also demonstrated the ability of a bachelor to prepare and serve a most appetizing lunch. A most enjoyable evening was spent. B.

AZALEAS

New Importations==Now Ready

If you have not already secured all the Azaleas that you want for Christmas forcing or later, and Easter flowering, you will find it to your advantage to purchase at once, while the plants can be forwarded by freight, thus saving in cost of transportation, as later, after cold weather, plants will have to be shipped by express, and as Azaleas are heavy, it is to your advantage to order them now and have them shipped while they can travel safely by freight. Besides this, you can secure the varieties wanted before assortments are broken. Plants are in fine shape, well budded, and we offer the best commercial varieties, as follows:

Apollo, Bernard Andreas Alba, Deutsche Perle, Empress of India, Mme Jos. Vervaene, Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Mrs. Petrick, Niobe, Paul Weber, Prof. Wolters, Simon Mardner, and Vervaeneana.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

The Arkansas Floral Society, which is giving the annual exhibition here, is receiving the support of both the society element and the newspapers. With such backing the show cannot fail to be a success. Liberal premiums are offered and Paul M. Paley, who is the superintendent of the show, has received assurances which indicate an exhibition that will be quite a step in advance of the successful show of last year. The publicity given by the newspapers and the interest taken by society ladies insures a large attendance.

This will be considerably the largest exhibition held in the southwest this year. It is hoped to obtain the co-operation of the Society of Southern Florists and the attendance of a large number of those in the trade from the south and west. The dates of the show are November 11 to 13.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Last week was one which really marks a period in the history of the flower business in Cincinnati. I doubt whether ever before there were so many flowers in this market. The wholesale houses were packed with them and there was no business to speak of. The retail stores reported nothing doing and the wholesale houses just about gave away the stock in order to make room for that which was sure to come in the next morning. Even the carnation, which up to this time has been scarce, suddenly arrived by the thousands and became a drug. Mums and roses were just the same as carnations and, in fact, every variety of flower in season suffered in like manner.

To a certain extent there was a clean-up on Saturday, but by far the greater portion of the stock found its way to the dump. This week business is still quiet, but there is not so much stock coming in and, as the weather has turned much cooler, it is to be hoped that the cut has been checked so that the market can recover to something like a normal state. Beauties show a decided inclination to go off crop and it would be a good thing if they would do so. The first Bonnaffon of the season arrived October 26 and, true to the reputation of this great mum, the entire shipment sold out at a good figure.

Various Notes.

L. H. Kyrk made a hurried trip to Detroit last week, where he had been summoned to appear before the Federal grand jury as a witness in a post-office case.

A Few Among Dozens of Testimonials Lately Received:

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann,
Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Sir: The ferns came in safety and were the cleanest, finest stock I ever bought. I am greatly pleased and trust to be able to send you further orders.

Yours very truly,

J. W. McNEALLY.

Newton, Upper Falls, Mass., Oct. 18, '08.

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann,
1012 West Ontario St., Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Sir: Received plants October 20th shipped by you October 12th, in good condition, and was well pleased with them.

Respectfully yours,

H. ASHLEY.

New Bedford, Mass., Oct. 22, 1908.

We lead the country in Araucarias. Have been in the lead in the past; have it now and shall lead in the future.

We have houses full of choice Excelsa robusta compacta and Excelsa glauca; enough to supply the entire country.

Will you pay 50 per cent to 100 per cent more by buying from others who are not specialists? Hope not; the wise are on guard. We are going to sell all of them and without drummers. By jingo, we must sell them; an elephant for 40c, 50c and 60c; a jumbo for 75c to $1.00; and a holy terror in size for $1.25 to $1.50.

TAKE NOTICE!

Plants have grown considerably and are now fully 10 per cent to 20 per cent bigger than advertised below.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitmani and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in sunny houses (not white-washed), which will produce stiff fronds; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 tiers, 10 to 12 inches high, 40c; 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, 6-in. pots, 3 years old, 3 tiers, fine, beautiful plants, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, specimen plants; spring, 1907, importation; suitable for decorations, 5 to 6 years old, 7-in. pots, 5 tiers, 25, 30, 35 to 40 inches high, same in width, beautiful plants, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 to $4.00 each.

Boston and Scottii ferns, 5-in., 30c to 35c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, 75c to $1.00. Scottii, 8 to 9-in. pans, made-up of 3 plants, 75c to $1.00 per pan.

Plersoni, 6-in., 35c, 40c and 50c.

Whitmani, 4-in., 20c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, made up or as big as a bushel basket, only $1.00, worth $1.50; 8-in. pans, three large plants in a pan, 75c; 9-in. pans, 3 large plants in a pan, $1.00. We have a big stock of these varieties and they are pot, not bench, grown. Amerpohlii, 5-in., 30c, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 to 6 good leaves, 5½ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 20 inches high, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, a large one, about 40 inches high, in the center, surrounded by three smaller ones, $4.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 86 inches high, $2.00; specimen, 7-in., 40 to 50 inches high, $2.50 to $3.00; 6-in., 30 inches high, $1.50; 6-in., 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00; 6-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in., 50c; 4-in. pots, 35c.

Cocos Weddelliana, bushy plants, 3-in., 15c, 18c and 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, 2½-in., $4.00 per 100. A big stock, best assortment.

Cycas Revoluta, or Sago Palm, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 5 to 20 leaves to a plant, 10c per leaf.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, three plants in a pot, ready for 5-in., 30c.

Ficus Elastica, rubbers, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus, 2½-in., $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100; 4-in., $10.00 per 100.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. In bloom now and will be up to Christmas. Of this so much admired Christmas novelty we have a big house full, raised from leaf cuttings only, large bushy plants, free of any disease, 5-in. pots, 40c; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00; 7 to 8-in. pots, $1.50 to $2.00 each. The $1.00 size is as big as the 7-in and 8-in. size.

Begonia, newest type of improved Erfordii, an immense bloomer for Christmas and all winter through, 2-in. pots, $5.00 per 100; 4-in. pots, 15c.

Primula Sinensis and Obconica, best improved strain, 4-in. pots, $10.00 per 100, or 10c each. Sinensis, 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown. Remember, only pot-grown. Can successfully be forced for Easter blooming, nicely branched, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c to 50c.

Azalea Indica have just arrived, raised under contract, from our regular Azalea grower in Ghent, Belgium. Have an immense stock of the choicest, full of buds, with all their foliage, etc.

Azalea Indica. Start in now to force Azalea Indica for Christmas blooming. Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner, Vervaeana, Apollo, Hexe and Red Petrick, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Christmas varieties can also be kept for Easter. Azaleas for Easter Forcing. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Empress of India, Professeur Wolters, Apollo, De Schryveriana, Niobe, Andre alba and others, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The continued mild weather of last week helped to keep the market well supplied with roses, lilies and mums. The early varieties of the latter are mostly gone, and the fancy and midseason varieties now reign. Now that mums are plentiful, everything seems likewise, as usual, and this had a tendency to weaken prices all around. While carnations are only equal to the demand, they, too, came down in price. On Friday evening the much looked for rain came and it has been cool and cloudy, with occasional rains, up to Monday evening. These conditions, no doubt, will shorten the supply for some time, anyhow.

The funerals of the late millionaire lumber dealer, J. Schroeder, and the former city official, P. Muenzberg, created quite a demand for stock. The west side florists, who were chiefly benefited, had no trouble to fill the orders, as there was plenty of stock.

Various Notes.

W. A. Kennedy, of the C. C. Poll-worth Co., escorted his mother home to New York, and while he is down east he will visit some of the large growers.

M. Moore, who is associated with Mrs. Ennis in the retail flower business and is the democratic candidate for state senator, fourth district, had a narrow escape recently, as an automobile containing him and five others was ditched near North Milwaukee. They were running at a low speed; consequently no one was seriously injured.

Every member should attend the regular monthly meeting next Thursday, November 5, as important business is on hand. E. O.

A fire at the greenhouses of William Getzien is reported to have caused a loss of $7,000.

Girvin's Handy Cutter

Mr. Florist, if you once get one of these cutters on your finger you will never be without it for many times the price. Just the thing for cutting your carnations, sweet peas, asters, melons, grapes, etc. Why be bothered with a knife or follow the old way of breaking your flowers when a Handy Cutter will do the work better and save you money and time? Don't continue breaking your carnations and thus ruin hundreds of young shoots daily, simply because a knife is unhandy to work with, but try a Handy Cutter. If you are not entirely satisfied with it you can return it and have your money refunded. These cutters are made of spring brass, highly nickel-plated, and contain a removable blade.

Gardening for Profit.

By PETER HENDERSON. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.

By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

THE COAL TRADE.

The coal trade is still unseasonably quiet, but producers claim that the demand must shortly expand materially. Consumers have been buying strictly from hand to mouth all through the summer, but such a policy is fraught with danger as winter approaches, since snow storms are apt to seriously interfere with deliveries. The normal output of bituminous coal in the United States is 1,000,000 tons every working day. Instead of running full time and allowing stocks to pile up to an enormous extent, producers have merely mined in the same ratio as the consumption. The working week has been reduced by several large companies to four or five days, and there have been frequent idle days not reported by the newspapers. The increase in consumption, which cannot be far distant, means that there will be a rush for coal. In the meantime prices are not being reduced, at least openly, and perhaps not to any extent privately.

INSUFFICIENT PIPING.

I should like to know how much pipe I need to heat my greenhouses. There are two houses, each 18x110 and ten feet high to the ridge. In one of the houses

PIPING IN OHIO.

My greenhouse is 12x60, and seven feet and a half high to the ridge. The boiler will be placed in a cellar adjoining the north end. The cellar is 12x12, with a workroom above it. I expected to get a Wilks boiler, 20x36, and to run a 2-inch flow from the boiler along the ridge, returning with twelve 1¼-inch pipes, six under each bench. The expansion tank would be ten feet above the boiler, in the upper room. The house is intended for a general line of plants. Will the proposed piping be sufficient to heat to 60 degrees in zero weather?

A. O. N.

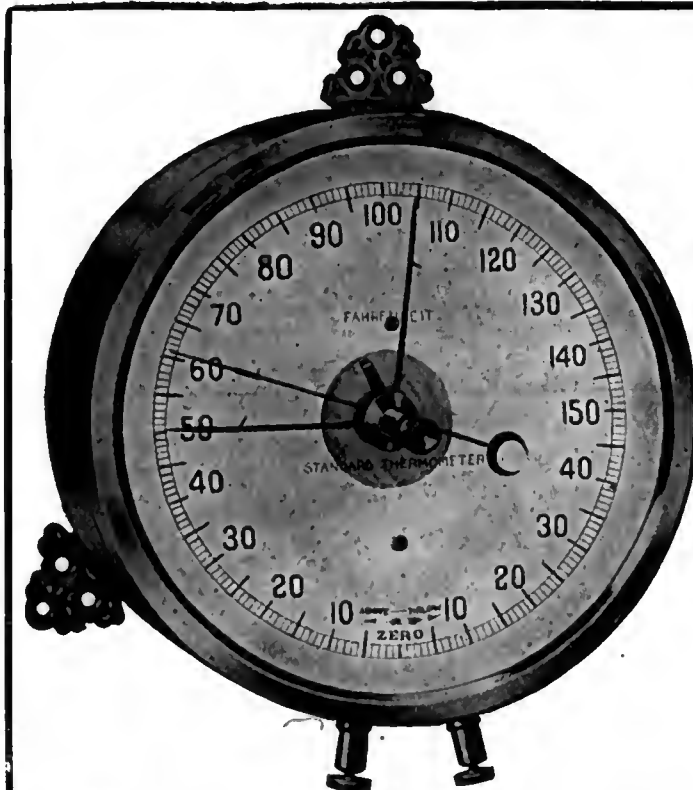

Yes, the piping you have planned should give you a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees during severe weather. Run the flow pipe from the boiler under the ridge of the house to the far end, and there use branches of 2-inch pipe to carry to the manifold supplying the six 1¼-inch pipes under each bench. Connect the expansion tank with the main return close to the boiler, and be sure it is several feet higher than the highest point in the flow pipe in the house. The highest point in the flow pipe should be at the far end of the house. At this point an air valve should be placed and tried at least twice each day, morning and evening, during the time the plant is in operation.

L. C. C.

A VARIETY OF ESTIMATES.

A florist here, in Missouri, is about to build a greenhouse, 30x96, with 5-foot concrete walls. He was thinking of making it into two 15-foot spans. He has estimates from a local plumber and the junk man, as follows: A tubular boiler, forty-eight inches by sixteen feet; eight runs of 4-inch pipe, consisting of four flows and four returns. He says he intends to carry forty pounds of steam pressure and use oil at 80 cents per barrel.

I have argued for a single house and have figured as follows for 70 degrees above outside air: For hot water, 180 degrees at the boiler—three 2-inch flows and eighteen 1½-inch returns. For five pounds of steam—two 2½-inch flows and fourteen 1½-inch returns. For ten pounds of steam—two 2-inch flows and ten 1½-inch returns. The house is partly protected, but not much.

Is it better to place the pipes overhead or near the ground? With the heat generators, as the Honeywell or the Kroeschell, does the elevation of the expansion tank still retain its relation to pressure, as with the open system? H. G. M.

My personal preference, in such a case as this, is for the one large, even-span house. There is a decided saving in cost of construction. There is a considerably larger volume of confined air, which is a decided advantage in sections where outside temperatures sometimes change quickly.

This plant can be satisfactorily heated with either steam or hot water. If I were to use hot water, I would use a single 3-inch flow pipe and sixteen 2-inch returns. If I were to use steam, I would install one 2-inch flow pipe and twenty 1½-inch returns. Your calculations for the size of pipe noted are very nearly what I would advocate, if I believed in 1½-inch pipe for hot water in long runs. As I figure the case, for hot water one 3-inch flow and twenty-one 1½-inch pipes would be required; for five pounds of steam one 2-inch flow and sixteen 1½-inch returns, and for ten pounds of steam one 2-inch flow and thirteen 1½-

Economy In Fuel, With Safety

This is the assurance which comes to the florist who uses a Capitol Boiler in his greenhouse.

Capitol Boilers require less fuel, less personal attention, and are unsurpassed in heating efficiency.

Capitol Boilers are safe from explosion—they simply cannot explode, because they are made of cast iron.

In Capitol Boilers the expansion and contraction is taken care of by means of divided sections. Each section is in itself a small boiler, with its own internal circulation. These sections (or small boilers) are connected directly with the header, making the entire boiler a combination of many small boilers each capable of independent action. Each section makes its own steam and no matter how great the strain on any one section, it does not impart itself to the balance of the boiler, because of the individual sectional connection.

No other make of boiler presents so much of practical value to the florist as does the Capitol. Catalogue, prices and all information mailed direct from any of our branches.

inch returns. The elevation of the expansion tank determines in all cases the pressure on the system, unless one is using the direct pressure from city mains. In modern hot water heating the expansion tank, connected with the main return near the boiler, acts merely as balance for the system, which for all practical purposes is a closed system. The old open system is seldom seen in plants installed nowadays. L. C. C.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

The city is smoky again from the raging forest fires. Everybody is praying for rain. This has been an unusual year for Erie in many respects.

The chrysanthemum season is at hand and the floral stores present a beautiful appearance, decorated with the gorgeous fall flowers. Yellow mums are in great demand here; the supply does not seem to be equal to the demand. Violets are seen in small quantities, both single and double. The Amerpohlii fern is fast becoming a general favorite here; when well grown it is a "feast to the eye."

Summer visitors who had come here to seek the cooling breezes of Lake Erie are now returning to the metropolis again.

Various Notes.

Mrs. M. E. Caldwell, of Corry, Pa., was in the city this week. She was buying stock for her greenhouses.

Fred Wagner, teamster for Baur Floral Co., met with a painful accident October 20. He lost control of the frightened horses and was dragged several squares. While his injuries are painful, they are not thought to be serious.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Last week was decidedly dull. There was little demand for stock of any kind, except here and there a stray funeral. Roses and carnations are plentiful, and of good quality. Lilies have been scarce. The weather was unfavorable the latter part of the week, being cold and rainy.

Various Notes.

Growers in Minneapolis think well of the new rose, White Killarney, and a number of them have put in a large stock of it.

E. Fancourt, representing the Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, was in town last week, soliciting orders for florists' supplies, and also selling stock of the new rose, White Killarney. He is also making a specialty of new and fancy ribbons to match the Killarney, which is such a good seller in the east.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some fine blooms from its new roses, which are expected to appear on the market the coming season. This firm is also cutting some good single violets.

Will Bros. have a fine house of chrysanthemums, from which they are now cutting a large crop.

Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouse is cutting some fine Monrovia, which are selling at the good price of $4 per dozen.

The Sunshine Florist has moved to a location on Hennepin avenue, in larger quarters, and is prepared to do better business than ever. M. E. M.

GREELEY, COLO.—A $5,000 greenhouse is in process of erection at the State Normal School, to be the central feature of an elaborate plan of landscape gardening. It is situated in the rear of the Normal building, and a broad walk runs from the Normal through the greenhouse and the gardens out to Nineteenth street. Masses of shrubbery and beautiful flower beds on each side will complete the effect.

About Its Erection

Taken side by side, with conditions equal, the U-Bar house can be erected with less trouble and greatest speed. Look at a U-Bar house and it is plain enough why—rafter and roof bars combined in one—the entire frame reduced to a mere web—no complicated fittings to bolt up—one-third less glazing to do because the glass is spaced one-third wider—simply straight away work from start to finish. If yours is a case where time counts and where greatest endurance and highest productiveness are requirements, then send for a catalog and get in immediate touch with us.

The ideal construction for private estates, parks, public institutions and florists' showrooms.

OMAHA.

Orchids and Omaha will be synonymous at the first national flower show to be given by the American Society of Florists at Chicago, November 6 to 14, and then the Omahans will try to arrange for a flower show and meeting of the florists in Omaha next year.

For some time Hess & Swoboda have been furnishing orchids for Chicago trade, and other florists have recently taken up the culture of these flowers, until Omaha now prides herself on being an orchid market as well as a grain market and packing center.

L. Henderson, president of the local florists' club, and J. H. Hadkinson, secretary, will attend the Chicago show and take an exhibit of flowers, as will also representatives of the Hess & Swoboda firm, which is to furnish a large share of the orchids.

Mr. Hadkinson has had charge of many flower shows and displays in St. Louis, New Orleans, Chicago and elsewhere. He is one of the original flower show men and will go to Chicago with the idea of promoting a flower show for Omaha next year.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

"Mum's the word" with everybody. Stock is plentiful, especially in white. Trade has been quiet and this accounts for the piling up of stock. Funeral work moves most of the white flowers. Carnations are still short in stem and do not bring a good price. A little outdoor stock is still on the market, but not enough to hurt the other sales. The weather is still mild and few frosts have occurred so far.

Various Notes.

The last meeting prior to the mum show to be held in Buffalo was held a few days ago at C. T. Guenther's, at Hamburg. Final arrangements were made. The affair is to be held at the Iroquois hotel. A banquet will follow for the members in the evening. The club expects all the members to turn out, for much good stock will be on exhibition and everybody will be well taken care of.

Bulb planting has started in full swing and a lot of work is being done.

Charles Sandiford has grown a fine lot of pot mums for the show. He also has a fine lot of orchids in bloom.

Joe Striet, grower for S. A. Anderson, has his begonias in fine shape and will send a sample of his stock to the Chicago show. R. A. S.

SIZE 3x6 Ft., 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ THICK—GLAZED

With 6-in. Glass—Blind Mortised—Tight Joints—Bars Firmly Fastened on Bottom Rail—Primed with Pure Linseed Oil—Absolutely the Best on the Market.

We are the largest makers of Hot Bed Sash in America. Our Florists' Special is a better made and higher grade Hot Bed Sash than dealers retail for double our price. If a thorough examination does not prove this a fact, ship them back at our expense.

10,000 Florists' Hot Bed Sash ready to ship! Quality, safe delivery and satisfaction guaranteed. These sash are made of genuine Louisiana Cypress, the best material known for the purpose. Blind-mortised, tight fitting joints, pure linseed oil priming, scientific construction and the use of best quality of putty and plenty of points, insure years of satisfactory service. We pack in paper and crate carefully. We replace any glass broken in shipment.

45 overlapping lights give perfect drainage, prevent leaks and double the durability and strength of the sash. The lights overlap generously, making 80 points of reinforcement. We build the strongest sash on the market—yet make them up in such enormous quantities that we can undersell everybody.

MOISTURE-PROOF JOINTS—Will not ROT or SPREAD.

Every florist knows that moisture attacks ordinary hot-bed sash in the joints and quickly rots them out. We guard against rotting by blind mortising and making solid, tight, moisture-proof joints. No "come apart" to Gordon-Van Tine Sash—no trouble with rotting joints.

Order Now at the Cut Prices. We are going to sell this special run of 10,000 sash at prices named here. Get your order in at the Cut Prices.

No matter how large the order, we will ship AT ONCE from our big reserve stock. Write for grand free Catalog of Millwork, Sash, Doors, Lumber, Roofing. Over 5000 Bargains in Building Material, 50 per cent below retail dealers' prices. Write today for Free Catalog.

The National Flower Show

November 6 the great show will open in the Coliseum building at Chicago and if you can possibly get away you should by all means come and attend this exhibition. You will profit by doing so, as the exhibits are coming from all parts of the country and from Europe and it will be the biggest show of the kind ever held. You can't afford to miss this show.

We want to meet all of our customers and friends at the show and our Mr. N. J. Rupp will be on hand at the hall to greet you—ask for him when you reach the building and we will do our best to make you welcome.

You are also cordially invited to visit our factory when in the city and see how perfect greenhouse material is made. We shall be pleased to show you the plant at any time.

Don't forget the date, November 6th to 14th, and don't fail to come.

ADVERTISING

HOW KRAMER LOOKS AT IT.

The Editor's Foreword.

F. H. Kramer, who, by the way, is president of the Washington Florists' Club, is original in all that he undertakes. Whatever he does is done in a large way—including advertising. He has made a fine success in his business—with a liberal use of printers' ink—developing it along lines in keeping with the modern tendency toward large volume at moderate prices, rather than along the lines followed by the retailers who have catered only to the wealthy.

Believing that the increase in production tends away from the old methods of marketing cut flowers and plants, the REVIEW asked Mr. Kramer for his views on the subject of the department store method of advertising for a retail florist. Here is his reply:

Eggs Under the Hen.

In answer to your question, "Does my advertising pay?" I want to ask if you suppose for an instant that I am constantly pulling off double-page, full-page and half-page ads just to satisfy my vanity by seeing my name in print, or out of a spirit of charity for needy newspapers? No! Sir! Not for me. I'm after the dollars.

A man who whispers down a well,
About the goods he has to sell,
Will not reap the golden, gleaming dollars,
As one who climbs a tree and hollers.

When I was down at the foot of life's ladder I used to put eggs under a setting hen. Not to tickle her vanity, but to produce more chickens.

I applied the setting hen idea to advertising. Placed hundreds of dollars in printers' ink, and hatched thousands.

Newspaper advertising is the kind for retail returns. The newspaper—it's the one place people go every day.

Now, don't let me mislead you to thinking that advertising is a magic way of making money.

You can't produce healthy results from poor advertising any quicker than you can hatch healthy chickens from bad eggs.

Must Pick Out a Good Hen.

I try to exercise the same great care in selecting mediums and advertising copy as I formerly used with hens and eggs.

While there are four "best" newspapers in Washington, I use only one—"the best."

Some people think it mighty hard to determine which medium is the one for them to use after several clever solicitors, representing as many propositions, get through with them.

I go further than the little piece each of these copy rushers speaks—right to the newspaper itself.

You can judge the character of a newspaper's circulation best by examining its columns.

I pick the Times in Washington as being the one paper reaching the most of the kind of people I want to do business with.

A Big Ad in the Best Paper.

No doubt there are some would-be patrons reading the other papers, but not in sufficient number to warrant the cost of advertising.

Better a big, strong, attractive ad in

The Question of Copy.

In raising chickens, I always used to set a hen on her own eggs. In that way her actual laying and hatching worth were quickest realized.

This idea I applied to advertising—made the advertising hen (the newspaper) set on her own eggs.

I did this by using advertisements prepared by the newspaper's own "copy" department.

I argued with myself this way: "Kramer, you know flowers as a florist—newspaper man can't tell you anything about how to grow stock. Now, why shouldn't a man who has made the preparation of advertising copy his life work be able to produce better-pulling advertisements than you could? If the copy man is onto his job, he knows how to touch the responsive chord in the readers of his paper as effectively as you know how to force flowers. Try out such

THE WASHINGTON TIMES, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1908.

"EVERY FLOWER A STORY UNFOLDS"

The fairest flowers that bloom in Washington owe their beautiful existence to the untiring energy and patience of F. H. Kramer. Each one tells a story in its own original way of the workings of a sympathetic brain, delicately attuned to beauty, with an analytical ability of high degree working with the one object in view—floral perfection.

Associated with this past master of the Art of Floriculture is one of the largest and most efficient staffs of expert Floriculturists. Each a specialist in his line, devoting his entire time to the various stages of development of certain specimens. The result is advancement in sizes and shades of flowers unequalled by other florists. This same spirit invades the display rooms where the aid of enthusiastic salespersons who "know flowers" is at the service of purchasers undecided as to what is best for their particular requirements.

The New Yellow Rose

"KRAMER'S PET"

A marvel of shade and shape

Another triumph added to a long and ever-increasing list of floral accomplishments: A delicately colored and daintily proportioned bloom, well worthy the time and energy Mr. Kramer has spent in bringing to a point of realization what has long been an unaccomplished inspiration among noted horticulturists of both hemispheres. What others have sought after in vain, Washington's foremost florist has attained—a perfect Yellow Rose. This rose is of a wonderfully rich, dark yellow, with long, stately petals nestling closely together. The outer petals are of a lighter shade of yellow, but toward the center of the flower the hue becomes darker.

The Largest and Most Varied Assortment of Growing and Cut Flowers in Washington

Rare specimens are always to be found at KRAMER'S, in and out of season. Growing plants are so nurtured as to insure the best obtainable results when transplanted, while the cut flowers are always freshly clipped, and have been forced with the idea of producing blooms that will last longest after cutting. Because Kramer "Grows His Own Flowers," and the immensity of his business, enables purchasing of him at prices that mean a considerable saving. The same careful attention is given all orders, whether large or small.

Your inspection is invited at all times.

the best paper—the one that reaches the most of your kind of people—than a little, weak ad—that you have to hunt for, yourself—in all four "best" papers.

Anyway, in every town, and in every line, the one really best paper pretty well covers the field. You don't miss many buyers by concentrating your fire.

a copy man, and keep your own fingers out of his pie."

So I sent for the Times copy man.

In came a little fellow so demure he couldn't sell dollar-bills at a quarter apiece, and I began to think I had better write my own copy if I wanted any red blood and money-pulling vigor in it.

However, I pulled up a chair for the chap with the delicate air and started in to tell him in monotone what was wanted.

How Kramer Got Started.

Out came his pencil and paper, and the first words the diminutive one uttered came out clean and sharp: "Now, Mr. Kramer, let's have it—your whole idea—don't be afraid to repeat—talk as fast as you like."

After recovering from my first astonishment at the fellow's change of front, I started in and unburdened the disjointed thoughts that had been crowding my mind for weeks. How that chap got half that was said beats me. "Short-hand," he called it.

After I had finished he cross-examined me—wanted to know reasons for this, reasons for that—plied me with question after question.

Next day he came around with the copy.

The following day we used it.

Since then my advertising has been appearing in the Washington Times regularly.

Results? Well, if you want results from retail advertising, make the hen set on her own eggs. If she don't produce, get a new hen.

This isn't any part of my story, but the fact is the Times copy department, a new factor in Washington newspaperdom, is building up advertising columns as bright and entertaining as the news with which they serve their readers every day. It's the biggest thing any newspaper ever did for its advertisers; a service given complimentary—and, by the way, this is a suggestion for every progressive florist.

Programs Don't Pay.

I have at times used whole pages in theater programs, offering inducements to equal the value of the purchase, with no results; also in programs for church fairs, bazaars, and entertainments of all kinds, with practically no results, only favoring the solicitor, who may happen to be a customer.

I know all florists are liberal in donating, and I am a firm believer in liberality; it pays.

I also believe that if, for instance, your payroll in your store is $100 per week, your advertising expenditure should equal that amount.

I know from personal experience that I get results, and I furthermore believe in advertising something that people want, when they want it, and at a price that will make your ad attractive.

I also believe in having up-to-date, catchy copy—no stock stuff, but something original, and change it with every ad.

My advice is, if you advertise, don't look for the best results at once, but keep at it—don't get cold feet.

It will only take patience and time, but it will come.

A Real Palm Sale.

I always have a palm sale every fall. I don't merely advertise it a palm sale, but make it a palm sale.

For instance, I use a 4-inch kentia or areca, which I sell practically at cost, and advertise them strongly, even with signs that cover the whole of my delivery wagons.

By doing so I get results, of course, with a loss of several hundred dollars and no profit on the palms.

But the public knows I had a palm sale!

Why?

Because I gave a real bargain, but where I realize is on the future trade.

Never be afraid to use bait, and use it freely.

Fish don't bite all the time, and when they don't, you shouldn't be afraid to use fresh bait.

Free Rose Plants a Hit.

The latter part of last June I had a surplus of about 20,000 rose plants left over. I could not sell them, so I inserted a small ad to read like this:

Free—10,000 rose bushes—one to each person.

Imagine my surprise, the next morning, when I went to open my store, to find the place besieged by a mob.

In half an hour I was compelled to call for officers to keep the people in line. I was compelled to close my other two places of business and even called on my greenhouse force to help handle the crowd.

And by night we had given out over 16,000 plants!

The results were: that in my three places of business I did not take in a single cent that day—and it was the hardest day's work we ever did.

The question from everywhere was, "Did it pay?"

Why, yes! I think it did, not then, but since.

TIME TO FLOWER BULBS.

Will you kindly tell me the shortest time in which I can safely depend on getting Duc Van Thol tulips and Roman hyacinths into flower after being brought to the light? My Christmas bulbs were late in arriving and I wish them to root in the dark as long as possible. Please tell me how long it will take me to get them into flower.

S. K.

Presuming that your bulbs are well rooted in the flats and have growths two to three inches in length, they will be all right for forcing. The hyacinths will come into bloom in about three weeks in a temperature of 60 degrees. The Duc Van Thol tulips, if wanted for Christmas, should be housed on or about De-

SALVIA LORD FAUNTLEROY.

Never having seen any advertisements of Salvia splendens Little Lord Fauntleroy, I have wondered whether it was as well known as it deserves to be. I think of all salvias, had I my choice, this one should be mine. Its perfectly globular shape and its dense habit of growth make it the ideal salvia for edging. It never exceeds two feet in height and grows naturally in a perfect globe. Although it does not flower quite so soon as the other varieties of salvias, I have found that if started a little earlier it is not far behind.

It does not come true from seed, but a few good plants lifted and planted in large pots or in a bench will give one all the stock he needs. Like all salvias, it should be planted in full sunshine. For formal planting in the grass it is as good as boxwood as regards form, with this advantage, that it needs no trimming and can be changed from year to year at nominal cost. ALFRED PEARCE.

OECHSLIN IS OPTIMISTIC.

If you live anywhere near Chicago and are feeling run down at the heel, and a little bit uncertain about the future, it will be worth a good deal more than the cost to run out to Frank Oechslin's, at West Adams and Forty-eighth avenue, and get a bit of inspiration. Business always is good at Oechslin's, because the stock is what people want—dollars are what Oechslin is after. It is not so much a question of how big a profit can be made on a plant, but how many can be sold, that determines whether or not Oechslin will grow it. He handles only the things that can be sold in quantity. Just now ferns are a large item, and chrysanthemum bush plants are more numerous than in other years, but Christmas blooming plants in all the staple varieties will soon pretty nearly monopolize attention. After that will come the Easter stock and bedding material—but the point is that Oechslin is optimistic.

"You see," said he, "September this year was better than a year ago. October, too, was good. We did more all summer than we ever did before and we look for a fine season. It's lucky we had such a good fall trade, else I don't know what we should have done when it came time to house the stock. You can see for yourself, the place is full."

And it is. There isn't an inch of vacant space unless it's where a batch of plants was taken off a bench by an order clerk, not five minutes before. Not only are the benches and frames full, but the Economy bracket on every post makes space for flats of young stock for next crop.

The place is spick and span throughout—always looks as if visitors were expected—and in fact there are not many hours of the day the proprietor or his chief assistant, James Hancock, have to themselves. There are about 65,000 feet of glass all told and it was only ten years ago October 15 that Mr. Oechslin started with little more than a determination to succeed.

You comment, as you pass along, that the stock looks fully as good as usual and he says: "Yes, we are pleased with it, especially as we had such a hard summer—hard on the stock under glass and terrible for the stuff in the field; we had to keep the sprinklers going night and day. But we came through all right and right now have a larger stock than ever. Sell it all? Sure thing!"

"You see, while business was good this summer (we advertised more than ever before and gained a lot of new trade), none of the retailers has stocked up heavily yet. If they are going to do anything at all this winter they will have to get stock. They'll be out to see us, never fear.

"You remember last Christmas? Nobody thought we would do anything—everybody scared. Well, people cut out the diamonds and costly stuff, and bought a nice plant for $5. It was the best ever for florists. Well, we'll see it again this year."

Just by way of preparation, Mr. Oechslin has two phones and has just put in two extensions so he can get to them quicker; also he has bought some new delivery wagons—seven of 'em now.

Geraniums

ROOTING THE CUTTINGS.

In propagating geraniums, I think it is a good plan to pick out short cuttings and lay them in the sun for several hours. I made some hundreds of cuttings in August and laid them for a whole day on the lawn, in the blazing sun. After that I put them straight into pots, gave them a good watering and then kept them pretty dry until they were rooted. From these very plants I am able to take some cuttings again, as they are from five to six inches tall. I have always believed that the roots of those struck in boxes get damaged too much while potting.

W. M.

GENERAL CULTURE.

I am not in the least surprised that C. W., whose communication on geraniums appeared in the REVIEW of October 15, did not find shade of any advantage in prevention of damping in geranium cuttings. In fact, shade should be avoided absolutely when caring for geraniums, no matter whether in the process of rooting or growing after being rooted.

After the plants are rooted it may be safely enough advised that the cooler they are kept the better the plants will be. By that is not meant that they should be subjected to a freezing temperature; everybody knows better than that.

I have never believed in or practiced what is known as sprinkling. Instead, when the plants are in need of water I let them have it in sufficient quantity, and no more until they get into a like condition again.

The plants should be kept in low houses and as near the glass as possible. All decayed foliage should be removed from the plants.

M.

TROUBLES IN PROPAGATING.

Though my experience in propagating geraniums dates only from the fall of 1907, it may be interesting and helpful to other beginners. My son, not then twenty years of age, had for several years been growing geraniums and other bedding plants in a small way—about 7,000 geraniums and several thousand other plants each year—and had good success in rooting the cuttings. He contracted typhoid fever in August, 1907, and died in September.

As I had paid little attention to the rooting of cuttings and had failed to get information from a paper that my son had been getting regularly, I was obliged to go on without knowledge of the best methods, and the result was that I lost 6,000 out of 7,000. Later I received some information on the subject and toward spring was succeeding well, rooting a high per cent.

This fall, August 1, we put in two lots of cuttings, one of zonal and one of scented geraniums. Of the zonals every one rooted well, and of the scented almost all. August 15 I went over the stock plants and broke some cuttings almost off, letting them hang about ten days. I then took off these cuttings, together with a lot of others that had not been previously broken. In 2,000 of these I lost not over fifty, and I saw no difference in their rooting. But my success, I think, was on account of the dry weather, which put the growth in better condition for rooting than was the case a year ago.

I put the cuttings in about three inches of sand, on a bed in the greenhouse, and keep the ground moist and shade a few days during the hottest part of the day, but never while the tops are wet from watering.

I know very little about this matter, but am anxious to learn all I can and would be glad to hear from others.

E. BUSHYAGER.

REPOTTING A LARGE PALM.

A customer brought a large palm, something on the order of a latania, but more slender, to be repotted. I cannot remember the name of it. It had been growing in the yard during the summer and had been thoroughly potbound, being in a 14-inch pot. We cut the roots some from the bottom, enough to get it into a 12-inch tub—Fibrotta ware—and sent it home. They placed it on the third floor, under a tin roof, in a room 50x120 feet, where the fresh air was not plentiful. There have only been two or three days when the sun was very hot and all the other plants were there with it, with no signs of decay on them.

My customer states that the girl only took a gallon of water for seven plants, none of them being in less than 9-inch pots. The palm tub was filled to the very top with soil, as we did not like to cut the roots more than was necessary, and she should have gone back and re-watered it in order to give it enough. They have had many palms and always have them around, but this is the first one to act so, and as it is a valuable palm, I feel badly about having a part in the trouble.

I meant to say that it began dying, the lower leaves first, and while the newest five leaves are still in fine condition, the rest are past all help. The leaves died at the outer edge first and then toward the center, where they have already turned a light yellow and are fading fast.

D. B.

It was a mistake to prune the roots of this palm and also to repot it at this season of the year, when the active growing season is past, and especially when the plant was to be subjected to such treatment as seems to have been given in this case. The cause of the trouble undoubtedly is the root pruning and lack of care, and from the description given it would seem doubtful if the plant will recover. The roots of a palm should not be cut away, except in the spring, and even then the plant needs extra care, in a warm and shaded greenhouse, for some time afterward to enable it to become re-established.

PLATEAU OF ROSES.

The accompanying illustration shows a plateau of roses, an arrangement so frequently used on the luncheon or dinner table. This was made by Charles Henry Fox, Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, who also employs it effectively on a sadder occasion. It is only necessary to add that but one variety of roses is used in any plateau. Either Bride, Kaiserin, Ivory or Killarney would be effective in such an arrangement.

PHIL.

SHOWER BOUQUETS.

Will you please give us a few brief directions how to make shower bouquets of lily of the valley, sweet peas or violets?

R. E. T.

After any of the finer or smaller flowers are made up into a shower bouquet, the general appearance is about the same—it is in the arranging or making up that the difference lies. Let us first consider lily of the valley, which is the most popular, as well as the flower best adapted for this purpose.

A medium size valley bouquet will require from 100 to 125 sprays, depending somewhat upon the fullness. This of course does not include those flowers to be used in connection with the shower of ribbon.

Before beginning work on the bouquet itself it would be wise to prepare the narrow ribbon for the shower, as this will not be so apt to wilt as the valley. It will take from twenty to fifty yards of ribbon to produce a nice, effective shower. You can use either the regular baby ribbon or, if a wider ribbon is wanted, use No. 1½ or No. 2 gauze or satin taffeta. The gauze ribbon makes up prettily. There are several ways of making up the shower of ribbon. One is to use the whole piece, the other to cut it into various lengths. In either case have someone handy at tying bows to tie little bow knots about seven inches to ten inches apart on the ribbon. If you want the effect of streamers, cut the ribbon into lengths varying from one to two feet, gather these pieces up at one end and hold them together with a rosette of the same ribbon and lay aside for future use.

Begin the making of the bouquet by wiring about three dozen of the flowers. This is best done with some straightened 18-inch pieces of No. 22 to No. 24 wire. Fasten a small leaf of the valley in with each spray or two of flowers, keeping the leaves well below the flowers. Care should be taken when two sprays are wired together that each spray shows.

Now take up a few of the wired sprays and start the bouquet. You will have to use some other green, preferably maidenhair fern or Asparagus plumosus, with the valley to hide the wires and make the whole more effective. Hold the flowers in one hand and with the other tie them into place. Arrange the flowers so that some will stand out beyond the others. As you draw near the finish of the bouquet, begin to use the unwired valley in with the wired. The stem or handle of the bouquet should be long and slender, otherwise it is awkward to hold a shower bouquet in the correct position.

Now, have some person hold the bouquet while you arrange the shower of ribbon which you have previously prepared. If you are using the whole piece of ribbon, then fasten one end somewhere in the center of the bouquet and let the loops of ribbon hang. It will not be necessary to tie each loop to the bouquet; just hang it over the flowers; tie only a few times. When you are working with the ribbon cut into lengths, fasten the rosette to one side of the bouquet and arrange the streamers loosely in between the flowers.

To further the shower effect you must now tie some valley or green, or some of each, in with the ribbon. This is done by loosening some of the little bows and sticking the flower spray into the loop; then draw the bow tight again.

The final step is to wind or cover the handle or stem of the bouquet with green foil or silk ribbon, or to slip over it one of the covers made for this purpose.

While it is not absolutely necessary to tie a large bow to the handle, it adds much to the appearance of the bouquet and really belongs there. This bow may be either gauze, satin or one of the scarfs made for this purpose. When using ribbon or gauze, use it quite wide, say No. 120 ribbon, or, if gauze, use from the 6-inch to 10-inch widths.

When a bouquet of this kind is finished it should appear as though a lot of valley were being strewn out of a cornucopia or horn.

If possible, it is advisable not to make the bouquet long before it is to be used, as the valley will wilt easily.

When packing it for delivery it is a good plan to lay a piece of tissue paper between the bouquet proper and the shower, to prevent them from becoming entangled.

In an early issue I will endeavor to give some aid in making up bouquets of sweet peas or violets.

A LONDON EXHIBITION.

The great horticultural show under the auspices of the Franco-British Exhibition in London at the beginning of October was notable on account of the grand displays of fruit and vegetables from English and French growers. Some of the collections were the most remarkable ever seen in London, notably a collection of almost all the known varieties of potatoes from Sutton & Sons, Reading, weighing about two tons, and a superb large exhibit of vegetables from Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris. The same firm also exhibited Primula obconica, improved, large flowered, including white, bright red, fringed and double flowers.

Cayeux & Le Clerc, Paris, put up an interesting collection of potatoes, as did also John K. King & Sons, Coggeshall, England. An interesting exhibit from Henri Guichard, Nantes, France, attracted the attention of visitors, containing as it did camellias in variety in all commercial sizes, pictures of health and full of flower buds.

Croux & Fils, Chatenay, one of the most noted firms in France for trained fruit trees in all shapes and sizes, were in the front rank with superbly grown apples and pears. Calville Blanche is a favorite apple with Parisians and I have seen it on sale in the shops in winter and early spring, fruits weighing about eight ounces, 2 francs each (about 40 cents American). They are a great delicacy on the dessert table, of fine flavor and remarkably handsome. At Croux & Fils' nurseries I have seen them in perfection.

BEE.

PLANTS FOR UNHEATED HOUSE.

I have built an addition to my greenhouse this fall, 9x50, with a wall between. It is even-span, eight feet to the ridge, and faces north. I shall not put heat in this winter, as I thought to use it as a sort of coldframe. Would lettuce and violets do anything there? My house I use for a general assortment. Are there any of the regular bedding plants that I could keep growing there? If so, please give me a list of what might be kept there with safety, in this Wisconsin climate.

L. C. P.

None of the more tender bedding plants would winter in an unheated house, but you might plant myosotis, pansies, double daisies, Canterbury bells, foxgloves, aubrietias and a variety of spring bedding stock and carry them over winter successfully. Cover the plants with dry leaves when the ground is firmly frozen. It will be necessary in case of very severe weather to use some mats or board shutters on the glass, removing these during mild spells and airing out on all favorable occasions. The covering over the plants can be removed safely about the end of February. We are afraid it would not pay to attempt to winter lettuce in this house in your climate.

Single violets would winter all right in such a house, if well covered with dry leaves. These will give you a heavy spring crop of flowers. Princess of Wales is the best variety to plant.

THE AUTUMN

EXHIBITIONS

MADISON, N. J.

The thirteenth annual show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society opened October 29, and the hoodoo seemed to be working overtime, for the weather was vile. However, the weather the second day was much better and the average attendance will figure up about as usual.

This show, as a whole, was the finest this progressive society has ever put up, and, considering that the weather was so bad, the quality of the chrysanthemums was a great surprise.

The finest vase in the show was the vase of the new chrysanthemum, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, a beautiful bronze variety, set up by Charles H. Totty. This variety has already been certificated by the C. S. A., on both the exhibition and commercial scale, and must be classed as one of the best of the year.

Other fine exhibits in mum novelties were: C. H. Totty, a magnificent bronzy red; Pockett's Crimson, the best thing in its color we ever saw; Mrs. Charles H. Totty, a beautiful pink; Pockett's Surprise, a splendid red, and Clara Wells, a beautiful incurved yellow.

James Fraser, superintendent for O. H. Kahn, Morristown, N. J., staged some wonderful flowers of W. Duckham and Clay Frick. This exhibitor took eight first prizes in mums and the vegetable prizes were all his. The new chrysanthemum, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, is named for his employer, and that the selection of the name was a popular one in this section goes without saying.

The prize for the largest flower in the show was awarded to A. Herrington for a splendid example of Lady Hopetoun.

The list of awards follows:

Chrysanthemums: Thirty-six flowers, six varieties, six of each—First, Mrs. D. Willis James, Madison, N. J.; second, James N. Jarvie, Montclair, N. J.

Eighteen flowers, six varieties, three of each—First, O. H. Kahn, Morristown, N. J.; second, D. H. McAlpin, Morristown, N. J.

Special prize offered by Dr. William A. Robbins, Madison, N. J.; twelve flowers, twelve varieties, in one vase—First, D. H. McAlpin; second, O. H. Kahn.

Special prize offered by the Madison Eagle, Madison, N. J.; ten flowers, yellow variety—First, O. H. Kahn; second, C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

Ten flowers, white variety—First, O. H. Kahn.

Special prizes offered by Stumpp & Walter Co.; ten flowers, pink variety—First, O. H. Kahn; second, Branford House, of Groton, Conn., Thomas W. Head superintendent.

Twenty-four distinct varieties, not to exceed twelve inches, to be shown in single vases—First, Charles H. Totty.

One vase of ten blooms of Miss Clay Frick, and one vase ten blooms William Duckham—Special prize, O. H. Kahn.

Special prize offered by Rickards Bros.; twelve flowers, twelve varieties, stem not to exceed twelve inches—First, Branford House; second, O. H. Kahn.

Six flowers, six varieties, stem not to exceed twelve inches—First, J. Crosby Brown, Orange, N. J.; second, Dr. Leslie D. Ward, Florham Park, N. J.

Six flowers, pink variety—First, F. H. Howes, Portchester, N. Y.; second, J. T. Pyle, Morristown, N. J.

Six flowers, white variety—First, J. Crosby Brown; second, Branford House.

Six flowers, yellow variety—First, Branford House; second, F. W. Howes.

Six flowers, any color, except pink, white or yellow—First, J. Crosby Brown; second, Dr. L. D. Ward.

One vase of flowers, with other foliage, arranged for effect—First, O. H. Kahn; second, George F. Stone, Morristown, N. J.

Pompon chrysanthemums, number of vases not to exceed ten—First, C. H. Totty; second, J. N. May, Summit, N. J.

Six vases, single flowers, six varieties—First, Mrs. George F. Stone; second, C. R. Hedden, Madison, N. J.

Roses: Eighteen American Beauties—First, L. A. Noe, Madison, N. J.; second, L. M. Noe, Madison, N. J.

Twelve American Beauties—First, L. A. Noe; second, L. A. Noe.

Twenty-five Brides—First, L. M. Noe; second, L. M. Noe; third, Florham Farms, Madison, N. J.

Twelve Brides—First, J. T. Wagner; second, L. A. Noe.

Twelve Richmonds—First, J. T. Wagner; second, L. M. Noe.

Twelve any other rose except American Beauty—First, W. G. Badgley, Chatham, N. J.; second, F. W. Howes.

Special prize offered by Burnett Bros.; six American Beauties—First, Florham Farms; second, J. J. Riker, Portchester, N. Y.

Special prize offered by Burnett Bros.; six roses, any variety except American Beauty—First, J. J. Riker; second, F. W. Howes.

Six Richmonds—First, J. J. Riker; second, A. C. Van Gasbeek, Orange, N. J.

Carnations: Special single prize offered by Robert D. Foote, four vases of twenty-five blooms, four varieties, won by Mrs. D. Willis James.

Special prize offered by Vaughan's Seed Store, one vase, twenty-five blooms, any variety, any color—First, C. L. Bausher, Montclair; second, C. H. Hathaway, East Orange; third, J. J. Riker.

Special prize, offered by O. A. Miller, Orange, N. J.; one vase, twenty-five blooms, Imperial or Pink Imperial—First, Charles H. Totty.

Violets: One bunch, double blue, fifty flowers—First, J. Crosby Brown.

Two vases, two varieties, twelve blooms each—First, C. L. Bausher; second, A. R. Whitney, Morristown, N. J.

One bunch single blue, fifty flowers—First, C. H. Hathaway; second, J. Crosby Brown.

Groups: Special prize offered by the Pierson U-Bar Co.; chrysanthemum plants in flower, with foliage plants—First, D. H. McAlpin; second, A. R. Whitney.

Three specimen chrysanthemum plants in flower—First, J. Crosby Brown.

One specimen chrysanthemum plant in flower—One prize, won by J. Crosby Brown.

Twelve chrysanthemum plants in flower, twelve varieties, single stem—First, J. Crosby Brown; second, J. N. Jarvie.

Six chrysanthemum plants in flower, six varieties, single stem—First, A. R. Whitney; second, A. C. Van Gasbeek.

Specials were awarded as follows: To F. R. Pierson Co., certificate of merit for White Killarney rose and Nephrolepis Superbissima; to Robt. Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., certificates of merit for White Killarney and Duchess of Wellington, a fine orange yellow rose; to J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., certificate of merit for Carnation Georgia, a fine white.

LENOX, MASS.

The town hall, Lenox, proved entirely too small for the magnificent show held in it by the Lenox Horticultural Society October 28 and 29. All exhibits were of a superior quality and the arrangement of the same reflected the greatest credit on the committee in charge. Cut chrysanthemums were, as usual, the star feature, the display of these being magnificent, and it is doubtful if finer flowers will be staged at any show in America. Thomas Proctor, gardener to R. W. Patterson, carried off ten first prizes, all the newest varieties being included in his collection. Mr. Proctor will take some of his blooms to the national show, where they should cause a sensation if staged in good condition. Competition was keen in all the chrysanthemum classes, some of the other successful exhibitors being Chrysanthemum Mrs. O. H. Kahn.

A Glimpse of the Autumn Exhibition at Madison, N. J.

George H. Morgan, Girard Foster, E. Jenkins, gardener; W. D. Sloane, F. Heeremans, gardener; Mrs. John Sloane, A. J. Loveless, gardener; Charles Lanier, A. H. Wingett, gardener; Zenas Crane, Frederick G. Crane and Mrs. Robert Winthrop.

Some fine bush plants were staged, one beautiful specimen from Mrs. John E. Parsons carrying 300 flowers. For group of orchids there were some splendid exhibits, Cattleya labiata, Oncidium Rogersii and Vanda cærulea being much in evidence. A. J. Loveless led in this class, closely followed by F. Heeremans and Edwin Jenkins. F. Heeremans won the Lenox Horticultural Society's silver cup, which is to be won twice for possession, for the best 100-foot group of flowering and foliage plants, with a magnificent arrangement. He was closely followed by Edwin Jenkins. It is doubtful if any other show in America could duplicate these groups.

A. J. Loveless led with American Beauty roses. Other successful exhibitors in the rose classes included F. Heeremans, E. Jenkins, George H. Morgan and Thomas Proctor. There was a fine display of carnations. A. H. Wingett was well in the front with ferns and vegetables. The display of the latter was unusually fine.

The attendance of society people was large. Judges were: James Wheeler, Brookline, Mass.; William Turner, Oceanic, N. J.; W. H. Waite, Yonkers, N. Y., and Alexander McKenzie, Glencoe, L. I., N. Y. C.

ST. LOUIS.

The fall flower show of the St. Louis Horticultural Society opened in Armory hall November 3, with favorable weather and a large attendance. The awards in cut blooms were as follows:

Chrysanthemum blooms, best forty-eight, eight varieties, six blooms in a vase, E. G. Hill Co. first, with L. Africaine, Nellie Pockett, O. H. Broomhead, Glitter, Mary Ann Pockett, Mrs. Mary Mann, Mrs. R. Thorne and G. W. Pook; H. W. Buckbee second, with Miss May Seddon, Alice Byron, Charles Longley, Dakoma, Glitter, Mrs. H. W. Buckbee, W. R. Meredith and O. H. Broomhead; W. J. & M. S. Vesey third, with most of the above varieties. Fifty blooms, not less than ten varieties, short stem on mossed boards, E. G. Hill Co. first, H. W. Buckbee second, Elmer Smith third. Display of pompons, single varieties, E. G. Hill Co. first, Elmer Smith second.

Carnation blooms, fifty blooms, one or more varieties, J. F. Ammann first, with White Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress.

Cut roses, fifty blooms Richmond, W. J. and M. S. Vesey first.

Fifty blooms Killarney, J. F. Ammann first, W. J. and M. S. Vesey second.

Fifty any other pink, J. F. Ammann first, with Chateau; W. J. and M. S. Vesey second, with Maid.

Fifty white, J. F. Ammann first, with Bride; W. J. and M. S. Vesey second, with Bride.

Floral displays, hamper of mums, F. C. Weber first.

Decorated reception room, of mums, including mantel and table decoration also of mums, Fred C. Weber first, C. C. Sanders second, J. W. Dunford third.

The Shaw medal was taken by Henry Dreer with his new Nephrolepis Scholzei, crested Scottii fern. They also took the bronze S. A. F. medal and the society's silver medal with the same fern. W. A. Manda also competed for these medals with his new Nephrolepis exalta Alberta.

Peter Reinberg showed a fine vase of Marshall Field rose. A fine vase of the new carnation, O. P. Bassett, was on exhibition.

Visitors for the first day were: Mr. Mann, of E. G. Hill Co.; J. J. Karins, of H. A. Dreer Co.; B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co.; Henry Blixen, of J. F. Ammann's, Edwardsville; and A. S. Halstead, Belleville.

The city park department made a grand show of plants of all kinds and greatly helped to fill the large hall. Michel Plant & Bulb Co. also staged a fine group. There were no decorations of any kind in the hall. The election returns at night drew a large crowd and the committee is greatly pleased with the attendance the first day. Prospects seem good that the show will be a financial success.

TROUBLE WITH MIGNONETTE.

I have mignonette planted in a bench and it is about six to eight inches high. The lower leaves are turning red and the small green worms are troublesome. Will you kindly inform me what I can do to kill the worm and also to bring the plants back to a healthy condition, as I am afraid that I am going to lose all of them if something is not done immediately? My bench is in my carnation house. I only water as I think it needs it and have good drainage. I have dusted with tobacco, but the worms seem to grow fat on it.

J. H. S.

Either the soil conditions or extensive dryness at the root are the probable causes of the trouble. Your mignonette is in poor compost or one containing too much animal manure. A fertilizer might cause the plants to become stunted and turn red, but I am inclined to the opinion that the soil has been too dry. It may have looked moist on the surface, due to sprinkling with the hose, but might be dry underneath. Scratch over the soil among the plants and give the bench a thorough soaking until you can see the water running out at the bottom. Loosen the soil a little as it dries out and soak well each time you water. If the soil was poor, scatter a light dressing of well decayed barnyard manure on the surface as a mulch. The leachings will benefit your plants.

The green worms you refer to can only be held in check properly by hand picking. This is slow and somewhat tedious, but the only safe plan I know of. I have tried poisons without much effect. Tobacco dust is not a poison strong enough to hurt them. Nicotine extracts are good for controlling aphids, but of no value against these pests.

C. W.

VINCAS.

Would it be practical for me to buy now field-grown vincas, pot them and keep in a house cellar until starting my greenhouse in February? Or do you think I can buy as cheaply in February as now?

F. E. C.

—It is now getting late to secure any field-grown vincas and, while it would be possible to carry them even in a light cellar kept clear of freezing, it would be better for you to buy in February from one of the many advertisers who offer this plant in the REVIEW.

SOME NOVELTIES.

The new things are now far enough advanced to show their characteristics, and I believe the novelties for 1909 will be the best ever sent out at one time. The Charles H. Totty has been fully opened for a fortnight, but is keeping splendidly and is a sterling good variety in its color. It is a true Jap, with petals ten inches long, and has magnificent stem and foliage. The color is a light chestnut, with golden reverse to the petals, and everyone that has seen it so far is highly pleased with it. It has already received two certificates, one from the New York Florists' Club and the other from the Morris County Club.

Yellow Miller is a lovely yellow sport from Mrs. J. A. Miller, and I believe this will be the king-pin of the novelties for the year, for it is an exact counterpart of its parent in everything but color, and the only criticism one could ever make of Mrs. J. A. Miller was that the bronze color was too dull, as the stem is grand and the foliage meets the flower. Yellow Miller has already received two certificates and is in line for more.

Pockett's Crimson is the name of a seedling that I have had for trial from W. Wells, or at least it will eventually be the name of it. It is the grandest thing in crimsons we have ever had. The petals stand out straight, making a flower as large as a dinner plate, and the color is a magnificent, glowing crimson, just about the shade of the old G. W. Childs. The tips of the petals incurve just enough to show a golden tint, which makes a lovely combination of colors. I think I may truthfully say that Pockett's Crimson is the most striking variety that I have ever handled in my experience, and I only trust it will keep in condition till the Chicago show.

Mrs. O. H. Kahn is the name I have been asked to give to another Australian seedling that I have on trial, and in all probability it will be known by that cognomen. While the flower is not so large, it is perfect in shape and comes good on any bud, from early August to a terminal. Every one of my fifty plants is carrying a perfect flower. One of our largest commercial growers, on seeing it, predicted instant popularity for this kind as a commercial variety, for it does not seem to have a single fault and not a petal has damped in the heat. The color is a warm bronze, almost the shade of the little Brutus, with just a dash more rose color in it. The incurving shape will make it a keeper and shipper and I have great hopes of this variety.

Mrs. C. H. Totty is producing an enormous flower, almost the color of Lady Hopetoun, but with a narrower petal. The growth is not so strong as is usual with the Wells-Pockett types, but from present indications it will hold up the flower. It is a beautiful, artistic flower and, unless I mistake, will come in for favorable mention later.

Lillian Coppard, certificated for me by the New York Florists' Club, October 12, is a lovely chestnut scarlet. While it may be too early for exhibition, it is certainly the best early thing in its color that we have. The demand for it is comparatively limited and yet there is enough life in this flower to make it attractive to a flower buyer, as it lines up to just about a Victory carnation color. It is too early to hold for the shows, so must be classed as a commercial variety.

Rose Pockett is a seedling from Mrs. W. Knox and has the same aristocratic flower, with rather long necks on the early buds. The color is charming—old gold with the slightest suggestion of a flush of salmon. In a collection Rose Pockett will be most welcome, though it will not come in the commercial class.

Clara Wells is a true incurved or Chinese variety. So many of the incurved sorts are very small that it is pleasing to note one so large as this. The flower is finishing into a perfect ball. It is a splendid keeper and will be popular with a large circle of growers to whom size is second to keeping and shipping qualities. The color is a creamy bronze.

There are several other promising things that will be taken up later, notably Mrs. R. Thorne and Leslie Morrison, but we will wait and see how they develop. Meanwhile we will look over last year's lot. The gem of these would seem to be Mrs. Norman Davis. This is producing enormous flowers, pure white in color, and close behind it for size is Mary Mason. That some enormous flowers of Mary Mason will be shown is certain, for it is making good everywhere and is easy to grow. It is astonishing to see how Mrs. Norman Davis has developed from the small, insignificant stock it produces in early spring. Even small June-struck stock is producing good flowers.

W. M. Moir is making more necky

flowers than last year, though the flowers are large enough. It is suffering from the heat, also, and is far from being the flower it was last year.

Grace Whitney is finishing beautifully and one notes with pleasure that it does not damp. It should be set up in excellent condition at the different shows.

Mary Donnellan is another sterling good thing, as it gives no trouble and the magnificent color stamps it as a yellow of the first class. It is tall, but late grown stock produces fine flowers and it can be kept down.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

THE SHOWS.

The mum season is now at its height and it behooves every grower to visit the exhibitions. Take notebooks along and jot down names of new and desirable sorts. There are always some varieties which need discarding. It seems hard to part with some of these old friends, but the successful grower cannot afford to cling to the old sorts and fail to secure the good new things being offered each year. No grower can afford to be without a good batch of Golden Glow and Pacific, supreme among the earlies, while there are some desirable varieties among the midseason and late sorts which it will pay many growers to try.

In saving stock plants select the best and give them a light bench in a cold house, rather than stand them under the benches, as is too often done. To keep your stock true, be sure to mark the plants. It does not pay the average grower to handle too many varieties. What he wants are sorts which are good growers, have rigid stems, foliage well up to the flowers and are good shippers. Of course, where there is a good local trade, many varieties can be advantageously handled, which are handsome but are poor travelers.

SOME GOOD POMPONS.

Chicago depends largely on Frank Oechslin for mums in pots. He grows two or three houses of these each year; that's about all the trade calls for. But for a couple of years he has been doing a good business with pompons; these sell well. He has a set of three yellows that are fine: Zenobia, early; Savannah, midseason; Klondike, late. Alena is a soft pink that comes in with Zenobia and is fully as good a seller. A number of people obtained stock of these of Mr. Oechslin last season, so there were more of them in the market this year.

One fine thing about these pompons is that if the plants don't sell as expected, you can cut the flowers and get your money out of them on almost any dinner job.

KALB AND BERGMAN MUMS.

What is the difference between Bergman and Kalb chrysanthemums?

M. E. G.

Both these chrysanthemums are among the early whites, though superseded by later introductions in the collections of many chrysanthemum growers. W. H. T.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Pockett's Crimson, bright crimson with gold reverse, Japanese, exhibited by Charles H. Totty, scored 89 points exhibition scale.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Mrs. O. H. Kahn, mahogany with old gold reverse, Japanese incurved, exhibited by C. H. Totty, scored 87 points commercial and 85 points exhibition scale.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Charles H. Totty, bright mahogany, gold reverse, Japanese, exhibited by C. H. Totty, scored 88 points exhibition scale.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—Golden Harvest, bright golden yellow, Japanese, slightly incurved, exhibited by Gustavus A. Lotze, Glenburnie, Md., scored 90 points commercial and 85 points exhibition scale.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—Mary Warrick, light pink shading to white, Japanese reflexed, exhibited by Warrick Bros., Washington, Pa., scored 84 points commercial and 86 points exhibition scale.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Yellow sport of Miller, light yellow, Japanese, exhibited by A. Herrington, Madison, N. J., scored 86 points exhibition scale.

The name of the variety Golden Harvest will have to be changed, as there is already a variety by that name, sent out in 1895 by E. G. Hill Co.

Committee Appointed.

President Loveless has appointed the following committee for Boston: Elijah A. Wood, chairman; James Wheeler and William Nicholson. Ship flowers to Boston Flower Market, 1A Park avenue, care chairman.

Annual Meeting.

The annual business meeting of the society will be held November 7, at 3 p. m., in the hall of the Annex, at the Coliseum, Chicago. Anyone who is interested in the cultivation of the queen of autumn is cordially invited to attend this meeting. Any information in regard to the society will be cheerfully given by addressing the secretary.

DAVID FRASER, Sec'y.

NAME OF COLEUS.

I enclose a leaf of a large-leaved coleus, of which I should like to know the name. O. K.

The color was largely gone from the leaves on arrival. It is probable that the variety is Achievement, which is a large-leaved variety. This goes under other names, but is probably the sort you have.

BEGONIA FOLIAGE DYING.

Please let me know what the trouble is with my Begonia Storm Cloud. The leaves get dry on the ends and look as if something is eating the leaves, but I can't see anything. O. J. B.

Possibly a small leaf miner may be eating the tissue from the leaves. In this case, dip the leaves in a nicotine solution. Perhaps dryness at the root may be the cause of the trouble. There are so many causes of decay on the foliage that it is difficult to give a more explicit answer without examining the leaves or knowing more of cultural conditions.

RUST ON CARNATIONS.

I enclose some carnation leaves, which, as you will see, have some disease or an insect on them. Please tell me what it is and what to do with it.

C. M. H.

The specimens forwarded had a number of rust pustules on them, which, if allowed to develop, would burst open and free a brown, powdery mass, which contains the spores by which the disease is propagated.

We have had a number of inquiries regarding this disease this fall, and in the REVIEW of October 15 we gave full directions for handling this disease. If you are in the habit of saving the numbers, as many of our readers do, it will be an easy matter to look up things of this kind. You can find no better manual to guide you, in times of trouble, than the back numbers of the REVIEW. There are few subjects which are not treated at one time or another during a period of a year or two. In a majority of cases they are treated from an advisory standpoint, on account of trouble. You can always learn more about how to handle a plant when you hear some expert tell what to do in case of this trouble or that, than you can from hearing of its character and behavior. As long as things go along smoothly and the plants apparently take care of themselves, anyone can grow any given plant, but when diseases and insects make their appearance, then is when experience counts. The man who is most familiar with the numerous plant diseases and the best remedies therefor, is usually the most successful. So save your REVIEWS, which tell you how to handle plant diseases.

NITRATE OF SODA.

Is nitrate of soda any better than liquid manure for carnations? Please tell how practical growers use it.

P. W. M.

Your query is a broad one and any answer given in reply must necessarily be more or less qualified. Whether nitrate of soda is better than liquid manure (and I assume you mean cattle manure) will largely depend on the condition of your plants. Under certain conditions your plants may need a few doses of nitrogen, which is the chief element contained in nitrate of soda, and in that case it would be the proper thing to use.

The three elements which go to make a perfect plant food are nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, and it depends on the nature of your crop, and the texture of your soil (which latter point will be shown by the action of your plants) as to what proportion is needed of each of these elements in addition to what the soil contains. Growers of mums and other plants who depend largely on the use of chemicals for feeding, get these elements from nitrate of soda, muriate of potash and bone-meal. The latter is sprinkled on, or mixed with the soil, while the first two are applied in liquid form. Other chemical compositions are also made use of to give a change of diet, but in the main those I have mentioned are the three employed for general feeding.

No experienced feeder would think of using the nitrate of soda extensively alone, without using the others, too. Nitrogen produces largeness of growth and size of flower, but when given in excess it will cause softness and flabbiness. For texture you want the potash, and so you see the different elements must be nicely balanced in order to get the best results.

The usual amount which is considered safe is one pound to fifty gallons of water, of those applied in liquid form, while of the bone-meal we consider that one pound of bone applied in dry form and in two or three doses is enough for ten square feet of bench space for one season of carnations. How often the liquid forms should be applied must depend on the crop, its condition and the season.

Carnations should not be fed highly until after the turn of the new year, but it would be impossible to give expert advice along this line without knowing the local conditions. Ordinarily I would begin with half-strength, once in two weeks or so, and notice the effect before giving any more. Then be guided by the results.

Cattle manure seems to combine in almost perfect proportion all the elements required by most plants and it is by all means the safest thing for the novice to use. By the addition of bone-meal and wood-ashes he can usually make out well and without endangering his crop in the least. These high-strung chemicals are safe only in the hands of the expert, whose trained eye is quick to detect any discord between the plant and its diet. My advice to you would be to stick to the old, safe and reliable, or to use the others on a small quantity of your stock only.

EASTER AND MEMORIAL DAY.

Will pinks set out during October bloom for Easter and Memorial day? Also, if I start sweet peas now, can I get them in bloom for Easter? How shall I proceed?

A. E. N.

Carnations planted in October should give you a heavy crop at both Easter and Memorial day. It was rather late for benching them, but if the plants were not injured by early frost they should give a good account of themselves. They should also give you some blooms for Christmas. A night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees should be kept, although certain varieties do better 2 degrees warmer. The Lawson and Enchantress varieties should have the coolest end of the house.

Sweet peas sown now will bloom some weeks before Easter, which comes the second week in April next year. They will be yielding strong stems by April. Plant in a solid bed for best results, although benches will give you quite good flowers. C. W.

RUDD'S NEW WHITE.

The accompanying illustration shows W. N. Rudd's white seedling carnation to be disseminated this season. This is the variety which, shown at last year's Chicago exhibition, was first among the white seedlings, scoring 89 points. It scored 86 at Washington, when exhibited to the American Carnation Society last January. Mr. Rudd has named the variety for Mrs. J. C. Vaughan. It is understood it will be disseminated jointly by Jensen & Dekema and Mr. Rudd.

WEATHER PLANT.

Please let me know how to raise a weather plant and how to take care of it. I have planted the seed in a 2-inch pot for a year. The seed looks the same as the day I planted it. I kept it warm and moist. O. J. B.

The so-called weather plant, or crab's eye vine (Abrus precatorius), being a native of the tropics, requires strong heat to germinate its seeds, and to grow the plant well a warm house is required. If the seed remains fresh, soak for a few days in warm water and then place in moist sand. Place the seed pan over your hot water pipes to ensure a constant warmth. C. W.

THRIPS ON CYCLAMEN.

Under separate cover I am sending you a sample of cyclamen leaves. Will you kindly inform me what the trouble is and how best to remedy it? The plants are the best I ever grew and are almost ready for market, but this pest, together with the small, common gray spider, is doing considerable damage. C. F. M.

We at first thought your leaves were affected with the dreaded mite, but closer examination showed the marks to be those of yellow thrips. This is a bad pest, but can be controlled by persistent work. Fumigate every other night for a week. As smoking does not always kill thrips, if you can spare the time dip the plants in a pail or tub of water containing a solution of some one of the several tobacco extracts. Be sure the foliage gets thoroughly wet all over. If you cannot spare time to dip the plants, spray the juice on with a force pump or hand syringe, getting as much under the leaves as possible. Bed fresh tobacco stems among your plants every fortnight; this will act as a protection to the plants from thrips and aphids. C. W.

Willis N. Rudd.

(It seems also necessary to add, from a photograph made within the last few days).

Callas.

Callas are now well established in the pots and a little liquid manure once a week will assist them. Plants growing in benches will not require any feeding for a month yet. Ply the hose freely among the plants to keep insects in check and do not allow aphids to get any foothold, or it will badly disfigure the flowers. Callas will grow and flower in quite a low temperature, but we prefer to give them 55 to 60 degrees at night, the flowers opening much more quickly than in a cooler house.

Primulas.

Chinese primroses are useful Christmas plants, and the fact that they can be grown and sold profitably at a comparatively low price makes them popular with flower buyers whose pocketbooks lack the wherewithal to purchase azaleas or poinsettias. Some of the earliest flower trusses will now be well above the foliage and every effort should be made to have them as well bloomed as possible for the holidays. While red shades sell the best, there is a fair call for other colors.

It is unwise to attempt any forcing with primulas; it only results in weak, drawn plants. A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees should not be exceeded, and the plants should be as near the glass as possible. The old-fashioned narrow span houses with a path down the center and a bench on each side have never been improved upon for the culture of primulas and cyclamens. As the pots will now be well filled with roots, some weak cow manure water once a week will Mignonette.

The passing of the unseasonably warm weather experienced during the month of October will improve the quality of the mignonette. During hot weather it becomes weak and the flower spikes are thin and puny as compared with those produced under cooler conditions. The attacks of green worms have been unusually severe this season. These now are happily gone and there should be nothing further in the worm or insect line to trouble the plants.

To secure fancy spikes, disbudding is a necessity, leaving three or four to a plant. These should be carefully supported to keep them straight. Bent or twisted stalks are of little value. Many growers prefer to leave on all the shoots and are satisfied with medium spikes. This is especially the case with those having a good local trade.

Mignonette should never approach dryness at the root. To assist in keeping the surface soil moist, a light mulching of old hotbed manure can advantageously be used. Feeding should not yet be necessary. Avoid any but light fumigations, as the foliage burns easily, and hold the night temperature as near 40 degrees as possible, with abundant ventilation whenever conditions allow. The ventilators are better open all night, unless the temperature is unusually low.

RUST ON CARNATIONS.

I enclose some carnation leaves, which, as you will see, have some disease or an insect on them. Please tell me what it is and what to do with it.

C. M. H.

The specimens forwarded had a number of rust pustules on them, which, if allowed to develop, would burst open and free a brown, powdery mass, which contains the spores by which the disease is propagated.

We have had a number of inquiries regarding this disease this fall, and in the REVIEW of October 15 we gave full directions for handling this disease. If you are in the habit of saving the numbers, as many of our readers do, it will be an easy matter to look up things of this kind. You can find no better manual to guide you, in times of trouble, than the back numbers of the REVIEW. There are few subjects which are not treated at one time or another during a period of a year or two. In a majority of cases they are treated from an advisory standpoint, on account of trouble. You can always learn more about how to handle a plant when you hear some expert tell what to do in case of this trouble or that, than you can from hearing of its character and behavior. As long as things go along smoothly and the plants apparently take care of themselves, anyone can grow any given plant, but when diseases and insects make their appearance, then is when experience counts. The man who is most familiar with the numerous plant diseases and the best remedies therefor, is usually the most successful. So save your REVIEWS, which tell you how to handle plant diseases.

A. F. J. B.

NITRATE OF SODA.

Is nitrate of soda any better than liquid manure for carnations? Please tell how practical growers use it.

P. W. M.

Your query is a broad one and any answer given in reply must necessarily be more or less qualified. Whether nitrate of soda is better than liquid manure (and I assume you mean cattle manure) will largely depend on the condition of your plants. Under certain conditions your plants may need a few doses of nitrogen, which is the chief element contained in nitrate of soda, and in that case it would be the proper thing to use.

The three elements which go to make a perfect plant food are nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, and it depends on the nature of your crop, and the texture of your soil (which latter point will be shown by the action of your plants) as to what proportion is needed of each of these elements in addition to what the soil contains. Growers of mums and other plants who depend largely on the use of chemicals for feeding, get these elements from nitrate of soda, muriate of potash and bone-meal. The latter is sprinkled on, or mixed with the soil, while the first two are applied in liquid form. Other chemical compositions are also made use of to give a change of diet, but in the main those I have mentioned are the three employed for general feeding.

No experienced feeder would think of using the nitrate of soda extensively alone, without using the others, too. Nitrogen produces largeness of growth and size of flower, but when given in excess it will cause softness and flabbiness. For texture you want the potash, and so you see the different elements must be nicely balanced in order to get the best results.

The usual amount which is considered safe is one pound to fifty gallons of water, of those applied in liquid form, while of the bone-meal we consider that one pound of bone applied in dry form and in two or three doses is enough for ten square feet of bench space for one season of carnations. How often the liquid forms should be applied must depend on the crop, its condition and the season.

 National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

Results bring advertising.
 The REVIEW brings results.

Now that the baseball season and the election are both over, everybody can settle down to business.

WELL, the election is over, we all have found out which Bill was counterfeit, and if there was any excitement or disturbance of business it wasn't especially noticeable in the flower trade.

WITH wheat around 100 cents a bushel, corn 65 cents, oats 50 cents, beef $6.50 per hundredweight at Chicago and hogs $5.50 or better, it looks as though the farmers would have a little money to spend in town this fall, and quite likely the price of a few 4-inch geraniums may be available to a good many people along toward spring.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

President Poehlmann requests that any and all members of the American Rose Society who can, will attend a meeting of the executive committee to be held in the Coliseum, Chicago, November 12.

The judges to act in the show for roses, as appointed by President Poehlmann and filed with the secretary of the national show, are as follows: Robert Simpson, Wm. F. Gude, John N. May.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

EXPRESS RATES ON FLOWERS.

At the Niagara Falls convention the Society of American Florists turned over to its legislative committee certain matters affecting the rates on empty packages and the cost of gross weight where ice is used.

Edward Reid, of Philadelphia; Alfred Langjahr, of New York; Patrick Walsh, of Boston, and George Reinberg, of Chicago, have rendered efficient service in getting definite facts together. The American Express officials have given courteous assistance and the matter will soon be placed in the hands of Mr. Bradley, 65 Broadway, New York, the American Express Company's representative on the general board of traffic managers of the trunk line express companies.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Chairman.

MAYOR BREITMEYER.

At 4:25 p. m. Wednesday, November 4, Hugo Schroeter wired from Detroit:
 "Everything points to the election of Philip Breitmeyer mayor by safe majority."

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

All Souls' day was a disappointment this year. The weather was bad for business, and the growers in the flower market, who were loaded down with small mums and cheap flowers of all kinds for the cemetery trade, had a hard time to get rid of their stock. There was a high wind, which bruised the flowers and turned things upside down. The market has been swamped with mums and carnations and roses of all varieties are in oversupply. All prices have dropped in consequence. Last week the street boys were out with thousands of roses and carnations that were in good condition, offering bargains that were seldom passed by the public.

There will be a heavy loss to some of the growers, caused by so much cloudy weather, which has made many mums damp off, especially the large varieties.

Various Notes.

One of the largest collections of chrysanthemums ever made in the city was placed on exhibition at Carroll park October 31. The collection is composed of seventy-five varieties. In spite of the bad weather there were a great many visitors. Superintendent C. L. Seybold escorted the visitors around.

Plans are nearing completion for the Maryland State Horticultural Society's exhibition, which will be held in this city at the Fifth Regiment armory December 1 to 3. Judging from the elaborate plans of the society this exhibition will be far superior to any previously held in this city.

Prof. White of College Park, Md., gave a very interesting talk at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on soils and fertilizers and showed some fine mums which were grown at College Park as an experiment. Some were grown on new soil and some were grown on soil that had been used for nine years without change and these flowers proved to be superior to those that were grown on new soil.

Bernheimer Bros., who conduct one of the largest department stores here, have opened a cut flower department which would be a credit to any store.
 They sold 2,500 mums in one day last week, shipped from different growers in Pennsylvania. They expect to do a heavy Easter trade, as they have agreed to take one grower's whole output.

Halliday Bros. have some extra fine single violets and carnations.

W. O. Stran has been cutting some fine sweet peas, which find ready sale.

Chas. H. Cook has handled more ferns this season than he did last. He reports prices satisfactory. Q.

CARNATIONS

Quality now up to winter standard. We have for years had the highest grade lot of stock handled by any house in this market. If you are a buyer of Carnations, get in touch with us—we can supply you.

Chrysanthemums

Order of us and get the grade you want. Exhibition blooms, small stock for special sales, or anything between. We have all grades in quantity.

Violets

The cream of the Hudson River doubles and fancy home-grown singles. Push Violets; it pays.

Roses

You can call on us for anything in the Rose line and get the best the market affords.

Beauties

We are right in it on Beauties. A good crop on now and quality regularly the best in the market.

Valley

A wire to us brings fancy Valley, at any time, in any quantity, a bunch or a thousand.

Green Goods

Can supply Asparagus and Smilax in any quantity; long strings, and can quote special prices on large lots. Also plenty of Sprengeri, Adiantum, Farleyense and all outdoor greens. Best Ferns in the Market.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There were three days of good business at the end of last week. The All Saints' day demand for chrysanthemums for shipment to the far south cleaned up a large quantity of stock and, as had been expected, sent white chrysanthemums to a premium, compared to yellow, reversing the condition which had maintained earlier in the week. The market was in a normal state October 30 and 31, better prices being realized because of decreased supply and increased demand. But it has been noticeable for weeks that the shipping trade is better, comparatively speaking, than local trade. In spite of the fact that the week closed with fair business, it was not up to a year ago, when October closed with things on the boom.

The current week opened with decreased supplies of chrysanthemums, hardly so many carnations as the week before, with a shortage of Beauties, but with increased supplies of other roses. Trade was light the first of the week, because of election. It appears that we are just between crops of mums. The mid-season stock crowded in early, and the late varieties are not coming on as rapidly as was expected. The result has been a few days of comparatively light receipts and a noticeable shortage of really good stock. There is an abundance of small, soft, weak stuff that nobody wants, but really fine flowers are hard to find and have been selling well. There is so much of the smaller stock that it pulls down the price of the medium grades and there is an unusually wide difference between the top and the bottom. This same difference is apparent in other lines. There is more discrepancy than usual between the price of the top grade and the prices which are necessary to clean up the left-overs of both roses and carnations. Killarney continues most in demand among roses, but there has been an improvement in the quality of Maid and it is selling better. Richmond is abundant, but red seems not in demand at present. White roses are not in large supply.

While the supply of carnations has not increased to any great extent, the quality has improved and better business may now be anticipated on that account.

Violets are selling well, but at low prices. The supply has increased and the quality now is all that could be expected at this date. Prices are so low that retailers are using violets in quantity. Valley also is abundant and there are increased supplies of Easter lilies.

There is a good market for wild smilax, but other greens are not in special demand. It is noticeable that when cut flowers are scarce and high, galax, boxwood and other greens sell well, but when cut flowers are plentiful and cheap funeral work is made of them and the sale for greens is slow.

back to the city on any one of the frequent trains after dinner. Several hundred people are expected. St. Paul railroad, from Union Station.

The Chicago Carnation Company will take the visitors to Joliet at 11:45 Wednesday, November 11. Lunch at the greenhouses. Rock Island Station.

Bassett & Washburn will supply tickets to Hinsdale to all visitors who call at their office for them.

Peter Reinberg expects many visitors to see the Field rose growing and will have a reception committee on hand. One of his outside investments is a brewery, you will recall.

Frank Oechslin will keep open house during the show, at his place at 2508 to 2660 West Adams street. He says the advertising he did this summer brought him many customers who have never been at his place and whom he expects to see there during the show.

West Madison Street.

Anyone riding out West Madison street on the fine new drop-your-nickel-when-you-enter cars will surely get the idea that the florists are flourishing. Not only is there a series of prosperous-looking flower stores, but there are plants in the windows all along the street from the river to Garfield park. Fine Boston ferns seem favorites and are in windows of undertakers, bakers, restaurants, furniture stores, barber shops and even the saloons.

The first flower store, going west, is the small but apparently prosperous one of Martin Solms, at 391.

A cigar factory is in the store so long occupied by H. F. Halle, but C. H. Fiske is just around on Ogden and fell heir to a large part of the Halle trade, as he continued the store for a time.

Schnell & Poppe, at 705, are a recent addition to the street. They attract a good deal of attention by original window displays. Last week they had a Halloween window that caught everyone's eye, especially at night. There were shocks of corn, pumpkin heads with lights, and a white-clad "spook," as well as mums and ferns.

The new Schiller store, where George Asmus presides, makes a bold bid for business. It represents a quite large investment, but affords facilities for a big trade. Of double width, with modern show windows, the store is wide rather than deep, with workrooms in the rear and conservatory still farther back.

Mrs. George Wells, where Colorado avenue intersects, also has a window full of stock and an air of prosperity.

The new greenhouse of H. N. Bruns, east of his store, adds immensely to the appearance of his place and to his facilities. It is a good house. The front end is filled with decorating stock and plants for sale. It is kept lighted at night. The rear half of the house is used for valley. A new wagon-shed and boiler-house, all brick and concrete, is fireproof.

C. Frauenfelder & Co. always are busy; it is remarkable the amount of stock they use day after day, good times or bad. Taking the old Garfield park place of F. Oechslin, they have largely increased their facilities, especially in the plant line.

October Business.

On the whole, October was not as satisfactory as it started out to be. There was first-class demand at the beginning of the month and those who had the stock rolled up a good volume of business. Then the heat wave increased supply at the expense of quality and demand slackened. Although large lots of stock were moved, prices were so low the total sales were not as great as they should have been. The last week of the month, with a good All Saints' day demand, was more satisfactory. A good many houses in the first part of the month were running up to and in some cases ahead of last year, but during the heat wave they dropped back and not many can say the month's turnover was as good as last year. At the same time it should be remembered that October of 1907 was before the panic had got as far west as Chicago and that it was a splendid month. That the total of sales

Show Matters.

There was a good crowd at the flower show rally at the Union October 28. Arrangements for the show were gone over. Everything points to a first-class success. The show opens Friday, November 6, and closes Saturday, November 14. Admission is 75 cents. Trade tickets are 35 cents and may be had at E. F. Winterson's, E. H. Hunt's, E. C. Ameling's, Poehlmann's, Vaughan & Sperry's, Deamud's, Peter Reinberg's, Moninger's, or of Geo. Woodward, who is the other member of the committee.

The banquet will be held at the Auditorium Annex Tuesday, November 10, at 6 p. m. It is figured that at least 500 will be present. All locals will be charged $3 each for tickets. At the Union rally fifty tickets were sold. The ladies will attend. W. N. Rudd will be toastmaster.

The Florists' Club will run the booths for the sale of flowers at the show. President Leonard Kill will be in general charge. He has put Mrs. T. E. Waters in charge of the selling and Wm. Abrahamson in charge of the buying.

October Weather.

October was cooler than normal at both ends of the month, but so hot in the middle that the mean temperature for the thirty-one days was 55 degrees, when 53 degrees is normal. The rain was only a third of the normal precipitation. There were fourteen clear days, ten partly cloudy and seven cloudy. Killing frost occurred October 12.

Various Notes.

Lubliner & Trinz, the Randolph street florists and Milwaukee theatrical magnates, have just bought another playhouse in the Cream City, seating capacity 1,500. They expect to open it January 1. Joseph Trinz will give his attention to the Milwaukee interests in future, leaving Harry Lubliner in charge of the flower store.

Frank Oechslin has heretofore had to operate an electric pump to help out the city water, but has just put in a 3-inch pipe from a new main and will cut out the pump.

Taft was elected Tuesday at the establishment of the George Wittbold Co.; at least he had a good plurality in the ballot box that stood all day in the end of the show house.

P. J. Foley was at Cleveland October 30 and 31 to attend a meeting of growers of vegetables under glass.

Bassett & Washburn report having obtained $5 per dozen for Appleton mums
November 2. They exhibited the O. P.
Bassett carnation at St. Louis this week.

G. H. Pieser, president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., opened a new check book November 2. It contained 1,000 checks.
He says he hopes to get rid of them all by early January.

W. F. Jones, at Park Ridge, has three houses of carnations in good shape. He is a brother-in-law of Phil Schupp, of J. A. Budlong's.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has a Boston ivy, green, new to the west, which the retailers are using for wreaths and other similar work.

There were 110 couples in the grand march at the dance of the wholesalers' employees October 28, but this does not indicate the full measure of the financial success, because many firms who sell supplies to the wholesalers bought tickets which were not used. The boys speak a special word of appreciation for such courtesies.

John Zech was judge of election November 3 and earned his $5, because there were 582 registered voters in his precinct. Counting that many blanket ballots well scratched up is as big a job as filling shipping orders on a short market. It may have been specially trying in this case because Mr. Zech is an ardent democrat and his precinct was strongly republican.

L. Coatsworth says he thinks the Rhea Reid rose will turn out to be one of the best things for spring that the growers ever have got hold of.

C. M. Dickinson leaves November 6 for Chattanooga, to join Mrs. Dickinson and proceed thence to Little Rock, where he is to judge the show next week.

Lion & Co. have sent M. Shattls to Chicago to open a western headquarters.
He has secured temporary rooms at 19
Wabash avenue.

Vaughan & Sperry say that last week gave them a better total of business than any week since Decoration day and, excepting Decoration day, the best week since April.

The Florists' Club will hold its November meeting at the Union restaurant tonight, November 5. A large list of applications for membership is to be acted on.

N. J. Rupp was at Cleveland October 30 and 31 to attend the meeting of vegetable forces.

Percy Jones says he does not look for brisk business as long as the flower show lasts, but expects it to help trade all winter.

Weiland & Risch are beginning to cut heavily again, of Killarney.

A. L. Randall Co. is going into green and holly heavier than ever this year.

to attend the vegetable growers' convention.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Cooler and more seasonable weather has ushered in November and florists are pleased to welcome it, not because it will cause more of a run on the coal pile, but with strong hopes that it will cause a break in the cut flower depression, which has prevailed for some time.
It cannot be said that business shows any great improvement over a week ago.
Commission dealers are having better shipping orders, but such an avalanche of flowers is arriving that prices rule
low. Chrysanthemums now completely dominate the market. The season for these will be shorter than usual, as some of the late sorts are already being marketed in quantity. The blooms seem to lack substance, due to the hot weather experienced in October. Practically all midseason sorts are now in evidence, Appleton, Ivory and Bonnaillon perhaps in the greatest abundance. Roses are selling a trifle better. The hot weather rushed crops along and took much of the substance out of the flowers. Beauty, Killarney and Richmond are all extra fine, while Brides and Maids are coming with stems of something like seasonable length.

Carnations are, if anything, less abundant than a week ago, with prices holding about the same. Violets hold fairly firm, not being in sufficiently heavy supply to glut the market. Quite a few doubles have been sent from the Hudson, but these will not find a market here when local growers' crops are in season. Valley, gardenias, Cattleya labiata and lilies all sell fairly well. A little Paper White narcissus has made its appearance. Sweet peas are still rather short-stemmed. With the election over and more seasonable weather conditions, growers are looking for improved business.

Various Notes.

Everything now points to a fine exhibition at Horticultural hall, November 6, 7, 8 and 9. Entries far surpass those of a year ago, and the show promises to be a varied and interesting one. The attendance of the general public will, it is expected, easily break all records for a fall show.

The cooler weather has caused a big run on Dutch bulbs. Farquhar & Co. report much heavier sales than a year ago, with many lines completely sold out. W. W. Rawson & Co. report splendid trade, as do Schlegel & Fottler Co., T. J. Grey Co., H. E. Fiske Seed Co. and Joseph Breck & Sons. Demand is specially strong on tulips and narcissi.

James Wheeler, who assisted in judging the late Lenox show, pronounces it one of the finest he ever saw, the cut blooms being immense and groups superbly put up. The specimen blooms were all grown in pots from six to nine inches in diameter.

Cards are out for the marriage November 10, at the Baptist church, Brookline, of F. B. Cannell, the popular bass soloist of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, and Miss Ernestine Mae Thielscher, of Brookline.

H. M. Robinson & Co. kept open house October 29, the occasion of their third anniversary at their present quarters being taken advantage of by a large number of their customers to call and express their good will. Refreshments were served and the evening was pleasantly spent with music and other attractions.

Houghton & Clark have dissolved the partnership existing for some years, Mr. Houghton remaining in charge of the Boylston street store.

Peirce Bros., as usual, are marketing an immense quantity of chrysanthemums. They have a big lot of cyclamen coming along for Christmas.

William Shillsbury and A. W. Kidder are bringing in remarkably fine single violets for so early in the season.

W. N. CRAIG.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There was a slight slump in the general business during last week, due, possibly, to the near approach of the election, and it is expected that the coming week will be worse. Flowers of all kinds continue more than plentiful. Chrysanthemums, being the seasonable flowers, are the ones pushed to the front, and as a result roses and other flowers are suffering most.

The wholesale houses all say trade is good and everything going nicely. Nevertheless, they are all pretty well loaded and sales are generally at buyers' prices. The retail shops are making good, honest efforts to keep things moving and, as they are able to buy cheap, are offering special inducements to dispose of their stock. One firm advertised dollar boxes of flowers for Hallowe'en, each to contain one dozen good chrysanthemums. Another advertised, in big, 4-inch, double column ads in the daily papers, chrysanthemums at 75 cents per dozen, the finest varieties. While this looks like selling flowers cheap, it shows just the amount of effort it takes to do business, and shows that, at least in the opinion of some, it is better to keep their customers in the habit of buying flowers, even if they must sell at a very small profit.

From present indications, there should be a good delegation from this city to the big show in Chicago and they expect to leave here Sunday night.

Florists' Outing.

The Florists' Club's outing, November 2, was a grand success, so much so that a number of those who were there are already considering another sometime this winter.

There were forty members who met at the Phipps Conservatory, Schenley park, where Superintendent George Burke and John Jones did the honors. The walk through the houses is almost three-quarters of a mile. The chrysanthemum show, which has been continued for two weeks, is on the wane, but there were enough good things left to satisfy anyone. The Victoria Regia house, owing to the good weather, was still fine, some blooms remaining. Also the blue and pink water lilies, and their collection of palms and other tropical plants, are worth the trip out there.

A house of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine was particularly fine. Cyclamen is another thing which was well done here. One house, filled with azaleas, had plants of cosmos, pink, white and yellow, so arranged that the azaleas were almost concealed, and this arrangement looked well.

Their next show will be begonias, with a show of cyclamens and primulas to follow. The general expression of all was that Pittsburg is particularly fortunate in having such men as George Burke and John Jones at the head of this department, as the conservatories are a credit to the city, as well as to the men who keep them in the shape in which they always are.

After leaving the Phipps Conservatory, P. S. Randolph took charge of the delegation and we boarded the trolley for the Baum street store and greenhouses of Randolph & McClements. After due inspection of their fine collection of decorative plants, including a fine house of cibotium, our hosts announced lunch. They had a private dining room in a near-by hotel, where forty-two of us were seated and started right. The lunch developed into a banquet, and as all were good, strong, hearty fellows, ample justice was done to everything.

After lunch another trolley ride took us to their Stanton avenue greenhouses, where many surprises awaited us. Mr. Randolph started in the croton houses, which are his special pets, and there were some who said—and they are old men in the business—that while the collection is a large one, it is also one of the best in the country in the way of variety. There are several houses of ferns, all of them good; houses of chrysanthemums, including all of the commercial cut flower sorts; gardenias, and all of the variety of stock found on a retail commercial place.

Mr. Randolph was congratulated by most of the gardeners on the general appearance of everything, and the fact was noted that there was not a rubbishy thing on the whole place.

The party then went to the residence of Ed Reineman for refreshments and cigars, before going to A. R. Peacock's.

On arrival at Mr. Peacock's, the gardener, Mr. Jenkinson, did the honors and showed us a strictly up-to-date private place, with orchids in variety, chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, cyclamens, which he does particularly well, and other things too numerous to mention.

On getting through here, it was dusk and several other places on the list were postponed for another occasion.

The general decision was that the outing was a grand success and the best thing ever done by the club, and if any of that bunch were not members, they had better get under cover quick.

Hoo-Hoo.

The Market.

Trade was fairly good last week. The horse show and several good weddings and receptions used up a lot of first-class stock. The wholesale market was pretty well crowded all of the week, with an abundance of everything in season. It was a hard task to dispose of all of the first and second-class stock that came in. Special fancies were not any too many and found ready sale among the uptown buyers.

Chrysanthemums are not as yet overcrowding the market and prices are rather high. There are some good Robinson and Bonnaillon to be had, Ivory is expected in this week, also Mrs. Jerome Jones.

Roses are at their best. Extra long Beauties were not any too many. Other grades in these are also cleaning up well, but Bride, Maid, Richmond, Killarney and others have been plentiful right along. Carnations, too, were more than the demand called for last week. All varieties are coming in fine.

California violets are cleaning up every morning. The cool nights have brightened up the color. Valley has quite a fair demand when good. Smilax, asparagus and other greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

At time of writing this letter the members of the executive committee were busy transforming the large Armory hall into a flower garden, so as to have everything in readiness for the opening Tuesday night, November 3.

Fred Ostertag has taken a position with J. W. Dunford, as manager of his Gallagher Flower Shop, on Page avenue.

Miss Theresa Badaracco and the Mullanphy Floral Co. exhibited their delivery wagons at the horse show last week. Both made good impressions.

Fred Foster, of the Foster Floral Co., exhibited his horse, Red Feather, at the horse show and took second prize.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, called last week. He will leave on the night of November 5 for Chicago for the opening of the national flower show November 6. He is one of the judges on plants.

August Schuerman, of the Schuerman Floral Co., furnished the decorations at the opening of the new Coliseum. Horse show colors prevailed, green and white.

Henry Ostertag, whose place is near the new Coliseum, reports that trade in cut mums and violets for horse show week was large. A great many flowers of all kinds were used daily for this occasion.

C. A. Kuehn is handling a fine lot of roses this season. Among them is extra good quality of Potter Palmer from Ammann's.

Baer's and Peterson's carnations are coming in fine.

Henry Kohrs, who is managing the cut flower department for Grimm & Gorley, reports that the firm was busy last week with large designs for funerals.

L. N. Van Hook, of Ferguson, Mo., will again have a large cut of extra fine quality of violets and carnations this year.

Hugo Gross and the Ahners, at Kirkwood, have finished their new additions and are sending in some extra good violets and carnations.

The Missouri Botanical Garden will open its free mum show in the big tent at the garden a week after the Horticultural Society show.

Hans Jensen, foreman for A. Jablonsky, has left Mr. Jablonsky's employ.

Miss Clara Holtzmann and Otto Bruening, manager at Berning's, were married October 28, at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple are being congratulated on all sides.

The Florists' Bowling Club had quite a large attendance Monday night, October 26, there being twenty present, and fairly good scores were made by some of the old timers. The next bowling will be on Monday night, November 9.

Visitors included Arnold Ringier, Chicago; B. Eschner and M. Reukauf, Philadelphia. J. J. B.

John Cavagnaro has bought the vacant lot, 25x200, on Olive street, near Taylor avenue. He owns the building on the west of it, occupied by the Ellison Floral Co. Mr. Cavagnaro will erect a handsome two-story building, cost about $10,000, for the Ellison Co., in conjunction with its present quarters.

HALIFAX, N. S.—W. A. Yates, of the Halifax Floral Depot, has imported directly from Holland a fine selection of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and other bulbs.

ODGEN, UTAH.—The concrete and glass greenhouse for B. Van der Schuitt, on Woodland avenue, between Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth streets, is nearing completion and will cost the owner upwards of $1,500.

Debutante Bunches

You will want to know what you can get in a hurry for the coming-out tea. Something choice, quite a variety, for sometimes you will have many bunches for one occasion. Fancy Single Violets are now very fine. Double Violets can be had in the deep blue, Marie Louise, and the soft blue, Lady Campbell. The delicate pink and white of Killarney and the softer pink of My Maryland are favored in roses. Bridesmaid is also fine and the variety hues of Mrs. Jardine will lend variety. Lily of the Valley is superb now. Among orchids Cattleyas are plentiful and reasonable in price. This is also true of Oncidium Sprays. For finishing off, Adiantum in several varieties and the crested forms of the Boston Fern are effective.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Jack Frost, Hallowe'en, and All Saints' day combined to improve the tone of the cut flower market. Last Saturday, October 31, was generally recognized as the best day the market has seen in four months. Outdoor flowers are over, and the cooler weather has cut down the rose crops considerably. Chrysanthemums and carnations continue extremely plentiful. The first named are in demand, but carnations are not, the white varieties being almost impossible to sell at any price. Buyers of white flowers get so much more for their money with chrysanthemums that they pass the divine flower whenever the autumn queen is obtainable, and of course it is obtainable everywhere now. November 2 saw smaller receipts in the wholesale market than any Monday for a long time past. November 3 being election day, business fell off, but conditions would seem to warrant the belief that shipping as well as local demand is bound to steadily increase from now on until the holidays.

The list of white chrysanthemums has been strengthened more than that of any other color, Alice Byron, Angele Laurent, White Eaton, Mrs. Hurley and Lynnwood Hall being the principal varieties. In pink, Maud Dean and Minnie Bailey have reinforced Dr. Enguehard. Yellow, which is perhaps a shade less plentiful, is mainly supported by Yellow Eaton, in addition to Col. Appleton and Major Bonnaffon, named last week. Bronze is represented by Mrs. Broomhead and Brutus. Daisy chrysanthemums in orange and salmon have made their appearance. Indoor pompons are more plentiful and have entirely replaced the outdoor-grown stock.

The rose market is less overstocked, Beauties having shortened appreciably. Richmond is too plentiful. Choice blooms of the other varieties are in fair but not active demand. A few Souvenir de Pierre Notting are seen.

Carnations are perhaps three times as plentiful as they were a fortnight ago. The quality is improved, but they are not in special demand.

The single violets are becoming finer. Hudson river doubles have made their appearance in quantity, sharing the market with Lady Campbell. Cattleyas have shortened and the price has advanced. Gardenias continue scarce. Valley has been selling poorly. Greens have been in fair demand. On some days the demand has been brisk. The general tone is better, though prices have not, as a rule, advanced. Snapdragon has made its appearance in limited quantities. For quotations see price list.

A Chain of Stores.

The opening of three stores under one management on Market street has suggested the possibility of a chain of stores run strictly on a cash basis, such as we have in other lines of business. It is a matter of history that the proprietor of the Acme Tea Stores, who was limited to $100 credit some fifteen years ago, is now a millionaire, with a chain of many stores scattered over the city. The Acme Tea Stores purchase the best grade of tea and other groceries, purchase them in quantity, and sell them for cash only, on a small margin of profit. Their transactions in the aggregate are far larger than those of any leading retail grocer. Their success has been almost phenomenal. Whether this is possible in the flower business remains to be seen, but the first move, made by Waxman & Kipnis, will be watched with great interest.

An Announcement.

Announcement was made November 2 that the firm of W. E. McKissick & Bros. has been formed to carry on the wholesale florists' business at 1619 and 1621 Sansom street. The firm is formed of W. E., A. P. and H. E. McKissick. It has been known for some time in wholesale circles that W. E. McKissick, who has built up such a splendid local and shipping business, felt that the time had come when the care and responsibility of the enterprise were more than one man could carry. To lighten this weight the present firm has been formed.

Recent Importations.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have received some novelties of especial interest lately. One idea especially adapted for Thanksgiving is the peacock basket. A life size bird of true peacock green is standing on a globe, the basket part being formed of the peacock's body. Similar to this, and a little more Thanksgiving in idea, is the noble turkey perched on a pumpkin. A really beautiful set of ferneries and vases is shown in the Vienna ware, best described as a choice china of varied hue. Silk fiber ribbon of rainbow hues is a pleasing novelty. The dwarfs or manikins, suggestive of Rip Van Winkle, are especially designed for original window effects.

Various Notes.

The November meeting of the Florists' Club was held on election day, the new officers of the club assuming their duties. Routine business was transacted. The Moore-Livingston Co. exhibited its plant stand.

Thomas H. Best, manager of the Bellevue-Stratford flower store of J. J. Habermehl's Sons, has resigned his position and returned to Chicago.

The Robert Craig Co. and the Henry A. Dreer Co. will be exhibitors at the national flower show to open in Chicago November 6.

The Floral Exchange is sending choice Maid and Gate to Eugene Bernheimer.

Walter P. Stokes reports an extraordinary demand for all varieties of Dutch bulbs, the supply being nearly exhausted.

The importations of azaleas are unusually fine this season. In some cases extraordinary value has been given by the Belgian growers, who appear to have an overstock of the larger sizes.

Israel Rosnosky has returned from a successful business trip in the west. He expects to represent the Henry F. Michell Co. at Chicago this week.

Henry I. Faust, of Merion, is sending showy bunches of daisy chrysanthemums, salmon and yellow, to Lilley & Upton.

Robert Kift is doing yeoman service toward the city beautiful. The street in the rear of his shop was adorned by handsome boxes filled with boxwood, retinosporas, junipers, hemlock, and other evergreens, ready for delivery on an order.

Frank L. Polites has completed his improvements at Thirteenth and Chestnut streets, and now has an excellent basement store, neat and attractive in appearance.

M. Rice & Co. have received second Christmas shipments by the steamers Dortmund, Armenia, and Marquette, the first being entirely sold.

Frank Palmer, formerly with Mrs. M. Heron, is now in charge of Jacob Becker's store and greenhouse at Fifty-second and Market streets. Mr. Becker says that he does not allow his retail business to interfere with his wholesale business in any way.

An additional novelty shown by Mr. Beyer, of M. Rice & Co., is the latest wedding fad, the shepherd's crook, directoire staff, and Empire staff, being wands, so to speak, for the fair bridesmaids. They are of reed, finished with white enamel, and may be adorned with ribbons and flowers.

good demand for everything developed Monday and before the week ends we look to see the improvement general. There was a great accumulation of violets last week. sort. The only menace after Tuesday will be the extraordinary shipments of mums. Of these there is apparently no end, and prices are cut in two in comparison with other years. They have completely demoralized the market. Much of the unsatisfactory condition of things may be attributed to the heat. Those who have devoted their houses to the best varieties only are reaping a fair reward. The second and lower grades cannot demand even the bare cost of their production.

There was considerable waste in carnations last week. This cannot continue with the perfect stock now arriving. Valley is abundant. Some mignonette is coming in, also callas and snapdragons, but they look lonesome yet. Cosmos still helps to beautify the retail windows. Sweet peas begin to demand notice again and will soon be abundant. A. C. Zvolanek is sending some of his new kinds to J. K. Allen, as usual. Smilax is improving and abundant.

A good many wholesalers are handling chrysanthemum plants, but there is not a ready sale for them and some of them look sadly out of place in New York.

Orchids are abundant. Prices still are low, but the November weddings and receptions are here and they may climb. Gardenias, too, are in the limelight. These two are the special pets of the Four Hundred.

Various Notes.

The special car for the national show didn't materialize, but there will be a good number of New Yorkers going, some of our notables among them.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held Monday evening, November 9, at the rooms in the Grand Opera House building, on West Twenty-third street. The nominating committee will bring in its report. The Bowling Club will meet at its alleys that day at 3 p. m. The club's smoker, Mr. Rickards says, will have a program November 18, that will open their eyes.

W. E. Marshall made an excellent marshal of the florists' and seedsmen's brigade in the business men's parade October 31, Messrs. Saltford and Trum-pour being his lieutenants, and A. J. Guttman the standard bearer.

This week flower shows are on at Red Bank, Glen Cove and Tarrytown. Next week the mum show in the Berkeley Lyceum in this city and November 17 to 19 comes the great flower show in the Museum of National History, under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York. There will be a large attendance of gardeners.

VEGETABLE FORCERS ORGANIZE

Initial Meeting at Cleveland.

Proprietors of vegetable greenhouses from several states met at Cleveland, O., October 30 and 31 and formed the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association of America, with a membership of sixty-five.

The meeting was a result of a suggestion by S. B. Chester, of Cleveland. E. A. Dunbar, of Ashtabula, sales manager of the Ashtabula Lettuce Growers' Association, took the matter up and a general call was issued for the meeting.

History of the Movement.

Mr. Dunbar was the prime mover in the Ashtabula Lettuce Growers' Association, the first organization of the sort in the United States. An experience of ten years in successfully managing the affairs of his organization has peculiarly fitted him as a pioneer in national association work.

The Ashtabula Lettuce Growers' Association has done much to improve the output of the greenhouses in that city. Some growers formerly sent out lightweight baskets and some offered inferior goods, but the association has enforced a full-weight package and a member does not dare put the stamp on inferior goods for fear of confiscation. The result has been a fair demand for association goods when outsiders could not market their product and top prices when the demand is good. Pittsburg commission men say that the Ashtabula Lettuce Growers' Association is by far the most successful of anything of the sort that has come within their observation.

The Business Sessions.

Mr. Dunbar presided as temporary chairman and was unanimously elected president. His firm, that of Dunbar & Hopkins, is the oldest of a group of successful modern vegetable forcing houses at Ashtabula, having been established about fifteen years.

The object of this new organization is purely educational.

Papers were read by Frank Luce, of Ashtabula, O.; B. H. Thorne and W. J. Green, of Wooster, O.; C. W. Waid, New Carlisle, O.; L. C. Corbett, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and W. F. Massey, of Salisbury, Md., most of whom have a wide reputation as experts on vegetable forcing.

Life memberships are $15, annual memberships $3 for the first year and $2 each year thereafter.

Soil sterilization, the selection and improvement of seed and the various methods of bettering known varieties of hot house vegetables were quite exhaustively discussed.

Later it is expected that the question of a uniform style of packing and grading goods; more favorable accommodations from transportation companies and

A BED OF MUSHROOMS

VARIETIES OF LETTUCE.

[A paper by L. C. Corbett, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., read at the meeting of greenhouse vegetable growers in Cleveland, October 31, 1908.]

The lettuce work of the Department of Agriculture may be discussed under three distinct topics: First, "Varietal Studies," which were conducted over a period of several years and summarized in a publication from the Bureau of Plant Industry in Bulletin No. 69; second, under the subject of "Breeding Work," which is now under way; and, third, "The Influence of Fertilizers," work which is also still under way.

In lettuce, as with most other garden crops, we find too many sorts, or at least too many varietal names. In our lettuce studies, conducted by Mr. Tracy, it was necessary to handle something over 300 so-called varieties which were offered by the American trade, in order to determine the types and sorts actually in existence. Our studies revealed that these trade names were used to apply to about 100 distinct sorts, which could be classed under three types; namely, Cos; leaf, cutting or bunch; and head lettuces. In such a list as this, one would naturally expect to find everything necessary to meet the requirements of frame, forcing-house and field cultivation, and I believe that if we were to make careful investigations we would, in this great array of varieties, find sorts which would be especially adapted to the needs of each of the three lines of commercial cultivation above spoken of.

Keeping Varieties Pure.

It would seem, therefore, that there is little opportunity for developing new sorts and little need for such effort. In lettuce, as with most of our garden plants, it is not so much a matter of new sorts at the present time as it is to keep the strains which are of decided commercial value pure and true to type. This work in the case of lettuce, however, is much more simple and easy than with many other garden plants. In the case of lettuce the small size of the flowers, their peculiar method of development, and the short time the stigmas are exposed render it quite certain that this plant is, in general, close fertilized. Insects play little or no part in the pollination of the plants, and, therefore, cause very little difficulty from natural hybridization. In other words, it is likely that it would be safe to grow different varieties of lettuce for seed purposes in the same general locality, and perhaps in the same field, without danger of detrimental crossing. For the sake of safety, however, as we are not quite positive on this point, it will be better to confine different sorts to somewhat restricted areas, so that the danger of hybridization and crossing will be entirely overcome.

When once crossed, however, lettuce is a plant which retains its admixture very firmly, and is liable to cry back or revert to either of its ancestral parents after very careful selection has been carried on for many generations. The question, then, of the breeding of lettuce true to type is an important one and should be carefully guarded by seed growers.

The extensive variety trials which have been conducted by the Department have been for the purpose of straightening out the nomenclature of the group rather than determining the fitness of a variety for any particular purpose. As our trials have been chiefly conducted in the open, it stands to reason that it would be impossible to determine from such trials the fitness of different sorts for greenhouse purposes or for frame cultivation.

SEEDSMEN will be interested in the paper of L. C. Corbett, on lettuce, appearing elsewhere in this issue.

ARCHIAS' SEED STORE, Sedalia, Mo., reports an excellent trade on fall bulbs, even with geraniums not injured by frost as late as November 1.

THERE still is plenty of cold storage valley, with the new crops due in a few days, so it looks like being pretty near a scramble to clean up.

It looks as though, instead of asking as much as conditions will warrant, most of the seed catalogues for 1909 will hold prices down on the scarce items.

Now that the wholesale price lists are out, the work on the general seed lists can progress. A good many of them are well along, only waiting for confirmation of prices, and will be out early.

THE Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, was the only seed house represented at the meeting of vegetable forcers for organization, at Cleveland October 30 and 31, an account of which is printed on another page.

THE early wholesale lists do not show as great increases in prices on some of the scarce items as conditions would appear to make possible, but the quantities which can be obtained at the prices quoted will doubtless be found to depend largely on who the buyer is, or on the rest of the order.

ALEXANDER CROSS, of Alex. Cross & Sons, seed merchants, Glasgow, Scotland, is one of the few British horticultural traders who aspires to parliamentary honors. He is member of parliament for the Camlachie division of Glasgow and is now on his honeymoon trip on the Italian lakes, having married Miss Agnes Jane Lawrie, daughter of a Glasgow shipbuilder.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co. sent out their advance wholesale list dated October 17. It showed nearly as many price changes down as up, compared with last year. Pole beans are a slight advance, cucumber a sharp advance, quite a few lettuce up, muskmelons a general advance, onions a sharp reduction, extra early round peas and second early and main crop peas moderate advances on a maticular types of lettuce have largely determined the forms which have found their way into the various branches of the lettuce industry. Practically all of our eastern markets require a head lettuce. As a result, greenhouse operators east of Pittsburg nearly all grow heading types. Since the field and frame lettuce of the south, as well as that at the north, all reach the same markets, head lettuce is the prevailing type in both of these industries. Many of the cities of the central portion of the United States accept the cutting or leaf type of lettuce, which is well represented by the Grand Rapids Forcing. This type of lettuce, to my mind, is quite as desirable as the head lettuce, and can be much more economically produced, either in the frame or in the greenhouse, than the heading sorts.

VARIETIES OF LETTUCE.

Crosses With Grand Rapids.

In the lettuce breeding work, which has been conducted by Mr. Oliver, under the direction of Dr. Galloway, thirty or forty distinct sorts of lettuce have been crossed and many interesting forms obtained. A single cross, however, has been made the basis of practically all of the selection work which is now in progress; namely, Grand Rapids, or Golden Queen, with its reciprocal cross. One of the interesting features of this work is that in the first generation, while the lettuce is clearly a cross between the two types, it quite closely resembles one or the other of the parents; the type in the generation is usually very constant; the plants are uniform in character, and with decidedly increased vegetative vigor. The marked feature of cross-bred or hybrid plants is their rapid growth.

In the second generation, hybrid or

Lycoris Squamigera

or Amaryllis Hallii.

A perfectly Hardy Amaryllis, producing beautiful pink flowers.

DESCRIPTION:—Lycoris Squamigera produces in early spring attractive green foliage which grows until July, when it ripens off and disappears, and one not familiar with its habits would think the bulb had died, but about a month later, as if by magic, the flower stalks spring from the ground to a height of 2 or 3 feet, developing an umbel of large and beautiful lily-shaped flowers, 3 to 4 inches across and from 8 to 12 in number, of a delicate lilac-pink, shaded with clear blue.

CULTURE:—As the bulb is perfectly hardy without any protection, it can be planted either in the fall or spring, but we consider fall the best time, as the bulbs will have splendid chance to get established before flowering time. Cover the crown about 4 inches.

Very useful for the hardy border or among shrubbery.

cross-bred plants break up into all sorts and kinds. Second generation seedlings of the cross above noted have produced as many as twenty-eight distinct types. There are usually two predominating forms, but with all possible gradations between them.

Two New Types.

At the present time Mr. Oliver is working with three or four distinct selections of this cross, representing two general types—one a very rapid growing, early heading form, producing heads which are compact and long standing; another form of the same cross, which is a cutting lettuce, closely resembling the Grand Rapids Forcing, but with a more compact and dense habit. These, perhaps, represent the two extremes from this cross. Both of these lettuces are exceedingly promising. It may be said that the heading form, which is now in its sixth generation, is the earliest of the large head types of forcing lettuce. The cutting type is also considerably earlier than either of its parents.

Our work with fertilizers upon lettuce has not progressed far enough to give us decided results; at least, not sufficiently decided so that we can say positively that a certain kind of fertilizer is better suited to lettuce on the greenhouse bench than another. The work is now in its second year, and quite marked results are observable in the young plants now upon the benches, but at this stage of growth it is impossible to predict what may be the final outcome.

General Greenhouse Problems.

have already been mentioned, which have direct bearing upon the commercial aspects of lettuce forcing, we are using lettuce as an interpreter in a series of experiments which we are conducting in our forcing houses to determine the effect of modified heat, light and moisture upon the growth of plants in greenhouses. In other words, we are endeavoring to find out the relative importance of various factors which enter into the make-up of the climate of a forcing house during the growing season. This work will ultimately be extended to an investigation of the relative efficiency of different types of heating for large greenhouses, as well as the economy of different methods of installing pipes. In this investigation we hope to determine the relative efficiency, from the standpoint of fuel economy, of different types of installation, and at the same time to conduct studies which will determine the relative merits of the different forms of modern greenhouse construction. It will be impossible to carry on these investigations entirely at the Department, but we hope, through coöperation with commercial growers who have different types of houses and different installations of heating apparatus, to carry on efficiency tests so as to find out the truth in regard to these various problems which play such an important part in the economical production of forcing-house products.

Experiments With Other Plants.

The studies of forcing-house problems, however, are not confined to the use of lettuce or to greenhouse physics investigations, but include studies of efficiency of various methods of propagation, particularly with roses and carnations; fertilizer studies with carnations, and breeding work with tomatoes, both under glass and in the open, to determine types which are best adapted for forcing purposes, as well as those best adapted for canning to comply with the rules and regulations of the Pure Food Act in regard to the use of coloring matters in canned products. To this end several standard varieties of tomatoes were planted. Those which promised to give a canned product which would have the desired color without the use of dyes were selected. Several hundred cans are now in store, but examinations have not yet been made, so we cannot give you the results of these tests. However, the results of this year's work will be available before planting season the coming spring.

haustive studies which have heretofore been made to determine the influence of artificial lights upon the development of various greenhouse crops. While connected with the Cornell University Experiment Station it was my privilege to assist Professor Bailey in work which was conducted to determine the effect of the arc electric lamp upon the growth of lettuce and various other plants. Later I conducted a series of experiments, extending over four or five years, to determine the influence of the incandescent gas light upon the growth of lettuce, which was reported in West Virginia Bulletin 62. This work was followed by a two years' test of the effect of colored incandescent lights upon the growth of lettuce.

The tomato studies conducted at the West Virginia Station, and reported in Bulletin 49, covered a test of the relative value of seedling and cutting plants for forcing purposes.

The Scientific and the Commercial.

From the character of the investigations which I have mentioned it is evident that a part have purely scientific value, while another part have a direct commercial bearing. I appreciate that it is the commercial side in which you are interested, but while the purely scientific investigations seem to be of little value, yet they often point out significant truths which bear an important relation to the commercial phase of the question. The work which we now have under way is all purely commercial in its main bearing, and with the organization of your forces it will be possible, through coöperation with you, to more directly cater to your wants, which we hope you will make known to us upon all occasions. We cannot promise to give

Best Results With Less Ice

The condition of your stock does not depend upon the amount of ice you use. It depends upon the cooling you get from the ice you use, and this depends upon the patented system of refrigeration which you find in the McCray Refrigerator. The proper circulation of pure, fresh air keeps perishable stock fragrant, and in perfect, strong condition. At the same time it uses very little ice.

McCray Refrigerators

will give an air of elegance to your store. It will save ice for you daily. It will keep your stock right. It will help sell your stock because it will be kept in such perfect condition. Your refrigeration troubles will be over when you buy a McCray.

McCray Refrigerators are lined with white enamel, tile, opal glass, or with marble or mirrors as you prefer, and are made in a wide range of regular sizes for immediate shipment, or can be built to order for any requirement.

Don't neglect to write at once for our beautiful Catalog No. 71, giving the detail of the full line of McCray Refrigerators for Florists.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

The R. G. Dun & Co. commercial agency sums up the general business situation for November 1 as follows:

"More seasonable weather gives the necessary stimulus to an adequate distribution of necessities, and there is larger buying in the leading retail lines. Food products, apparel and footwear move freely, while recovery appears in furniture, carpets, jewelry and art wares. Buyers attend the wholesale merchandise centers in numbers comparing favorably with this time last year, mail orders come forward steadily from the western territory and dealings advance in spring goods.

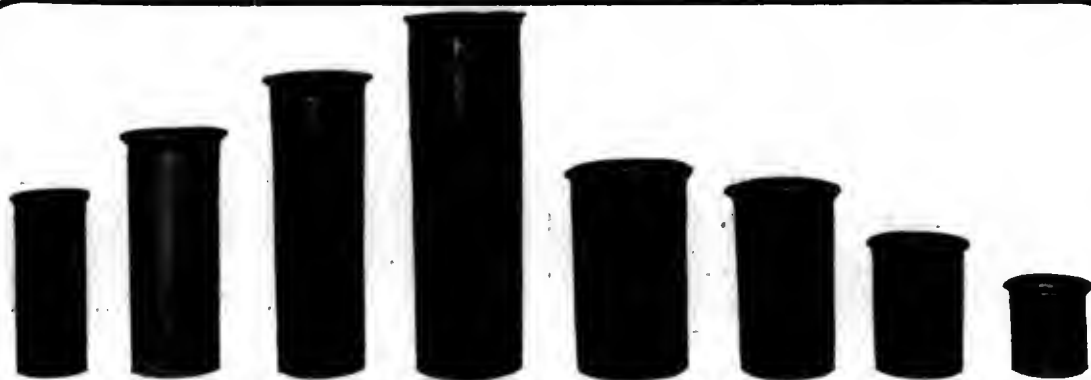

"A sharp gain is seen in demand for Christmas novelties, this business having an encouraging outlook, in contrast with a year ago. Dry goods trades report scarcity of some materials now urgently called for to replenish stocks, and much of the personal buying reflects a disposition to secure fuller needs for the winter.

"Shipments reach a good aggregate in woollens, linens, knit goods, clothing, and house furnishings, while groceries, canned and wet goods, and smokers' supplies bulk better than at this time last year, when these latter lines were severely checked. Reports from the agricultural sections continue to be reassuring for future trade, corn husking well and winter wheat showing good growth. Crop marketings thus far have been exceptionally heavy at prices averaging a higher level.

"Country bank deposits exceed all previous records, and less currency is withdrawn from the money centers, indicating increased purchasing power which must soon influence manufactures. Mercantile collections show slowness on city bills, but country settlements mainly run prompt."

AUGUSTA, GA.—P. J. Berkman is pushing the horticultural features of the Georgia-Carolina fair.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—The Miles Co. has built three additional houses and an office, at a cost of about $3,000.

WALTHAM, MASS.—When James Silman insisted that he must first call up a bank and ascertain its worth before accepting a check for $20 which was given him by a strange woman in payment of a bill for $15, the woman said he might send the change to a Cambridge address and left hastily. The check was worthless, and when the police, at Mr. Stilman's complaint, attempted to find the woman, they learned that there was no such address as she gave.

PACIFIC COAST.THE SAN RAFAEL SHOW.

The first of the fall exhibitions in that section of California was that of the Marin County Horticultural Society, at San Rafael, October 24. This was by far the largest and most successful affair ever given by this society, and the specimens shown have never been equalled in Marin county.

The largest and finest single display in the hall was that of Jas. Niven, gardener to H. E. Bothin, of Ross. His showing was most artistically arranged and composed of the finest begonias and chrysanthemums ever seen here. The former were from bulbs imported from Blackmore & Langdon, Bath, England, and many of the blooms reached eight inches in diameter. For these Mr. Niven received the society's special award, as well as first prize for the best seedling chrysanthemums and several first prizes for chrysanthemums in pots.

The largest collection of roses shown was that of E. Gill, of West Berkeley, who exhibited 100 late blooming sorts.

H. Schluter, of the Laurel Grove Nursery, San Rafael, had a large showing of decorative plants in pots.

J. A. Carbone, of Berkeley, received first prize on carnations and also on outdoor roses.

A. W. Foster received first prize for six dahlia blooms, while the silver cup for the largest collection of dahlias was awarded to Geo. A. Pope.

P. Uhlmann, gardener to M. H. DeYoung, received several first prizes for mums and dahlias, and R. Lohrmann, gardener to A. W. Foster, made several splendid exhibits and captured several first prizes.

The judges for the show were John McLaren, of Golden Gate park, San Francisco; S. Clack, of Mayfield, and T. Wood, of San Mateo.

This was considered a very successful show and the society will give a much larger spring exhibition at the same place next year. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

Business is unusually quiet, the general opinion being that it is owing to the presidential election. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful, owing to the light demand and the favorable weather. Carnations are being brought into town in large quantities and sold at low prices. Roses are in much the same condition, although the quality throughout is not as good as with the carnations. Violets are the best selling article the retailer has at this time and the price the stores pay is 75 cents per dozen bunches. Sweet peas are completely out of season. A few early Paper White narcissi are shown and valley is practically a glut. Smilax is now of sufficient length to be of some value to the decorator and asparagus is scarcer than it has been at any time this season. Other kinds of hardy outdoor stock are of little value, owing to the lateness of the season.

Mums are now at their best and are the most popular flowers by long odds. They are selling much better than any other kinds of stock and the public is using them almost exclusively for any and all occasions. The prices are about equal to those of one year ago.

Various Notes.

F. E. Olmstead has been appointed deputy commissioner of forestry, with headquarters in San Francisco.

Thos. Redmayne, the well known landscape gardener, has partially recovered from his severe attack of rheumatism.

Thos. Breen, for many years with P. J. Meyer, of Burlingame, has taken charge of the grounds of Wm. Babcock, at San Rafael.

H. E. Bothin, of Ross Station, will shortly commence the erection of a large rose house.

Geo. Walters, the veteran gardener of Marin county, who has been in delicate health for quite a time, is reported to be on the mend.

The estate of Wm. J. Landers, late president of the California Nursery Co., at Niles, has been appraised at $247,000. G.

WASHINGTON.The Market.

While we have had a decided change in the weather, the killing frosts, which would be so welcome, have not materialized as yet. Business is about on a par with last week; plenty of good stock, with carnations coming much better. There is a glut of mums. Hallowe'en called for the usual window displays, pumpkins of every size, Jack-o'-lantern faces filled with flowers, etc. Shaffer's window had a background of corn stalks, with a witch with a pumpkin head, and several comic faced pumpkins and chrysanthemums. Gude's had a pumpkin made of yellow mums, with a face worked with pompon mums.

train, for Alexandria, Va., to attend the meeting at Mr. Grillbortzer's place. Mr. Dolphin, J. Talbot, R. J. Lacey, M. Marche and L. L. Kennely were elected to membership. The committee on flower show reported progress. Mr. Mayberry was made chairman of the reception committee and Mr. Robinson of the awards committee.

Mr. Hammer called the attention of the club to the new building regulations and wanted to take the matter up before it became a law, as it will cause considerable trouble to the greenhouse men inside the city limits. Quite a discussion followed on the trouble experienced by outside men getting permits to do planting. The limit was reached when Honest John Robinson stated that at present he was planting some trees on a plumber's permit.

After a neat address by Mr. Grillbortzer, he invited the members to adjourn to his new packing room and potting shed, to participate in an oyster roast. The rooms were tastefully decorated with flags and foliage and the tables with My Maryland roses and carnations.

Under the packing room is the concrete storage room, which was well filled with a fine lot of mums and roses worth going to see. A dozen cooks, under the supervision of Mr. Grillbortzer, were kept busy frying and toasting oysters. Screened by a bank of palms and ferns, an orchestra furnished music throughout the evening. After being served at the table, the club lined up in the potting shed, where steamed oysters were served. After the musical program all sang "For He Is a Jolly Good Fellow." And amid good wishes, a start was made through that typical southern town to the station, where the special train was waiting.

President Kramer has sent a personal letter to each member to boom the flower show. Friday, November 13, is to be Fraternal night. All the fraternal organizations have been invited to attend.

The committee on scale for floral arrangements reports the following:

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

HORNE & ARMSTRONG are a new nursery firm of Phoenix, Ariz. They speak of good business, rather better than they expected.

PRUNING SHRUBS.

A knowledge of shrubs, of such an extent that at least their manner of flowering is known, should be acquired by everyone intrusted with the work of pruning. It is painful to witness the uniformly clipped appearance of some shrubberies, when it is realized what wealth of bloom had been sacrificed in the clipping process.

All that is required to prune properly is sufficient intelligence and observation to discern what should be cut away and what should not. The flowering wood, as a rule, should not be cut out. Close observation of the character of the plants, during the several stages of their development, will be amply sufficient to educate any man of ordinary intelligence so that he can treat them as they should be treated. B.

VARIETIES OF LILACS.

We have a circle of ground twenty feet in diameter, which we desire to plant to the finest lilacs, and have it in mound shape. I would like a full and complete description of about a dozen of the finest varieties. Who makes a specialty of growing lilacs? I note the article on lilacs in the issue of October 15, but the writer does not give their habits of growth or hardiness. If I were posted on their different habits of growth, etc., I could select the varieties. The location is Nebraska.

G. H. P.

For such a bed as described, I think it would be more satisfactory to plant varieties of Syringa vulgaris entirely. The Persian and Chinese lilacs have a totally different habit of growth, forming wide, round and lower heads. The tree lilacs, S. Pekinensis and S. Japonica, are too robust. S. villosa is also different in foliage and habit from the varieties of S. vulgaris.

At the York Experimental Station, York, Neb., over 100 varieties of lilacs have proved perfectly hardy, including many of the best forms of S. vulgaris, quite a few being Lemoine's newest hybrids. Of course, if a succession of bloom is wanted, S. Persica, S. Rothomagensis rubra, S. villosa and S. Josikæa can be planted, but personally I would prefer a bed restricted to varieties of S. vulgaris.

I would recommend the following

The Madison show last week was a great success artistically and notwithstanding rainy weather drew large crowds. New York sent many of its prominent seedsmen to the show and the noted gardeners of Jersey were there in all their glory.

New Carnations==1908=09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf

A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal, with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal, closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, and holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives one good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby

Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives one grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

this department of the business and is well and favorably known to the trade. Mr. Zangen will devote his personal attention largely to his seed business in Hoboken, N. J.

Schumacher & Kessler have opened their new store at 113 West Thirtieth street and are handling a fine assortment of plants of all kinds from Long Island and Jersey growers. Both men are popular and Mr. Kessler is a brother of the well-known bowler and wholesaler, Phil Kessler, of the Cut Flower Exchange building, on Twenty-sixth street.

Bonnet & Blake's new store on Livingston street, Brooklyn, is just what the firm has long needed, for the wholesale business is growing in the city of churches. The firm will also handle florists' supplies.

Langstadter, the florists' printer, on Sixth avenue, reports no reduction in florists' orders this fall, and says the trade gives every evidence of progress.

J. J. Coan says he feels quite at home already in the wholesale department of the trade, and is well pleased with the development of the business thus far. There seems to be room for everybody in this fast growing city, and the establishing of new firms seems to create no diminution in the bulk of daily business enjoyed by the veterans.

The Market.

Heavy frosts and snappy weather have brought promise of winter, and as a result business has taken on its season's rush. Stock is good, and more or less plentiful. Roses, lilies, carnations and Beauties are offered in good quantities, and violets are getting more plentiful every day.

Various Notes.

The florists of the city who are planning on leaving for Chicago this week have selected the evening of November 7 to go in a body. It is not yet decided just how many will go, or who will go, but a fair representation is assured.

Visitors: H. E. Philpott, Winnipeg.
M. E. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

In New Orleans, All Saints' day is the harvest of the florists. This year it has been good. Favorable weather, and the day falling on Sunday, helped everyone to dispose of his stock and with many it was a clean sweep. Good carnations were looked for early in the day, at any price. Prices were as usual, from $3 up. Outdoor mums, with a glass covering at budding time, seem to give better results than greenhouse culture and it is the best way for our climate. J. A. Faessel's were grown in this way and certainly none better could be found in town. Some beautiful flowers came also from A. Alost and Herman Doescher.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

What a difference a few days can make in the flower business! It would seem almost impossible that a week could make such a difference. But I believe that the sharp changes in this business, from good to bad and from bad to good, are among the things which make it so attractive to those who are so fortunate as to be engaged in it. While a week ago the business was in a state of depression, last week brought out a business that was satisfactory in every respect. Prices, while not at the highest point for this season of the year, were satisfactory and the grower has no kick coming on the returns he is receiving. Perhaps All Saints' day and All Souls' day had something to do with it. But I believe that, more than that, the influence of returning prosperity is beginning to make itself felt. Julius Baer says that there is a decidedly better tone to the retail market. The people buy with an air of freedom that has been lacking for the last year. They do not quibble so over the price and are willing to pay for a good article. It is certainly encouraging to hear such things, especially when we are in a position to know that the same report is being heard from all quarters.

The demand for flowers last week was good and there was enough supply to take good care of it. However, there was noted a decided shortening in the cut of all varieties of flowers, with the exception of mums. The latter flower is coming in all of its glory and it is selling in a manner to make everyone's heart glad. Carnations showed a decided falling off in the cut, and at the same time a stiffening in the price to something within reason. The same is true of roses, with Beauties off crop and scarce. Violets are beginning to be a factor in the market and they are selling out clean. As is usually the case, the singles are preferred in this market. Lily of the valley is selling well and some fine stock is seen.

The month of October, taken as a whole, shows a good business, as good as last year, if not better. I believe that the general report will show it to have been decidedly better than last year. This is certainly encouraging.

Various Notes.

November 14 is the date for the next meeting of the Florists' Society. Of course the 1909 convention of the S. A. F. is always uppermost in the mind of the members, and each meeting brings forth discussions which will be of great benefit later, when the real work of the committees begins.

George & Allan are sending some of the finest valley they have ever grown into the market now and it sells well.

Visitors during last week were: H. N. Siebenthaler, Springfield, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Broxey, Dayton, O.; Theo. Bock, Hamilton, O., and E. J. Fancourt, Philadelphia, Pa. C. J. OHMER.

Chrysanthemum Novelties

The Prize Winners as Usual

The list I have this year will contain the finest lot of novelties I have ever sent out, and that is saying much. Among them will be Yellow Miller, a yellow sport from the bronze Mrs. J. A. Miller. This is a sterling variety and is bound to make good. Pockett's Crimson, a crimson and gold beauty that I am distributing with Wells this year. Charles H. Totty, an enormous chestnut scarlet. Mrs. O. H. Kahn, a bronze that will depose any bronze we now have. These are already certificated for me.

Other grand ones will be Clara Wells, a lovely incurved yellow; Mrs. G. F. Coster, a deeper yellow than Donnellan; Rose Pockett; Geo. Mileham, 1908; Pockett's Surprise, and many other fine seedlings.

The Market.

There has been no marked change in the conditions of either the market or business. Some good mums are available, but they are not bringing fancy prices. Considerable valley is being used for weddings. Fine cosmos is coming in from Mt. Clemens.

Various Notes.

Peter F. Reuss, who has engaged in the gathering of fancy ferns, with headquarters at Johannesburg, Mich., has been compelled to give up this business. Forest fires burned over this whole territory. In the green forests all the underbrush, ferns, leaves, etc., are gone. Mr. Reuss predicts a scarcity of ground pine this winter, owing to the damage done by fire. He is again in the employ of B. Schroeter.

William Wray, better known as just plain "William," of Sullivan's, is getting along nicely. William received a severe sprain of his back several weeks ago while assisting in the unloading of a case of palms.

Hudson's large store was tastefully decorated by Breitmeyer last week. The store has wide aisles and these were taken advantage of for large groups of palms. Southern smilax, autumn foliage and yellow mums completed the decorations.

Something new, but which will meet with favor with the florists, was sprung on B. Schroeter last week. One of his well-to-do customers, who has just returned from an automobile tour abroad, has his limousine equipped with neat cut glass vases, which screw into a bracket. These vases filled with flowers add a touch of homeness to the interior of the auto which nothing else can equal.

Some fine carnations are being handled by the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House. Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer's, was a recent visitor.

Harry Smillie, of the Rhinebeck Violet Association, was in Detroit November 2. H. S.

AUGUSTA, ME.—C. L. Howe, whose greenhouses are at Dover, N. H., has opened a store at 221 Water street. It will be known as the Augusta Flower Shop and will be under the management of George H. Curtis, who has had many years' experience in the business.

AZALEAS

New Importations==Now Ready

If you have not already secured all the Azaleas that you want for Christmas forcing or later, and Easter flowering, you will find it to your advantage to purchase at once, while the plants can be forwarded by freight, thus saving in cost of transportation, as later, after cold weather, plants will have to be shipped by express, and as Azaleas are heavy, it is to your advantage to order them now and have them shipped while they can travel safely by freight. Besides this, you can secure the varieties wanted before assortments are broken. Plants are in fine shape, well budded, and we offer the best commercial varieties, as follows:

Apollo, Bernard Andreas Alba, Deutsche Perle, Empress of India, Mme Jos. Vervaene, Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Mrs. Petrick, Niobe, Paul Weber, Prof. Wolters, Simon Mardner, and Vervaeneana.

Strong plants, 10 to 12 in. in diameter,	$ 4.80 per doz.;	$35.00 per 100

ERIE, PA.

There is a general increase in the volume of business as the colder days set in.

Presque Isle peninsula is ablaze. The underbrush is burning up fast. The crew from the U. S. steamer Wolverine, here in port for the winter, has been called out to help fight the fire. It is supposed that hunters caused the fire by dropping matches in the dry grass. Considerable damage has been done by the fire.

Many mums were sold for Hallowe'en. Orchids, valley and violets were also in demand.

The Baur Floral Co. has an attractive window display of cattleyas.

Arthur Zirkman, representing M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, was in the city October 24. He carried with him many orders for the holidays.

Vern Schluraff has opened a retail store in Conneaut, O., where he is finding sale for the output of his greenhouses in Erie. He had a large banquet decoration in Conneaut October 28.

J. V. Laver is adding a new greenhouse, 45x135.

A report was received from Oil City recently that R. C. Reynders was struck by a Lake Shore freight train and succumbed to his injuries. B. P.

GREENFIELD, MASS.—P. R. Burt has opened a flower store at 3 Chapman street, in the Charles Dunklee block. The store has been so remodeled as to be thoroughly adapted to its purpose. Mr. Burt was formerly with J. Newman & Sons, of Boston.

Prepare for Thanksgiving and Christmas

We protect the trade. We employ no fakers, no drummers. No department stores handle our goods. We have great faith in Uncle Sam (the mail). He is our partner.

Look at the photo! What a lively time at Aschmann's, the busy bee unpacking his big importations of Azaleas, Palms, etc. We have it. Have what? An immense stock of the choicest salable plants in season and everybody who sees them will be astonished and say, "No use talking, you're a cracker-jack." I am going to make things lively this fall. Five thousand Araucarias, twice as many Ferns, Palms and Azaleas and many thousands of other salable stock must go at panic prices. By Christmas all must be sold. Why? We want the room to force our extensive Easter stock.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS

Amongst Dozens Lately Received.

GODFREY ASCHMANN, Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Sir:—The ferns came safely, and were the cleanest, fairest stock I ever bought. I am greatly pleased, and trust to be able to send you further orders. Very truly,

J. W. MCNEALLY, 64 Oak Street,
Oct. 18, 1908. Newton Upper Falls, Mass.

New Bedford, Mass., Oct. 22, 1908.

MR. GODFREY ASCHMANN, Philadelphia, Pa.
Dear Sir:—Received plants Oct. 20th, shipped by you Oct. 12th, in good condition and was well pleased with them. Respectfully yours,

ARTHUR H. ASHLEY,
236 Hillman Street, New Bedford, Mass.

We lead the country in Araucarias. Have been in the lead in the past; have it now and shall lead in the future.

We have houses full of choice Excelsa robusta compacta and Excelsa glauca; enough to supply the entire country.

Will you pay 50 per cent to 100 per cent more by buying from others who are not specialists? Hope not; the wise are on guard. We are going to sell all of them and without drummers. By jingo, we must sell them; an elephant for 40c, 50c and 60c; a jumbo for 75c to $1.00; and a holy terror in size for $1.25 to $1.50.

TAKE NOTICE!

Plants have grown considerably and are now fully 10 per cent to 20 per cent bigger than advertised below.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitmani and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in sunny houses (not white-washed), which will produce stiff fronds; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 tiers, 10 to 12 inches high, 40c; 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, 6-in. pots, 3 years old, 3 tiers, fine, beautiful plants, $1.25, $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, specimen plants; spring, 1907, importation; suitable for decorations, 5 to 6 years old, 7-in. pots, 5 tiers, 25, 30, 35 to 40 inches high, same in width, beautiful plants, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 to $4.00 each.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Scottii Ferns, never before were as fine, 5-in., 35c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c and 60c; 7-in. pots, very fine, 75c; $1.00 to $1.25.

Pieris, 6-in., 50c.

Whitmani, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, made up or as big as a bushel basket, only $1.00, worth $1.50; 8-in. pans, three large plants in a pan, 75c; 9-in. pans, 3 large plants in a pan, as big as a wash tub, $1.25 to $1.50. We have a big stock of these varieties and they are pot, not bench, grown. Amerpohli, 5-in., 80c, 35c to 40c.

Wilsoni, 6-in. pans, made up, 25c to 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 to 6 good leaves, 5½ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 20 inches high, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, a large one, about 40 inches high, in the center, surrounded by three smaller ones, $4.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 36 inches high, $2.00; specimen, 7-in., 40 to 50 inches high, $2.50 to $3.00; 6-in., 30 inches high, $1.50; 6-in., 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00; 6-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in., 50c; 4-in. pots, 35c.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

While the supply last week was equivalent to that of the week previous, the demand was not so brisk. Especially did the fancy mums, in all colors except yellow, stack up considerably and some report that, even at a much reduced price, compared with last season, they could not be moved. It was the inferior grade that moved best. Roses are still plentiful, with carnations equal to the demand and all other stock in good supply. Even All Saints' day had no marked effect on the local flower market.

Various Notes.

The establishment at North Milwaukee, formerly owned by Aug. Manke, but which has been run as a partnership business the last season, has now passed into the hands of his sons, William and Fred Manke. There are six acres of land, together with the greenhouses and other outfit. As the boys have been on the place from the start, they no doubt will continue to be successful. The firm will be known as Manke Bros.

Wm. Muehl, former manager of the place now occupied by Lutey Bros., North Milwaukee, has accepted a position with Herman Staeps, Elm Grove, Wis.

Quite a delegation from this vicinity will visit the national flower show at Chicago. E. O.

WALTHAM, MASS.—A store was recently opened at the corner of Moody and Robbins streets, by the Waltham Floral Co., of which Carl Frederickson is designated as proprietor, and R. L. Goinsalves as manager.

MARYVILLE, Mo.—Alfred Engelmann, who was formerly a grower for Weiland & Risch, at Evanston, Ill., has bought the greenhouses and business of C. H. Hollied and will do both a wholesale and retail trade. There are two acres of ground and 10,000 square feet of glass. Mr. Engelmann expects to have a good stock on hand by spring. He will devote special attention to wholesale trade in rooted cuttings.

THE REVIEW is the best ever.—WM. MURDOCH, Port Huron, Mich.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

keep the foliage a good color and strengthen the spikes.

Primula obconica also makes a desirable Christmas plant. Some florists object to it on account of the rather poisonous properties of the leaves, but there is no more persistent flowering winter plant. The Buttercup primrose, boomed a year or two ago, seems to have all but vanished and but little is seen of the Baby primrose, P. Forbesii, but the newer P. Kewensis is a decided acquisition, worth increased attention from all florists.

Marguerites.

There is no special call for marguerites while the mum season lasts. The single chrysanthemums discount them, with their varied colors and longer stems. At Christmas there is a good call for both white and yellow marguerites and for flowering thus early it is better to grow the plants in pots, carried-over plants being better for this purpose than young stock. As many of the mums are now out of the way, it is possible to give the marguerites a better position. They do well if allowed to root through the pots into the old chrysanthemum compost, flowering much better treated thus than if planted out.

Succession batches will require potting on and pinching, and nice spring plants can still be had if cuttings are gotten into the sand at once. Marguerites do well under conditions which suit chrysanthemums.

Crotons and Dracaenas.

Crotons and dracaenas will now stand full sunshine and will be of a more brilliant coloring if any remaining shading on the glass is removed. The weather during the present fall has been so warm that much fire heat has not been necessary for them. Now, however, when chill November's surly blasts are here, a warm, genial temperature is a necessity, it being better not to have the temperature below 60 degrees at night. One good hosing on clear days should keep the foliage clean.

As fire heat will now be steadily used, any additional propagation of these and allied fine foliaged plants can be carried on. All will root easily and quickly if the sand is constantly warm and moist.

Paper Whites and Romans.

There is no special advantage in having Paper White narcissus in flower before Thanksgiving, unless there seems likely to be a shortage of other flowers. This bulb can be forced into bloom quickly. It is better grown moderately cool, as the flowers then have more substance.

Roman hyacinths, if given three weeks in a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees, will be in flower. Like the Paper Whites, they are better if opened in a lower temperature.

It is still rather early to start any of the Trumpet majors. We do not like to house any of these before December 1. If well started at that time it is possible to get a picking for Christmas.

Zonal Geraniums.

Keep geranium cuttings on the dry side. It is well to look them over twice a week and pick out any that have damped off and also remove any decaying leaves. A cool, dry, sunny house is the place for bedding geraniums.

Any being grown for winter blooming should now be allowed to produce flower trusses. They will be seasonable from Thanksgiving to Christmas. Bright colored sorts, nicely grown, are salable at the latter holiday. Although many of the singles are beautiful, the average florist prefers the doubles of the Bruant type, on account of their flowers not shaking so easily. Such sorts as E. H. Trego, Ricard, Nutt, John Doyle, Peter Henderson and General Grant are all good, old stand-bys, while of the army of singles Jacquesie, Mrs. E. Rawson, Paul Crampel, Furnessia and Telegraph are good. A dry, airy house held at 50 to 52 degrees at night suits the winter geraniums.

Bulb Planting.

Now is the time to push ahead with the bulb planting. Be sure to loosen the soil up well, and nothing in the way of fertilizer is better than well rotted cow manure. Spent hotbed compost is also good for the same purpose. If the land is clayey, some sharp sand can advantageously be added, but this is not necessary otherwise. While a trowel is best to use for big bulbed narcissi, like Sir Watkin and Emperor, the majority of the bulbs of tulips, hyacinths and narcissi are more easily and quickly planted with a dibble. Avoid tramping on the beds as much as possible. Lay boards for your feet rather than trample over the recently loosened earth. This is especially necessary when the ground is moist.

Cypripedium Insigne.

Insigne remains the most popular of all cypripediums. Its blooms last in fresh condition for three months and the grower of it, if a market for his flowers does not exist one day, can hold it a week or two in water and market it as fresh as ever.

There is no doubt but that frame culture gives stockier and more free-flowering plants than warmer culture. The earliest plants are now starting to bloom, but there is no rush to cut the flowers needed, for these will be just as good at Thanksgiving or Christmas as now. It is doubtful if there is any other orchid which pays more money per square foot of bench space than this old cypripedium. A moderate water supply is still needed, for cypripediums should never be dried off as cattleyas, laelias or dendrobiums are.

Erica Melanthera.

Erica melanthera is unquestionably the most valuable of the heaths, from a commercial standpoint. The ease of propagation and culture, and its free-flowering habit, are sufficient to commend it to all growers of pot plants. At Christmas there is usually a good sale for this old favorite. Plants to be well opened by that time should now go into a cool greenhouse, where no forcing will be attempted, for the plants quickly resent it.

When in full flower the ericas last for many weeks fresh. Nicely bloomed stock in 6-inch or 8-inch pots are always a desirable acquisition to the not very long list of Christmas plants. By holding them in a cold pit they may be retarded as late as Easter. Dry conditions at the root speedily ruin any of the ericeous plants and a careful watch should be made to prevent this.

Greenhouse Heating.

JAMES MCCREA & Co., Chicago, manufacturers of the Climax steam joint clamp and other pipe repairs, have brought suit for infringement against the Simplex Engineering Co., of Philadelphia, who have recently placed a pipe joint clamp on the market.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

How many square feet of glass can be heated by a steel tubular boiler which is thirty-six inches in diameter and eleven feet long, and contains sixty-two 2½-inch tubes, ten feet long? My house is 20x165 and eleven feet to the ridge, with glass ends and eighteen inches of glass in the sides. Will this boiler heat it, and how much more? I am located in south-eastern Massachusetts. A. M.

You do not state whether you intend using the boiler for hot water or for steam. In either case, however, the boiler, properly set and with good fuel, should be able to heat this house and another of the same size. A house as long as this can be more easily heated by steam than by hot water, unless the boiler is placed in the middle of the house and the risers run both ways. With the boiler at one end, steam will give best service, but will require more attention from the fireman than hot water. L. C. C.

STOVE HEAT IN GREENHOUSES.

Please let me reply to A. K. B., who, on page 68 of the REVIEW of October 22, inquires in regard to heating a small greenhouse with a stove. I have three small houses, all separate, and heat each one by a stove, and I have a neighbor who has a similar plant and who heats it that way also. We both grow vegetable plants, with some lettuce early in the spring to fill in, and find no difficulty in maintaining a proper temperature. I have one house, 12x24, in which I kept a varied collection of plants all last winter, including geraniums, salvias, cinerarias, etc., and after January 1 I sowed seeds of double petunias and other bedding plants and had splendid success.

When I tell you that I have done this same thing during a period of more than thirty years, you may suppose that I am qualified to state that it is not such a task as one might suppose.

I can usually pick up a second-hand, base-burning, reservoir stove at the stove stores for about $6 or $8, which I make do me for two or three years, sometimes longer, and then throw it away as junk. I take off the feet and set the stove on the floor about five feet from the end of the house. I run a horizontal pipe back to within three or four feet of the other end of the house and then elbow up to my chimney, which is of galvanized iron, about twelve feet high. I remove one glass in the roof and put an iron plate in its place, with the stove pipe hole in it, and find that a suitable arrangement. Of course I make this chimney permanent by supporting it from the floor. The pipe and chimney are six inches in diameter. The horizontal part requires, in this house, five ordinary lengths of 6-inch stove pipe. I put a bench over this pipe, which is in the middle of the house, and see that the pipe has an upward slope to the chimney. This stove will burn about two ordinary hods of coal every twenty-four hours, in ordinary winter weather.

I find that small ventilators in each end of the house, close to the peak, are far better than the usual arrangement of a much larger sash on one side. I can leave them longer than I dare leave the one large sash.

Right around the stove the ground soon gets dry, but that is easily wet. And for a few feet on either side I notice that the side benches dry quickly, but one soon learns how to manage that. In one corner, by the stove, I have a barrel of water, which carries the temperature of the house and is a convenient arrangement, especially in winter weather.

The mercury here in Pennsylvania gets down pretty low during a few of the winter days and the long nights. To meet these emergencies I have a system of cloth covers which I put on the house, and when they are on I can go to bed with no care of the house on my mind. As to these covers, I make a light frame of sound pine wood, nearly as long as the sashbars and each one three feet wide, and stretch heavy cotton duck on them. With these, when the cold snaps are around, I cover the entire house. Sixteen of these cloth frames, as I call them, will cover a 24-foot house. When they are put on, the temperature in the house runs up in a few minutes far past the danger point, and they are a great success. For more than twenty years I have used similar he has ordinary gumption he will find a way to heat it with a stove and can grow geraniums to the joy of his heart.

As to growing lettuce, my neighbor sows his early lettuce, and cabbage seed also, about February 1, and finishes his lettuce in a house covered with ordinary hotbed sash and heated with a small stove set in the middle of his house. He takes off about three crops. It is grown and marketed in flats and helps quite a little in keeping a man busy at that season of the year. It is not likely that he or I will ever have any other way of heating our houses and we do not know, practically, any other way. I should add that he seldom keeps a fire all winter and rarely starts one before February 1.

The Market.

Trade has been good the last two weeks, with a good supply of stock coming in. Mums take the lead and are coming in heavily, but seem to clean up nicely from day to day and there have been no signs of a glut so far. There have been some fine Appleton in the last week or so, which have been as good as a good many exhibition blooms. Alice Byren, Pink and White Ivory, Marie Liger, Dr. Enguehard, Adelia and a few Bonnaffons are in now, and all are showing up well.

Roses and carnations are coming in quite heavily now and move better than was expected during the mum rush. While prices are not fancy, they have been moving at a good average. The most of the carnations are coming with good stems and the crop is getting heavier every day now. Roses are fine and also plentiful, outside of red, which is still scarce. Killarney is moving finely and seems to please the public in general. Violets are more plentiful, but are not up to the standard, as the stems are rather short and flowers rather small. Greens are still rather scarce here.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club, October 27, it was decided to have a small mum show at the next meeting, which will be held November 10. Each member is going to bring a few good ones, and when they are all together there will probably be a good showing. There will be an open meeting, with music, singing, etc. The dance to be given by the club November 18, in the new K. P. hall, will no doubt be a success and there will be a nice decoration put up by the boys.

The Munk Floral Co. is cutting loads of mums now, as well as roses and carnations.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has been cutting some extra fine Appleton mums, about as fine as ever seen on this market. They were of good size and had nice, clean foliage to the very bottom of the stems, and they have found ready sale.

Taking it on the whole, last week's business was not so bad. The week started in somewhat discouragingly, but brightened up about Thursday and continued so through Saturday. Funeral work and orders for All Souls' day were accountable for the increase, but the present outlook for business is somewhat discouraging. The election and politics seem to have taken the place of flowers.

Business during last month, in general, was not very swift, but stock throughout the month was plentiful, with the exception of one week, when business was at its best and stock was scarce. Carnations, with other stock, have been plentiful and the quality the best. Brides, Maids, Kaisersins, etc., could not be better in size, foliage and color. American Beauties are also in fine shape and sell as well as anything on the market, in the way of roses. Longiflorums and callas are holding their own, while chrysanthemums are as much a favorite this season as ever. The prevailing conditions of the weather during October have been bright, with warm days and frosty nights, but no rain.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. has a fine display of fancy chrysanthemums in the greenhouse, for which there is a most excellent demand. They are cutting some fine blooms from one of their seedling carnations, and they expect to have this variety on exhibition at the national flower show, in Chicago.

Mrs. Hendrichs reports a good business for All Souls' day, and declares it to have been better than last year.

Among the Dayton florists who have already decided to be present at the national flower show, are Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bartholomew, H. M. Altie, Warren G. Matthews, John Boehmer and Herman H. Ritter. R. A. B.

PORTSMOUTH, VA.—Mr. Cotton has opened a store on High street and is selling quantities of outdoor mums. The quality is fair, but the dust has been a trouble on top of heavy dews.

THE PULVERIZED MANURE CO.,

Gentlemen: In reply to your inquiry of how we liked your Shredded Cattle Manure, would say that we took one car as a trial, then we gave you an order for two cars more and now we have just bought of you three hundred tons. We gave your manure a good trial test as follows:

We put nine hundred pounds on a bench three hundred feet long by five and one-half feet wide, as a mulch on Beauties, and on the next bench, of exactly the same size, planted also with Beauties, we put two thousand pounds of rough cattle Manure. After three days the rough Manure had become all washed out, nothing being left but straw and dirt, while your Shredded Manure lasted ten to twelve days and is still doing work.

In making manure water it is fully three or four times as strong as the rough Manure. The advantages of its even quality and the easy and unobjectionable way of handling the Manure, not a pound being wasted, make it cheaper in our opinion than the rough Manure which we can get for simply the cost of freight and loading. Respectfully, BASSETT & WASHBURN.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There has been a decided improvement in the movement of all cut flowers, and on Saturday there was a rush for stock of all kinds. Roses are still plentiful, and no doubt will remain so until after mums are gone. Carnations are moving better and, with the present cool weather, are sure to advance in price. Violets are being received daily and are selling better than heretofore. Some extra fine lilies are seen in the market, but the call is limited. Valley is the finest seen here in a long time and sold well last week. Some good Appleton, Alice Byron and Ivory are to be had.

Various Notes.

All the downtown stores had beautiful window displays for Hallowe'en. Smith & Fetters showed a harvest scene, the background banked with shocks of wheat and the foreground made up of decorated pumpkins and baskets of fancy fruits.

A. Graham & Son had the back of their window of corn stalks, fancy vegetables and some curly cabbage trimmed in novelties. It made an attractive display.

The J. M. Gasser Co. showed a fine lot of Appleton mums before a bank of corn stalks. This firm has been sending in a fine cut of roses from its greenhouses.

Mrs. Cliff reports trade as good. When calling there, the writer found all hands in a rush, with quantities of funeral work, which is the larger part of the business here.

Westman & Getz were heavy buyers last week. They report a great improvement in trade.

J. Vonder Linden, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., was a visitor last week, calling on his trade here.

Mr. Woodworth, of Geneva, was in town on Monday and reports good prospects for a heavy carnation crop.

Mr. Williams, of Williams Bros., Lorain, was in town last week.

R. Walter had some large funeral orders last week.

G. P. Braund & Co. are sending in a good cut of mums at present. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Joseph Bardsley has the sympathy of other members of the trade in the loss of his brother, Robert, who died October 22.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—Joseph Beach, proprietor of the greenhouses on the South Hadley road, is making preparations to build a handsome residence on the knoll back of his present dwelling house. The situation is one of the prettiest spots on the South Hadley road.

The National

Flower Show

November 6 the great show will open in the Coliseum building at Chicago and if you can possibly get away you should by all means come and attend this exhibition. You will profit by doing so, as the exhibits are coming from all parts of the country and from Europe and it will be the biggest show of the kind ever held. You can't afford to miss this show.

We want to meet all of our customers and friends at the show and our Mr. N. J. Rupp will be on hand at the hall to greet you—ask for him when you reach the building and we will do our best to make you welcome.

You are also cordially invited to visit our factory when in the city and see how perfect greenhouse material is made. We shall be pleased to show you the plant at any time.

Don't forget the date, November 6th to 14th, and don't fail to come.

WE are now booking advance orders for Thanksgiving. If you have not yet made up your order, do so, and send it in. There will be a lively demand and there is going to be a scarcity in a few lines. Prosperity is showing itself again. Business will be good. You will need as much, or more stock than last year. Prepare in time. There will be no shortage in Teas. We will have plenty for all and any grade to meet your requirements.

Do not consider the prices below, current prices. We will continue to sell at prices as given in last Week's REVIEW until November 22.

At The National Flower Show Holding This Week, we are Again Sweeping the Deck.

See account of Premiums in this edition of the REVIEW. The best is the cheapest, we give you the best. Write, wire or phone us and see how quickly we execute your orders.

Chrysanthemum Novelties

The Prize Winners as Usual

The list I have this year will contain the finest lot of novelties I have ever sent out, and that is saying much. Among them will be Yellow Miller, a yellow sport from the bronze Mrs. J. A. Miller. This is a sterling variety and is bound to make good. Pockett's Crimson, a crimson and gold beauty that I am distributing with Wells this year. Charles H. Totty, an enormous chestnut scarlet. Mrs. O. H. Kahn, a bronze that will depose any bronze we now have. These are already certificated for me.

Other grand ones will be Clara Wells, a lovely incurved yellow; Mrs. G. F. Coster, a deeper yellow than Donnellan; Rose Pockett; Geo. Mileham, 1908; Pockett's Surprise, and many other fine seedlings.

Preliminary List Now Ready

Mrs. Marshall Field Won First Place

Over three other splendid entries. The flowers were cut from the houses shown in the above illustration. Every rose grower should Visit our greenhouses and see it growing.

We have eight houses of it this season and we know that every grower who sees it growing will want some of it next season. You can see it's a money-maker the minute you step in the houses. Good in winter and GRAND in summer. To be disseminated in 1909: 2½-in. (all grafted), $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000. Book orders now.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS SCORES A SUCCESS WITH ITS FIRST EXHIBITION

THE GREATEST EXHIBITION EVER HELD IN AMERICA.

In the nature of things it was inevitable that the trade should be keenly critical of the national flower show. Inspired at the Washington convention of the S. A. F., the years of preparation aroused the anticipations of the craft to the point where nothing short of perfection was looked for, in exhibits, in arrangement, in management, and in the thousand and one details connected with so large an undertaking. It is natural that there should have been some failures in the smaller matters, but the large fact stands out that, to the Chicago public, the national flower show eclipses in interest anything heretofore held in that city. Chicago was chosen as the city in which to try the experiment of a national exhibition, because its shows have been the largest in the country and have been responded to by the public more generally than in any other city. That the national flower show, at an advanced admission price, is drawing more people day after day than ever before attended, and that the public has nothing but words of highest praise, is a better indication than any trade judgment as to the success of this first national exhibition.

It is a nine days' show, from November 6 to 14, and favored by splendid weather there was no sign of waning public interest after six days. Sunday, November 8, broke all records for attendance.

The Plan of Arrangement.

After having held a number of successful shows in the Coliseum, the management was confronted with the necessity of providing an arrangement which would at once impress the visitor with being different from the arrangement of the preceding shows. To this end suggestions were asked from a number of sources, the final selection being a plan of arrangement supplied by A. Z. Fraser, the designer whose decorative effects have caused the store of Marshall Field & Co. to have a world-wide reputation in this line. The central idea was a lawn effect, with pergolas—four of them—each being seventeen feet high, twelve feet wide and seventy feet long. Their use in the center of the Coliseum cut in badly upon the floor space for exhibits, but added immensely to the facility with which the crowds could be handled, there being a walk beneath each pergola. It is said that the taste for pergolas resembles that for olives, in that it is an acquired taste, and also in that, once acquired, one's liking grows apace. Many of the trade visitors had neglected to acquire much better than at first thought, and in the end practically every florist gave the scheme of arrangement his unqualified approval. The only trouble was that it shut off the view from the balconies, in a measure.

At the opening a great many of the splendid specimen plants were badly crowded, hiding their perfection; but as the days progressed the management spread them out, each day showing an improvement in the general effect. The public said the general effect of the show was the best ever. The balcony was obscured by a lavish use of wild smilax, and this material also was used around the lights in the roof, with excellent result. It also constituted the vines on the pergolas. If there was anything lacking in public estimation, it was the row of retail exhibits, which in recent years have occupied the spaces under the balconies.

Exhibits From East and West.

As a start at a national exhibition this show must be considered good. The eastern exhibits were not as numerous Wm. F. Kasting.

(Chairman National Flower Show.)

the pergola habit, and for them at least a second look was necessary before they liked the arrangement. It proved, however, on closer acquaintance, to be very as had been anticipated, but several exhibitors came up with a large number of entries, and enormous quantities of stock, and to them a full measure of credit should be given. W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., brought a double express car of finer decorative plants than ever have been seen in Chicago. The Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., and Henry A. Dreer, Riverton, N. J., each sent a carload of stock.

Chrysanthemum cut blooms came from C. H. Totty, Harry Turner, A. J. Loveless, Thomas Proctor, R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., and other eastern exhibitors. There were roses from Cromwell, Conn., and Natick, Mass.; ferns from Massachusetts and Tarrytown; roses and carnations, as well as decorative plants, from Philadelphia and Tarrytown, and one exhibit, a good vase of Appleton chrysanthemums, came from as far west as Herman Bros. Co., Council Bluffs, Ia. Kansas City, also, was represented. While many eastern exhibits which had been expected failed to materialize, there was probably as great a number, and certainly as large a quantity, as could reasonably have been expected for a first attempt at a national exhibition.

The quality of the exhibits was never equaled at a Chicago show. The easterners, in every instance, brought perfectly finished stock. The cut blooms were many of them a revelation to western growers, and the specimen plants were beyond question better than anything heretofore seen at Chicago.

One European Exhibit.

The exhibit was made international by the presence of one exhibit from Europe, that of M. Calvat, of Grenoble, France, who sent a display of fifteen cut blooms of chrysanthemums, which arrived in excellent condition and attracted a vast amount of public attention. The varieties were: Calvat 137, light yellow; Calvat 148, bronzy red; Mme. Louis Dolle, white; Souv. de Vienne, light yellow; La Capitol, bronzy yellow; Calvat 2, pale pink; Commandant Mathiew, yellow; Calvat 3, white; Calvat 133, bronze; Calvat 4, light yellow; Calvat 189, red; Souv. de Raymond, white; Calvat 1, yellow; Calvat 169, red. La Capitol appeared the best thing in the lot. It was a large, incurved flower of distinct color and had traveled perfectly; indeed, the entire lot was in fine shape on arrival and stood up well throughout the show.

The Eastern Cut Mums.

C. H. Totty brought from Madison, N. J., a set of the season's novelties, which marked another advance in chrysanthemums. Pockett's Crimson is an enormous flower of a magnificent glowing crimson, about the shade of the old George W. Childs. The tips of the petals incurve just enough to show a golden tint. Yellow Miller is, as the name indicates, a yellow sport from Mrs. J. A. Miller, and by many is considered the best novelty of the season. Mrs. O. H. Kahn was another of his flowers which attracted special attention.

Harry Turner, gardener for Howard Gould, at Port Washington, N. Y., brought some splendid cut blooms, among which was the best vase of 100 William Duckham which ever has been put up in the west; western growers cannot get such results with this variety. A. J. Loveless, president of the Chrysanthemum Society, and Thomas Proctor, also of Lenox, Mass., brought some splendid blooms, and were, in most cases, first in the classes in which they were entered.

Special interest attached to the exhibits of pompon and single chrysanthemums, the display of these being many times larger than in any previous Chicago exhibition. There were ten entries in some of the competitive classes, and as many as eight entries in most of them. A number of these exhibits were from the eastern seaboard, among the ones from that section being exhibits from Totty, Vincent and the Craig Co. The E. G. Hill Co., Elmer D. Smith and other western growers also were largely represented with these small flowers of greatly increasing favor, and these same western growers, Hill, Smith and H. W. Buckbee, were on hand, as usual at Chicago shows, with entries in practically all the classes for cut blooms of chrysanthemums. They never staged better stock. Smith's President Taft was the center of special interest to the public because of the press work done for it the day after election, and the growers thought it a good commercial sort. November 10 Mr. Smith put up an exhibit of 438 varieties, one bloom of each, that was one of the specially interesting features of the show. Local commercial growers of mums also put up fine exhibits, especially Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Bassett & Washburn, with many less numerous represented.

The pot plants of chrysanthemums were finer than ever seen at Chicago. The principal exhibitors were, as usual, Vaughan's Seed Store and H. W. Buckbee, but each of the local private gardeners was represented by one or more plants and all were excellent specimens. Vaughan, Buckbee, and Frank Oechslin each had excellent groups of chrysanthemum plants arranged for effect.

Splendid Decorative Plants.

The quality of the decorative plants was especially noteworthy. It hardly could be possible to find finer specimens anywhere in the United States than were gathered together for this show. To W. A. Manda special mention is due, because of the quality, number and size of his exhibits. The only regret was that it seemed difficult to provide each one with space to show its perfect development. He had a number of palms which stood fifteen to twenty feet high and scores of large plants in tubs, specimens weighing many hundreds of pounds each. To transport them to Chicago he engaged a special express car at South Orange, N. J., and filled it with stock without wrapping. One of his special groups was of Dracæna Mandaiana. He also made an exhibit of landscape plans, which was the subject of much study by those interested in the matter.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., also brought a carload of plants, including many large specimens and rare varieties, but also including more of the commercial stock.

Henry A. Dreer had a group occupying 200 square feet, made up of a large variety of decorative plants in commercial sizes displayed on the Moore-Livingston plant stand. Special mention in this group should be made of the large sizes of Cocos Weddelliana and of the Adiantum Farleyense. Dreer also had a separate group of Nephrolepis Scholzei, the crested sport of Scottii.

The Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, aside from its entries in the competitive rative plants, and the George Wittbold Co., Chicago, was represented, as usual, by a large group arranged as a part of the landscape effect. It was too much crowded to show the individuality of the specimens.

New Ferns.

Among the commercial men much interest centered in the displays of the new ferns. Competing for the award as "best" were F. R. Pierson's Nephrolepis elegantissima compacta. Dreer's Nephrolepis Scholzei, H. H. Barrows & Son's sport of Nephrolepis Barrowsii and W. A. Manda's Polypodium Mandaianum. The judges took three days to deliberate on this class, so difficult was it to determine which one should be singled out as better than the others. They finally settled upon Polypodium Mandaianum to receive the silver medal, and thereby skillfully avoided the issue as between the *nephrolepis*s.

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, had a table of Superbissima and Elegantissima compacta in a large range of sizes; also another new fern named Viridissima, which is a sport from Superbissima and shows that the variation has progressed from the Boston through Piersoni and succeeding sports to Superbissima and now back closely to Boston type, with the evidence of its more immediate ancestors. The Pierson Co. also had a table showing a large number of the now numerous sports following Boston. Geny Bros., Nashville, had a finely crested nephrolepis named Geneyii.

classes, had a group of Ficus pandurata, of crotons in a large number of varieties, and of Pandanus Pacifica, which latter especially attracted attention.

The C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, had a group of palms, ferns and deco-Miscellaneous Groups.

E. G. Uihlein, formerly president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, had a number of large decorative groups, and also his usual entry in the orchid class, with a number of specimen plants in the miscellaneous plant classes. Each one was worthy of mention, but his plant of Cibotium regale was noticeable as undoubtedly the finest cibotium which the public has seen at a Chicago exhibition. J. J. Mitchell was also represented by a fine group from his Lake Geneva conservatories. The South parks and Lincoln park each contributed a large group for effect.

The Roses.

The competition in the rose classes was not as keen as had been anticipated, nor so great as at recent Chicago shows. The quality of the stock, however, left nothing to be desired and each exhibitor managed to annex a few of the blue ribbons. Interest in these classes was stimulated by the presence of several new varieties. A local display of My Maryland, pink, defeated an exhibit of White Killarney, which had come a thousand miles, from Tarrytown, N. Y., to contest for the prize as the best new rose. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, also exhibited White Killarney, but not for exhibition, their flowers having come from the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass. When this variety can be eties, together with several now under trial at his place.

The competition for 100 Beauties, which always is a center of interest to the trade, was divided into two sections. The first day William Dittmann carried off the first prize, with Poehlmann Bros. Co., Bassett & Washburn and Peter Reinberg following in the order named. The competition was close, but the entries not numerous enough to suit the management, which sent out a special letter to growers soliciting entries for the second day's competition, November 11. The net result was that Dittmann dropped out and there were but three entries, which left the $25 fourth prize uncompleted for. Poehlmann Bros. Co. was first, Bassett & Washburn second, and Peter Reinberg third. New roses staged November 11 were few, White Killarney and Mrs. Marshall Field carrying off the honors. White Killarney was given a cup in a class for twelve blooms of a variety not previously exhibited, but only second in a class for any variety not yet in commerce, no first being awarded, the judges possibly going on the theory that one cup ought to be enough for one day. Mrs. Field in a class for pink rose for summer culture beat out a magnificent vase of Killarney staged by Bassett & Washburn, also W. R. Smith, by the South Park Floral Co., and Killarney from Poehlmann Bros. Co.

A. S. Swanson, St. Paul, put up a vase of Pink Beauty, his sport of Prin-as a dozen entries in the class for fifty White Perfection, and in quantity the showing was as great as any ever seen at an autumn exhibition in this country. For quality, the display was noteworthy. The season has not been a good one for carnations, and the general quality of the stock in the Chicago market has not been so good as usual in the last few weeks. This was expected to be apparent in the carnation display, but the reverse was the case, for the exhibits were up to the best previous records and of uniformly high quality; nothing further was to have been desired on this score. While the bulk of the exhibits came from nearby growers, the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., had several exhibits. There was one from Long Island, another from Philadelphia, several from Pittsburg, Cincinnati and nearer points, so that the whole country was fairly represented.

It was noticeable that the classes for "any other variety" were not competed for anywhere near so closely as those for the named varieties, indicating how the list of generally grown sorts has narrowed down, in spite of the steady increase in new varieties. Poehlmann Bros. Co. carried off the premier award, a gold medal, for best 100 blooms in the show, with White Perfection.

There was a large attendance of carnation growers the day the blooms were staged, and, naturally, their interest centered in the newer sorts. O. P. Bassett, the new red, did itself much credit. The growers liked the color and fullness of President Taft, exhibited by Scheiden & Schoos. It is a bold, striking flower. Two promising whites were shown, Georgia, from J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., and Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, from Mount Greenwood cemetery. Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., exhibited Dorothy Gordon, a rose-pink of the Enchantress type, and the Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O., had a seedling of Lawson shade, of which a good vase was put up. The Charles Knopf Floral Co. showed Mrs. Knopf and Ruby, which are to be sent out this year, with some seedlings which are under trial. The Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., exhibited Apple Blossom and Wanoka. Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, showed its yellow novelty, named James Whitecomb Riley. F. Dorner & Sons Co., R. Witterstaetter and several others had exhibits of seedlings which could only be shown in small quantity. Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa., exhibited Alvin, both cut blooms and pot plants, which were well liked.

Orchids.

The orchids were a special feature for November 10, and the display was one of the finest ever seen in the west. Julius Roehrs Co. staged an especially striking group, containing several hundred plants in fine flower and so arranged that it was one of the spectacular features of the show. W. A. Manda and Lager & Hurrell also were splendidly represented. E. G. Uihlein had some nice plants.

Included in the Roehrs and Manda groups, and in Lager & Hurrell's, were some valuable specimens and many rare things, but the general public looks upon an orchid as an orchid, providing it is a cattleya, and the cattleyas invariably are the center of attraction. Nothing in the show attracts greater attention.

staged by local growers, the indications are it will outclass all other whites.

Peter Reinberg's Mrs. Marshall Field won out in the class for 100 "any other variety" over four excellent entries. Mr. Reinberg maintained a table of roses throughout the show, renewing the stock each day and staging a vase of each one of the commercial vari-cess of Naples, a pleasing color and good keeper.

The Carnations.

In the annex Vaughan's Seed Store occupied a large space with an exhibit representing a neglected backyard, and the same yard horticulturally embellished. Probably the exhibit will do as much as anything in the show in the way of actually increasing the demand for plants and flowers.

The flower booth, for the sale of blooms, is conducted for the Chicago Florists' Club, by Mrs. T. E. Waters, and is doing a prosperous business.

A. Lange maintained an exhibit of brides' bouquets, corsage bouquets, baskets, etc., which was a center of attraction.

In the annex Vaughan's Seed Store occupied a large space with an exhibit representing a neglected backyard, and the same yard horticulturally embellished. The before-taking side of the picture never failed to provoke a laugh, and the after-taking side was admirably executed. Probably the exhibit will do as much as anything in the show in the way of actually increasing the demand for plants and flowers.

The flower booth, for the sale of blooms, is conducted for the Chicago Florists' Club, by Mrs. T. E. Waters, and is doing a prosperous business.

Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass., sent an exhibit of cyclamen plants grown from seed in fourteen months, well in flower.

J. W. Dudley, Parkersburg, W. Va., had a display of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in good shape.

E. M. Barton put up a fine table of vegetables.

The information booth is in charge of the private gardeners, Emil Bollinger, chairman, and their selection for this duty was a most happy one.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, is present, but his exhibit is at the Great Northern hotel, where he has a large line of florists' supplies.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. rented a vacant store a few doors south of the Coliseum for a display of heating apparatus.

NATIONAL SHOW BANQUET.

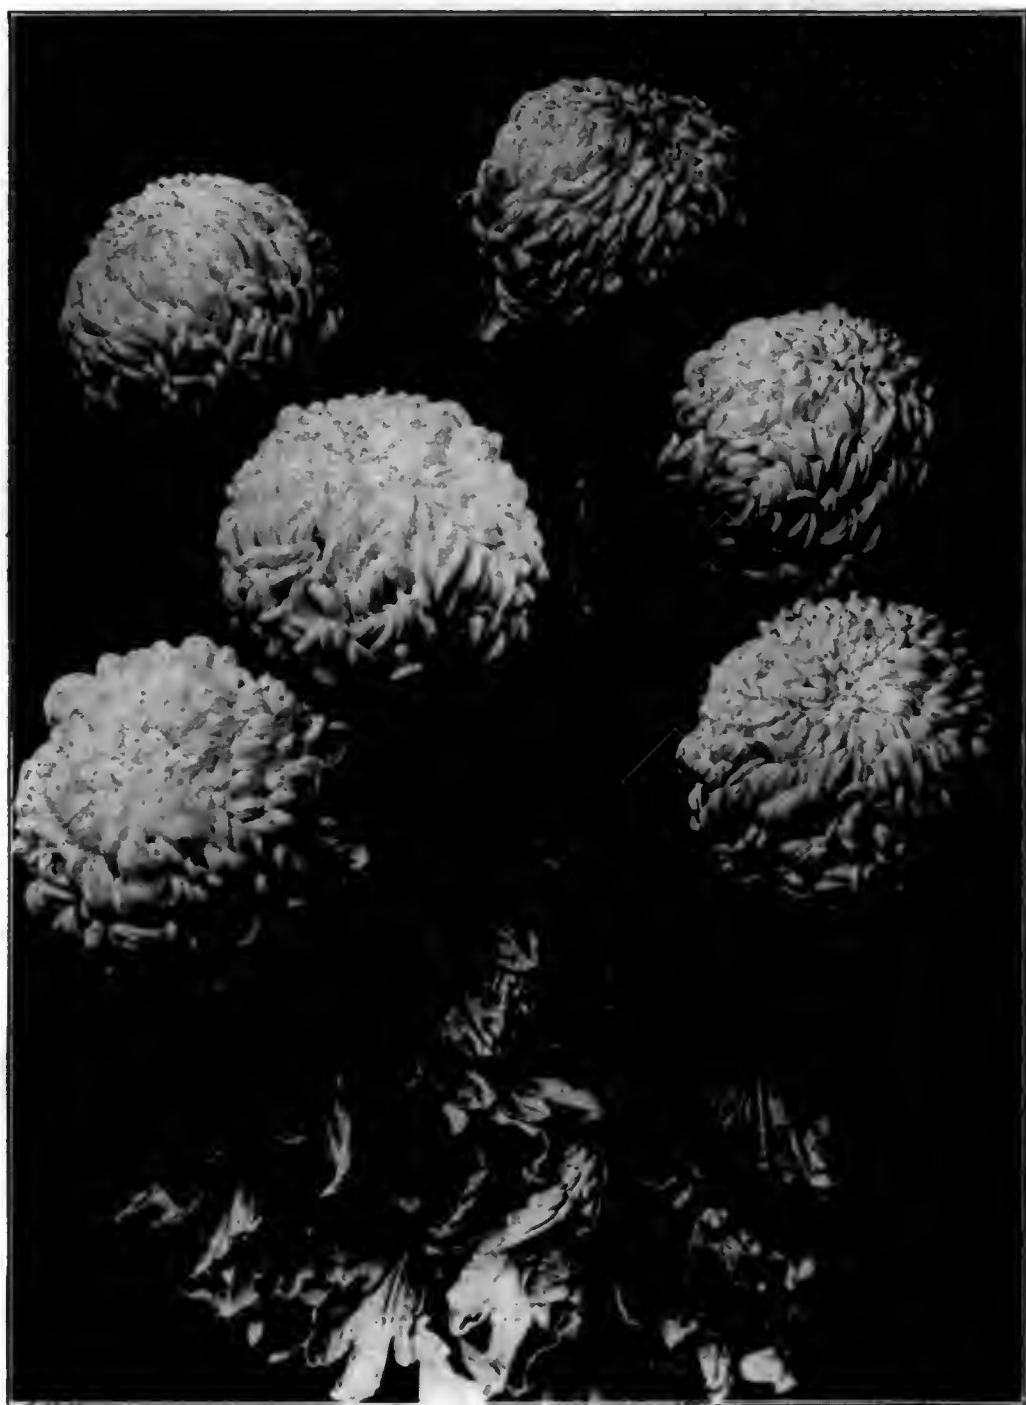

The banquet to visiting florists at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, November 10, was a love feast as well, also the most notable gathering of horticulturists ever brought together in this country. Practically every state in the Union was represented, and Canada also. The keynote of the evening was struck by President Leonard Kill when he said that Chicago took for itself only small credit for the local part of national preparation made for the great exhibition, and that Chicago was abundantly repaid for any effort by the presence of so large and so representative a gathering.

Between 400 and 500 were present, more than 100 ladies being among the guests. It was the first time in the history of these annual flower show banquets at Chicago that the ladies have graced the occasion, and nearly every speaker had a word to say in recognition of the additional pleasure their presence gave. The menu was as follows:

MENU.

Blue Points
Consomme Brunoise
Relishes
Filet of Sole, Sauce Tartare
Haut Sauternes
Tenderloin of Beef au Madere
Parisienne Potatoes	French Peas
Pineapple Sherbet
Chicken Salad
Napolitaine Ice Cream
Cakes	Coffee
	Cigars
	Cheese

President Kill spoke briefly in welcome and introduced W. N. Rudd to propose the toasts of the evening. Mr. Rudd read a telegram of congratulations from the New York Florists' Club, sent from its meeting the evening before, and then introduced J. A. Valentine, of Denver, president-elect of the S. A. F.

Mr. Valentine referred humorously to the Chicago habit of each man speaking his own mind and then all putting their shoulders to the wheel in united effort for the general good. He said the Chicago florists are the best fighters, the best makers-up, and the best workers he ever had seen, and that the success which has attended the first national flower show marks a new era for the S. A. F. He said he is sanguine as to the future because he believes that the stronger the society becomes the faster it will grow.

President F. H. Traendly, not being able to remain at Chicago for the banquet, Toastmaster Rudd introduced E. V. Hallock, of Queens, N. Y., as his oratorical representative. Mr. Hallock said Mr. Traendly appreciates most thoroughly the effort which has been put into this first exhibition of the national society and that he was instructed to voice Mr. Traendly's thanks to the florists not only of Chicago, but of the whole country for the good work done. For himself, Mr. Hallock said that Chicago was entitled to special credit for daring to undertake so monumental an exhibition, involving not only large financial outlay, but the expenditure of a vast amount of close thought and hard work. He said he thinks the eastern exhibitors are to be congratulated on making as good a showing as has been done, a thousand miles from home.

For the American Carnation Society, M. A. Patten, of Tewksbury, Mass., was called upon to tell how the section of the show under its supervision has been made by far the grandest display of its special flower ever brought together at this season of the year. He said it was simply because each one had done his best. He added a word for the society's annual exhibition at Indianapolis in January, saying he hopes for the same united support for that event.

President-elect Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., was called upon for the Chrysanthemum Society, but evidently had gone back to the hall to admire the blooms, and the toastmaster called upon August Poehlmann, of Chicago, president of the American Rose Society.

Mr. Poehlmann said he was delighted with the attendance at the banquet; it gave him much pleasure to see at the tables old friends from New England, from New Orleans, and from the Pacific Coast. He said he was sorry the showing of roses had failed something of realizing the high hopes of the rose men and said they expect a large attendance at the rose meeting at Buffalo next spring.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., was called upon to speak for the Illinois State Florists' Association. He said the society is a recent graft upon the parent plant, but that it is expected it will in time become a great and flourishing branch, working along a little different lines but for the general good.

W. F. Kasting, chairman of the general committee on national flower show, commented on the banquet as being like the national flower show, a new departure, and on a broader plan than anything in the past. He said he never has seen so many representative florists together at such an event, nor so many ladies. He said that while the show is not as national in exhibits as had been hoped, the attendance of members of the trade is especially gratifying. He said that every member of the committee of fifty has given the chairman excellent support and that on November 9 twenty-five of the eastern members met at the Coliseum, unanimously endorsed the work of the Chicago management, and adopted a resolution asking the next national show for one of the larger eastern cities. He said such a show helps business all over the country, for the present one is attracting the attention of the press throughout the Union. Speaking of the financial side, he said it is hoped the guarantors may receive back the sums advanced for preliminary work.

J. C. Vaughan said Chicago has received full credit for all it has done and he would like to see more recognition for the good work of representatives of other cities; while the show falls a little short of meeting what had been hoped for, it is at least a good start and much of the hard work has been done by others than Chicagoans. Many Chicago exhibitors stayed out merely to make room for outside exhibits. A grateful feature is the large attendance from a distance, making the show universal in point of attendance. He said it is glory enough to Chicago to have inaugurated such a movement.

Judge Vesey, of Fort Wayne, was called upon as the right hand man of the president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists and told a couple of good stories, one at the expense of the toastmaster and another at the expense of the introducers of novelties.

F. R. Pierson said he wanted to acknowledge such splendid hospitality as had greeted him everywhere, and that he wanted to publicly recognize the great difficulties of the management of such an initiatory undertaking in national exhibitions. He said the east hopes to have the second national show, but appreciates the amount of work and responsibility entailed. He said the present gathering was the most representative he ever had seen. Speaking of the desirability of securing the assistance of wealthy men, he said as soon as this is possible these national shows will become annual events.

John N. May, of Summit, N. J., said the evening was one of the most enjoyable he ever had spent. In over three decades he had not seen so splendid a gathering of florists, and he said he hoped the presence of the ladies would be an example to the fraternity throughout the country, and that they might always grace such future occasions. He said the national show was a credit to its name, a grand success artistically, and he hoped it would turn out so financially.

Mr. Rudd spoke a word for the good work of the superintendent, J. B. Deamud, who could not be present, and P. J. Foley and George Asmus each were called upon and spoke briefly.

During the banquet and throughout the evening there was a vaudeville program by amateur friends of Duncan A. Robertson, of the E. Wienhoeber Co., which added immensely to the enjoyment of the occasion. Miss Then, daughter of Anton Then, was one of the soloists and was warmly encored, as were each of the others on the program.

Following the banquet many of the visitors attended the annual reception and dance of the employees of the E. Wienhoeber Co., at the Svithoid club, where festivities continued till a late hour.

The Ladies' S. A. F. participated in a theater party for the opera "Lohengrin" on Wednesday afternoon, November 11.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America held its annual meeting at the Coliseum, Chicago, November 7. President Alfred J. Loveless, of Lenox, Mass., occupied the chair and Thomas Jenkinson, of Pittsburg, acted as secretary pro tem in the absence of David Fraser. President Loveless, in his address, spoke in part as follows:

President's Address.

During the year some increase of membership has been apparent, and the work of the society is still being carried on effectively, but there remains much to be accomplished.

As time passes some active workers drop from our roll of membership and drift from our ranks without any particular reason, but to the faithful few who have the interest of the society at heart, we owe a debt of gratitude.

With such a widely scattered board of officers, and the few opportunities for meeting to discuss the work of the society, it is essential that every member make an effort to procure new members, and also try to attend the annual meeting and present his ideas for the government and improvement of this society. I would urge upon the state vice-presidents the importance of presenting the work and aims of our society to the horticulturists of their particular states on every possible occasion, taking advantage of exhibitions and society meetings to canvass for new members, and so do their part in building up the parent society.

A special meeting was called in March last, when the executive committee received the report of the committee on affiliation appointed at the last annual meeting, and a scheme was presented and approved, the same having been submitted to the various horticultural societies throughout the country, but with little response, principally through the lateness of the season at which the terms of affiliation were mailed, and a clause which called for notice to be given by April 1. An extension of time, to October 1, was deemed advisable, with the result that one society became affiliated at the last moment, and the affiliation trophy brought out spirited competition, adding much to the attractiveness of its exhibition. The advantage of having a national trophy for competition at home should alone be an inducement to the many societies to become united with us, and I feel sure that many will favorably consider this matter in due course, and assist in building up the C. S. A. locally, and add to the importance of their own exhibitions.

In the past attention has been particularly directed to the production of enormous flowers, but the limit of perfection has not yet been reached. Few ever thought that Chrysanthemiste Montigny could be produced in such perfection as those superb blooms exhibited at the New York meeting, or that Mrs. William Elmer D. Smith.

HUDSON, N. Y.—R. W. Allen's three houses of chrysanthemums make a magnificent display at present and are attracting many visitors. There are over fifty varieties of this flower in his stock.

Duckham could develop such dimensions as those perfect specimens exhibited on that occasion.

Perfection of form should be the aim of our hybridists, and not only a bloom of immense size, but a combination of these good points is desirable. The chrysanthemum season is being extended in both directions, and by a judicious selection of varieties, blooms may be had from early August to January.

The increasing interest in single and pompon chrysanthemums made it necessary to adopt a standard scale of points for judging, which will be presented by the committee at this meeting, and to get started in the right direction several growers were invited to send an exhibit of their varieties to the present exhibition for classification and registration of names, duplicates being both undesirable and confusing. The classes for singles can be largely increased at future exhibitions, when some basis for judging has been adopted, and I trust this is a step in the right direction, to place the single chrysanthemum before the public and establish its usefulness as a decorative plant for the florist as well as the private gardener. Its light, graceful sprays, admitting of such treatment as would be impossible with the large blooms, and its being inexpensive, bring it within the reach of all, to be a new source of income to the grower, and a satisfactory investment for the purchaser.

There are still some insect pests for which we have not yet found a reliable remedy. With the adoption of fumigation by the aid of hydrocyanic acid gas, green and black fly no longer worry us, but the cinch bug causes more damage to chrysanthemums generally than is supposed, and is not easily prevented, except by strenuous means that jeopardize the life of the plants as well. A safe and effective fumigating agent has yet to be found for dealing with these pests.

To the several committees appointed for judging seedlings, who so faithfully fulfill the duties assigned to them, we are deeply grateful, and every exhibitor of chrysanthemums owes his success, indirectly, to the efforts of these men, who advise us of the sterling qualities of the new varieties submitted to them for judgment; their work alone is a sufficient reason for the existence and general support of the Chrysanthemum Society.

Other Reports.

Secretary Fraser's report showed twenty-two new names added to the roll last year, offsetting the loss by dropping all those who have not paid their dues.

Treasurer John N. May reported a balance last year of $340.41; receipts this year, $280; disbursements, $309.09; balance, $311.32.

C. H. Totty, for the committee on scale of points for judging singles and pompons, submitted the following, which was adopted:

Pompons.		Singles.
Color	40	Color	40
Form	20	Form	20
Stem and foliage..	20	Substance	20
Fullness	20	Stem and foliage..	20
Total	100	Total	100

The singles to be divided into two classes, the large-flowered and small-flowered types, Mrs. E. Roberts and Miss A. Holden being examples of the former and Nancy Pekin of the latter type. Singles not to contain over three rows of petals.

Chrysanthemum Pockett's Crimson.

Officers Elected.

Officers for 1909 were elected as follows:

President—Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.

Vice-president—Harry Turner, Port Washington, N. Y.

Treasurer—John N. May, Summit, N. J.

Secretary—C. W. Johnson, Rockford, Ill.

PROTECTING COSMOS.

Cosmos Lady Lenox is such a strikingly beautiful flower that its early destruction by frost is nothing less than deplorable.

There is no reason why any gardener or florist should lose these beautiful flowers by the first nipping frost, when all that is required to save them is the erection of a movable shelter of boards. Or it may only be necessary to enclose the sides and ends with boards, and then merely perfect the protection by covering the top with burlap or some other material of like character when the state of the weather indicates a need for such protection. By taking a little trouble in the manner indicated, a supply of these beautiful flowers can be had for an extended period. M.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

BOSTON.

The exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which closed November 9, was the best held for several years. Chrysanthemums, both pot plants and cut blooms, were more numerous and of much better quality than a year ago, while the orchid groups were great attractions. The growing interest in single chrysanthemums was evidenced by the large entries of these, which seemed to attract visitors even more than the big blooms. Specimen plants, which were conspicuously absent last year, were again in evidence, but of more moderate size than those formerly seen in Boston.

Decorated dinner tables for ten covers of chrysanthemums brought out six entries. The first prize went to Edward MacMulkin, who used white pompon, Prince of Wales. Mrs. E. M. Gill, who was second, had an effective table, Bonaffon being the variety used. Sidney Hoffman was third with his centerpiece of Pink Ivory. There was an evident disposition to overdo the decorations on several tables. Decorated fruit tables attracted considerable attention. Isaac Locke & Co. were first in this class, with E. MacMulkin second. Groups of orchids arranged with foliage plants brought out a good competition. The prizes offered were $75, $60 and $50; first went to Seth Borden, F. Varden gardener; Wheeler & Co. being second and E. MacMulkin third. The second prize group was finely arranged, but lacked variety.

For six vases of carnations, fifty blooms in each, William Nicholson won with a splendid lot, his varieties being Mrs. Patten, Afterglow, White Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Beacon and Enchantress; C. S. Strout, who was a good second, showed Victory, Beacon, Winsor, Enchantress, White Enchantress and White Perfection; Backer & Co. were third. S. J. Reuter had a nice vase of Rose Mrs. Jardine, awarded honorable mention, and Waban Rose Conservatories with White Killarney received a silver medal. This rose was one of the leading attractions of the show.

Edward MacMulkin took first and second for best 300 feet group of flowering and foliage plants. Joseph Breck & Sons were first for group of hardy coniferous trees, New England Nurseries second. For best specimen chrysanthemum, Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, won first prize of $50 and a silver medal with a beautiful plant of Garza; Thomas Proctor, James Marlborough gardener, second and fourth, and Mrs. W. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener, third. W. H. Elliott had the best twenty-five commercial specimens. There was a strong entry for twelve single flowering varieties; Mrs. Frederick Ayer, George Page gardener, was first and third; W. A. Riggs, second. The best varieties shown were: Bessie Kennedy, Mrs. S. Untermeyer, Mrs. E. A. Isaacs, Irene Craig and Miss E. Partridge. Mrs. A. W. Blake was first for six plants with six flowers to a plant.

The Gane memorial prize went to James Nicol with a superb vase of Mrs. Jerome Jones, equal to any of the newer introductions in the hall; G. W. Knowlton second. For six vases, ten blooms each, W. S. & J. T. Spaulding, F. E. Cole gardener, won with Dr. Enguehard, Mrs. W. Duckham, Miriam Hankey, Mrs. H. A. Allen, Col. Appleton and Souv. de Calvat Pere. For twenty-five blooms distinct, M. F. Plant, T. W. Head gardener, led, followed very closely by W. A. Riggs and Peter B. Robb. Some of the best flowers shown in this class were: Guy Hamilton, General Hutton, M. F. Plant, Mrs. J. E. Dunne, F. S. Vallis, Mrs. H. Partridge, Miss Clay Frick, Lady Hope-toun, Miriam Hankey, Merstham Crimson, Mrs. W. Duckham, Mary Inglis and F. A. Cobbold. With twelve blooms Japanese, M. F. Plant won, Peter B. Robb second. Mrs. Lester Leland, Eric Wetterlow gardener, was a good first for twelve Japanese incurved with excellent blooms of Mrs. D. V. West, Mrs. George Heaume, Mrs. H. Barnes, Yellow Eaton, W. M. Moir, Dr. Enguehard, Miriam Hankey, Glenview, Mrs. G. E. Neil, Col. Appleton, Mary Donnellan and Mrs. H. Partridge; W. S. & J. T. Spaulding second. Mr. Wetterton was also well in the lead for twelve reflexed with capital blooms of Mrs. J. E. Dunne, Mrs. W. A. Etherington, Reginald Vallis, Mrs. Norman Davis, Mrs. Duckham, O. H. Broomhead, Mary Mason, President Viger, General Hutton and Souv. de la Countesse Reily. The same exhibitor was first for anemone flowered; Mrs. J. M. Sears, W. C. Ritchie gardener, second. Peter B. Robb and Bellevue Greenhouses won on pompons.

For twelve vases singles, Mrs. F. Ayer was first and second, W. D. Sloane, F. Heeremans gardener, third. For large vase of 100 blooms, W. W. Edgar & Co. led with a splendid vase of Bonnaffons; M. F. Plant second with a splendid vase;

W. W. Edgar & Co. third; Edgar Bros. fourth. For ten blooms pink, W. A. Riggs, M. F. Plant and W. S. & J. T. Spaulding won in order named. For white, James Nicol, G. W. Knowlton and M. F. Plant. For yellow, W. A. Riggs and M. F. Plant. For red, W. A. Riggs. For any other color, M. F. Plant, W. A. Riggs and G. W. Knowlton. M. F. Plant had the best six new varieties.

Among miscellaneous exhibits were the following: Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. Thatcher gardener, group of palms and flowering plants; the same exhibitor received a certificate of merit for specimen plant of Alpinia Sanderæ; W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, had a group of palms and chrysanthemums; Thomas E. Proctor a beautiful group of Garza chrysanthemums arranged with palms, also standard chrysanthemums; F. W. Fletcher had seedling single chrysanthemums, Ficus altissima and Violet Baronne Rothschild; Lager & Hurrell a group of orchids; Mrs. H. F. Durant, Thomas Watt gardener, a nice lot of orchids; a specimen of Vanda Sanderiana carrying ten flowers to a stalk received a certificate, as did a fine plant of Zygopetalum Mackaii from Mrs. A. W. Blake.

William Nicholson, Philip Dexter, James Salter gardener, and Mangus Valley Conservatories had carnations which received gratuities. Sidney Hoffman had a group of palms and chrysanthemums, Mrs. J. W. Sears displays of single and anemone chrysanthemums, W. N. Craig fifty varieties of seedling single chrysanthemums, Mrs. Frederick Ayer Erica melanthera, H. A. Dreer received a certificate of merit for Nephrolepis Scholzei and H. H. Barrows & Son honorable mention for Nephrolepis magnifica, an improvement on N. Whitmani. Miss R. Schaller had nice seedling carnations and Philip Dexter good seedling pink anemone chrysanthemums in the way of Garza.

There was a splendid lot of vegetables shown in the lower hall. E. L. Lewis won

A View of the Autumn Exhibition at Boston, November 6 to 9.

The judges were Messrs. Tesson, Irish and Dunford. In the floral display Mrs. William Ellison was judge.

The weather throughout the week was fine, clear and cool. The paid attendance during the four days was fairly good and the management is satisfied.

The following visitors attended, in addition to those named last week: Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Widmer, Highland, Ill.; E. G. Bradley, representing Hummel & Downing Co., Milwaukee, making a display of cut flower boxes; A. T. Pyfer and Peter Olsem, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.; A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill.; Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; A. S. Halstead and Kester Halstead, Belleville. The members of the society gave a banquet in honor of the visiting florists Wednesday night, November 4.

J. J. B.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

The Elmira Civic Improvement League and Horticultural Society held a chrysanthemum show in the Woman's Federated Charities building, November 5 to 7, and the proceeds of the show were donated to that institution. The exhibits filled the hall nicely and with the groups of palms and flowers arranged by the local florists, Durand, Leavitt and Backer, and by William Pursey, gardener for Hon. J. S. Fassett, made a beautiful display. Music was provided afternoons and evenings. The admission charged was 25 cents and, while the attendance was light, still a comfortable sum was realized for the federation over and above the expenses.

One of the most interesting parts of the show was the exhibit from the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell, of illustrations and specimens representing their work on insects, plant diseases, and the various horticultural operations of planting, grafting, etc. There were three gentlemanly attendants in charge, who took pains to explain to all interested.

Among the most popular exhibits were the orchids from Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., the vases of splendid Chatenay and Queen Beatrice roses from the U. S. Cut Flower Co., the large vase of Pennsylvania chrysanthemums and sample of Defiance carnation as grown by H. N. Hoffman, the table of single seedling mums and vases of immense large ones from C. H. Totty and from Elmer D. Smith. The Smith exhibit arrived too late for competition. The awards were as follows:

Cup for best undissected variety, to U. S. Cut Flower Co. for a white seedling, No. 41, grown by the late G. P. Rawson.

Twenty-five blooms one variety, H. N. Hoffman first with Pennsylvania, U. S. Cut Flower Co. second with Dr. Enguehard.

Twelve varieties, one each, C. H. Totty first, U. S. Cut Flower Co. second.

Six yellow, U. S. Cut Flower Co. first with Golden Chadwick, H. N. Hoffman second with Golden Dome.

Six white, H. N. Hoffman first with Timothy Eaton, J. B. Knapp, Sayre, Pa., second also with Eaton.

Six pink, U. S. Cut Flower Co. first with Enguehard, H. N. Hoffman second also with Enguehard.

Six red, U. S. Cut Flower Co. first with Childs. Single bloom, U. S. Cut Flower Co. first with Lynnwood Hall.

Display of carnations, U. S. Cut Flower Co. first, H. N. Hoffman second, J. B. Knapp third.

Display tea roses, U. S. Cut Flower Co. first.

Display of American Beauties, U. S. Cut Flower Co. first.

Group plants, Hon. J. S. Fassett, William Pursey gardener, first.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The tenth annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in Music hall November 4, 5 and 6.

a certificate of merit. This firm also won a certificate of merit for a new mammoth pink seedling carnation, for which the name Governor Hughes has been suggested.

Among the other prizes awarded to the trade were the following:

Society prize, silver medal, new decorative plant, F. R. Pierson Co., for Nephrolepis elegantissima compacta.

Fifty blooms carnations, one variety—First, F. R. Pierson Co.; second, Kretschmar Bros.

Vase twenty-five blooms roses, one variety—First, F. R. Pierson Co.

Bunch 100 double blue violets—First, Richard Langle.

Bunch 100 single blue violets—First, Richard Langle.

Outside of the trade, the chief prize winners were as follows: Wm. Rockefeller, Geo. Middleton gardener; Isaac N. Seligman, John Brunger gardener; Samuel Untermeyer, W. H. White superintendent; Stuyvesant Fish, Hector MacDonald gardener; Emil Berolzheimer, W. Jamieson gardener; Morton F. Plant, Thomas Head superintendent; Joseph Eastman, Robert Angus gardener; Samuel Grigg; Frederick Potter, W. C. Roberts gardener; W. C. Osborne, estate, James Bell gardener; Charles Lanier, A. H. Wingett superintendent; Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Howard Nichols gardener; R. & H. Scoville, Walter Angus gardener; W. Jamieson, George Begg assistant; W. H. Waite, T. Richardson assistant; Miss Blanche Potter, George Wittlinger gardener; Mrs. F. A. Conatable, James Stuart gardener; John J. Riker; F. W. Howes, H. L. Hand gardener; Mrs. Henry Siegel, Thos. Aitchison gardener; Miss A. B. Jennings, Oscar Carlson gardener; Theo. Trevillian; E. H. Weatherbee, F. Milne gardener; W. W. Heroy, Abraham Wynne gardener; Mrs. L. P. Child, W. H. Maginnis gardener.

The judges of the exhibit were as follows: A. L. Marshall, Katonah; H. J.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its fourth annual exhibition in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, November 5 and 6. The hall was tastefully decorated and the exhibits effectively placed, giving a good view from all sides. It was one of the best exhibitions given by the society; both financially and otherwise. A special feature of the exhibition was two pieces of fretwork, by Mr. Ingram, Oyster Bay, which received honorable mention. J. F. H. Matz, Glen Cove, had an elaborate flower piece, in the shape of a harp, standing four feet high. The columns were composed of pink roses and orchids, while the strings were lily of the valley, and the base of Easter lilies, which received a certificate of merit. James D. Cockcroft, of Northport, sent for exhibition twenty-five blooms of his new white carnation, Georgia, which received a certificate of merit and got a good deal of attention from visitors. Music was supplied each evening by Miller's orchestra. The judges were George Hales, Seabright, N. J., and Robert Angus, Tarrytown. Representatives from several of the New York seed houses were present.

A few of the gardeners prominent in former shows were missing this year. The principal exhibitors and premium winners were: A. McKenzie, gardener to Percy Chubb; S. Trepas, gardener to J. R. Maxwell; Valentine Cleres, gardener to F. S. Smithers; George Wilson, gardener to B. S. Roslyn; Paul Reul, gardener to Walter Gibb; H. F. Matz, J. Ingram; Henry Grant, gardener to H. L. Pratt; F. POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The fourteenth annual exhibition of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was held in the State armory, in this city, on Thursday and Friday, October 29 and 30.

There were a large number of entries in all classes and competition in some of them was close, the scale of points having to be resorted to in several instances, noticeably in carnations. There were not so many groups of ornamental foliage plants as usual, but there were enough to furnish a good setting for the unusually large entry of carnations, roses and chrysanthemums.

The list of awards follows:

Twelve plants of mums, distinct varieties, with single stem and in 6-inch pots, Archibald Rogers, Hyde Park, N. Y., P. Connor gardener, first; W. P. Clyde, New Hamburg, N. Y., H. J. Osterhoudt gardener, second.

Six plants, distinct varieties, three or more blooms, pots not to exceed eight inches, Osborne Estate, Garrison, N. Y., James Bell gardener, first; W. P. Clyde, second.

Round table of ornamental and flowering plants, arranged for effect, Saltford Flower Shop first; A. Rogers second.

Group of ornamental foliage plants, arranged for effect, A. Rogers first, Saltford Flower Shop second.

Group of mums, to occupy seventy-five feet, A. Rogers first.

Six decorative foliage plants, distinct varieties, A. Rogers first, Osborne Estate second.

Six ferns, distinct varieties, 12-inch pots, F. R. Newbold, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Fred Saenger gardener, first.

Table of decorative foliage plants, W. P. Clyde first, A. Rogers second.

Specimen plant of asparagus, A. Rogers first.

Specimen fern, F. R. Newbold first, with one of the best specimens of Adiantum cuneatum ever seen.

Thirty-six blooms of mums, six varieties, six of each, in six vases, Ogden Mills, Sloatsburg, James Blair gardener, first; F. W. Vanderbilt, Hyde Park, N. Y., H. J. Allen gardener, second.

Twelve white mums, Osborne Estate first.

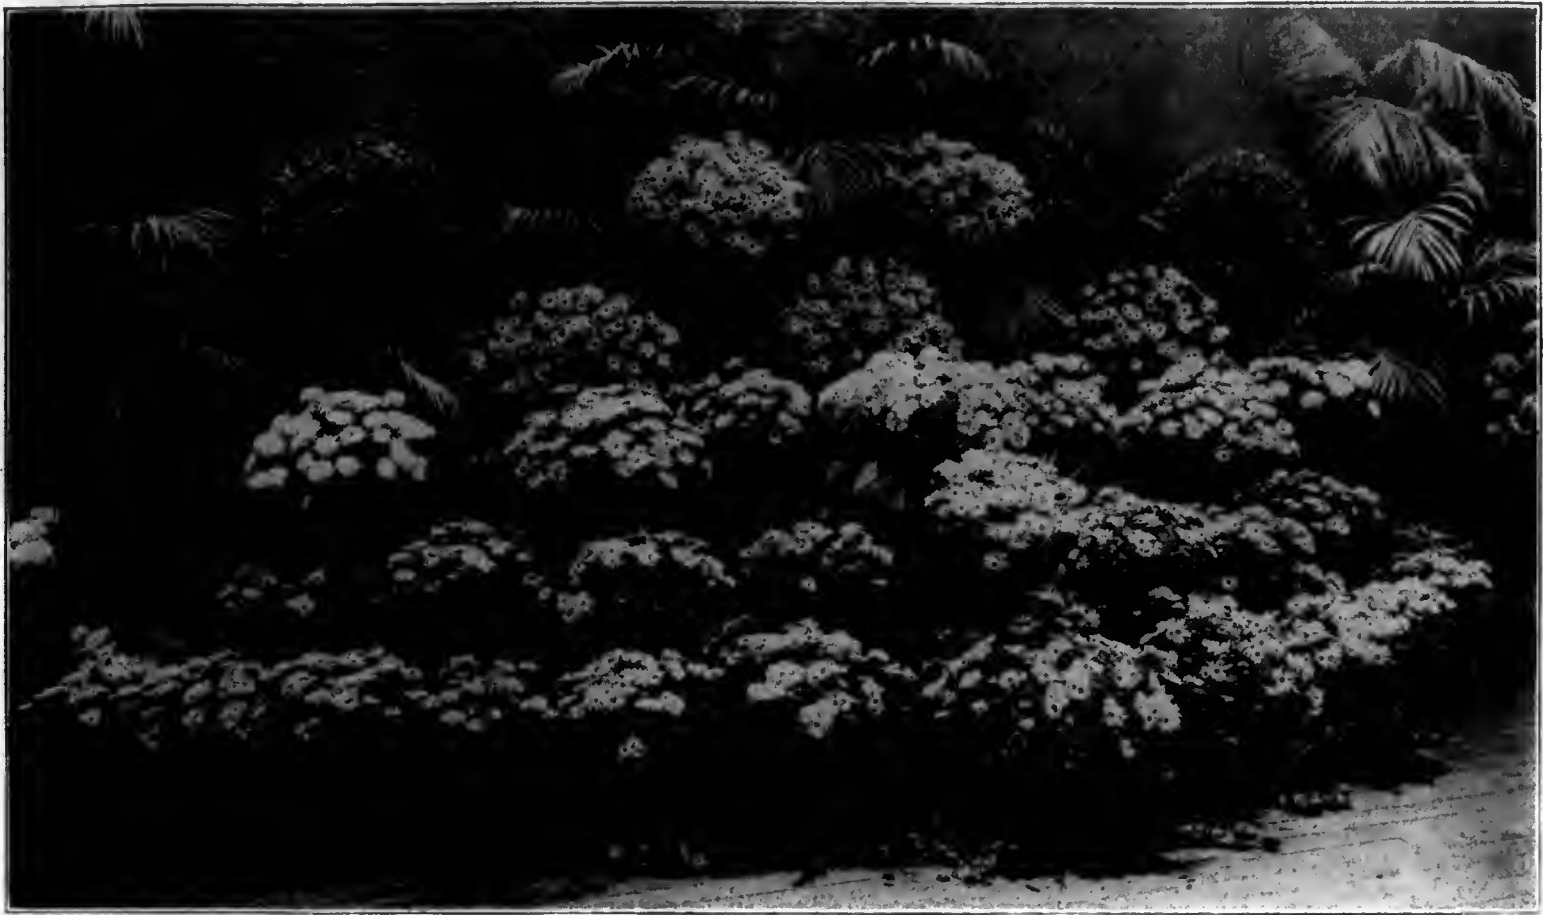

Twelve yellow mums, F. W. Vanderbilt first, Osborne Estate second.

Chrysanthemum Yellow Miller.

The exhibits were numerous and of excellent quality. The principal novelty on display was the new White Killarney rose of the F. R. Pierson Co., awarded Osterhoudt, New Hamburg; W. C. Russell, Millbrook; Thos. Page, Lenox, Mass.; George Saltford, New York city; Robert Walker, Great Neck.

Thomas E. Proctor's Group of Garza Mums and Foliage Plants at Boston.

Twelve pink mums, Winthrop Sargent, Fishkill, N. Y., T. E. Whitney gardener, first; Osborne Estate second.

Twelve any other color, F. W. Vanderbilt first, Ogden Mills second.

Six white, A. Rogers first, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Garrison, N. Y., Hector MacDonald gardener, second.

Six pink, A. Rogers first, F. W. Vanderbilt second.

Six yellow, W. Sargent first, F. W. Vanderbilt second.

Six crimson, Osborne Estate first, W. Sargent second.

Twenty-four mums, distinct varieties, 12-inch stem, Osborne Estate first, F. W. Vanderbilt second.

Twelve mums, distinct varieties, 12-inch stem, F. W. Vanderbilt first, Ogden Mills second.

Seedling chrysanthemum, A. Rogers first.

Six vases single mums, six varieties, twelve of each, W. P. Clyde first, F. W. Vanderbilt second.

Collection of roses, four varieties, twelve of each, F. W. Vanderbilt first, V. Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., second.

Twelve pink roses, F. W. Vanderbilt first; G. L. Hoyt, Staatsburg, N. Y., David Harrison gardener, second.

Twelve white, V. Burgevin's Sons first.

Twelve crimson, F. W. Vanderbilt first, G. L. Hoyt second.

Twelve disseminated in 1908, F. W. Vanderbilt first, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish second.

Twenty-five light pink carnations, A. W. Williams, Highland, N. Y., first; V. Burgevin's Sons second.

Twenty-five dark pink, V. Burgevin's Sons first, A. W. Williams second.

Twenty-five red, B. Willig, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., first; F. W. Vanderbilt second.

Twenty-five variegated, A. W. Williams first, Saltford Flower Shop second.

Twenty-five crimson, Osborne Estate first, F. W. Vanderbilt second.

Twenty-five white, B. Willig first, V. Burgevin's Sons second.

Twenty-four, three varieties, eight each, F. R. Newbold first, F. W. Vanderbilt second.

Thirty-six mums, twelve varieties, three of each, W. P. Clyde first, Ogden Mills second.

Twenty American Beauty roses, F. W. Vanderbilt first, Ogden Mills second.

Basket of mums, W. Sargent first, G. L. Hoyt second.

Floral decorations for dinner table, F. W. Vanderbilt first, W. Sargent second.

Twelve Richmond roses, F. W. Vanderbilt first, Ogden Mills second.

Six Begonia Lorraine, G. L. Hoyt first, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish second.

Twenty-five mums, arranged for effect, W. Sargent first, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish second.

One hundred double blue violets, in two bunches, B. Willig first; C. F. Bahret, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., second.

Fifty double blue violets, private gardeners, F. W. Vanderbilt first.

Collection of hardy mums, Capt. A. C. Zabriski, Barrytown, N. Y., Fred Cottrell gardener, first; A. Rogers second.

Twenty-five named kinds of vegetables, H. G. Cottam, Wappingers Falls, N. Y., first; G. L. Hoyt second.

Twelve celery, W. P. Clyde first, F. W. Vanderbilt second.

Collection of fruit, H. G. Cottam first.

Plate of mushrooms, Capt. A. C. Zabriski first, W. Sargent second.

Twelve yellow onions, Mrs. John Blakeley first, John Blakeley second.

Amateurs, vase of mums, arranged for effect, C. J. Reynolds first.

The judges were Wm. C. Russell, Millbrook, N. Y.; I. L. Powell, Millbrook, N. Y., and R. W. Allen, Hudson, N. Y.

A new fern, Nephrolepis Scholzei, was shown by Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, Pa., which attracted a good deal of attention and was considered worthy of a certificate of merit by the judges.

A certificate of merit was also awarded to the Ashborne Estate, James Bell gardener, for Cattleya labiata.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its fourth annual exhibition in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, November 5 and 6. The hall was tastefully decorated and the exhibits effectively placed, giving a good view from all sides. It was one of the best exhibitions given by the society, both financially and otherwise. A special feature of the exhibition was two pieces of fretwork, by Mr. Ingram, Oyster Bay, which received honorable mention. J. F. H. Matz, Glen Cove, had an elaborate flower piece, in the shape of a harp, standing four feet high. The columns were composed of pink roses and orchids, while the strings were lily of the valley, and the base of Easter lilies, which received a certificate of merit. James D. Cockcroft, of Northport, sent for exhibition twenty-five blooms of his new white carnation, Georgia, which received a certificate of merit and got a good deal of attention from visitors. Music was supplied each evening by Miller's orchestra. The judges were George Hales, Seabright, N. J., and Robert Angus, Tarrytown. Representatives from several of the New York seed houses were present.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Lorraine Begonias.

Many of the Lorraine begonias are now flowering quite profusely, and if the temperature can be lowered a few degrees, to a minimum of 55 degrees at night, the plants will be stockier and the blooms have more substance. We hope the necessary supports were remembered some time ago, for too often growers wait until the plants are coming into flower and falling over the sides of the pots before attending to this. The stakes should be light and not long enough to show above the flowers. Feeding once in four or five days with weak cow manure is now beneficial, and if the foliage wants toning up a little, soot water should be used. Lorraine begonias require no shade now and the nearer they can be stood to the light the better they will be. Avoid any wetting overhead now, as it will be injurious.

Show Pelargoniums.

It will now be possible to make room for show pelargoniums in a cool house; 40 to 45 degrees at night will answer well. See that the pots do not become matted with roots before a shift is given. Pinch the tops out of any shoots which are taking the lead, to keep the plants bushy. Do not forget to spread some fresh tobacco stems among the plants once a fortnight. Green aphid has a decided partiality for these pelargoniums and will speedily ruin them if not kept in check.

Pandanus Veitchii.

There are few more generally useful fine foliaged plants than Pandanus Veitchii. It is of easy propagation at this season by rubbing off the side shoots and inserting them in a warm propagating bed. In potting off the rooted cuttings be careful to prevent any of the roots being broken. They will usually go straight down through the sand into the drainage if left too long in the propagating bench. Pandanus Sanderæ, which was introduced a few years ago, is little heard of now. It never attained any popularity, but is useful in a collection for variety. As a house plant it is inferior to the older variety.

Poinsettias.

The bracts on poinsettias are developing quite fast now and every attention should be paid to watering, so that the plants will lose as little foliage as possible. Poinsettias with leaves to the top of the pots or pans, and of a dark green color, will sell on sight. It is otherwise where only a tuft of leaves remains just below the bracts. A temperature of 60 degrees at night is better than a higher one when the bracts are opening. Applications of manure water should cease before they are fully developed. Avoid heavy doses. If these do not cause a loss of foliage, they will make the bracts soft and then when cut they will not stand up so well as those subjected to less feeding.

Hardy Lilies.

Fall is the proper season to plant hardy lilies. In the spring the bulbs, no matter how carefully carried over winter, have lost much of their strength. Bulbs of some varieties are now arriving, but others may not come to hand before December. For these latter it is best to protect the places to be planted, with straw or leaves, so that they can be gotten in on arrival.

The general practice is to plant outdoor lilies too shallow. A depth of eight to ten inches is better than four to five inches. Put a good coating of sharp sand below and above the bulbs and do not use any fresh manure about them. Lilium speciosum album and rubrum, tigrinum, auratum and Batmanniæ are useful commercial sorts. All will do better where they can have a little shade.

Preparing Compost Piles.

Now is the season to secure a good stack of compost for pots and benches.

The top spit of upland pastures, where stock has been grazed, is the best and this may be cut four inches thick. In stacking it we like to place a layer of cow manure between every two thicknesses of sods. When chopped down in spring and turned over, this makes first-class material for either pots or benches. As there are some plants which would object to the manure, it is best to make a pile of pure sod for these. Far too little attention is paid to the compost heaps. Without good soil it is out of the question to grow good flowers, no matter how much fertilizer and liquid manure may be given them while growing.

As freezing-up weather may soon be expected under ordinary conditions, it is time to get a supply of loam, rotted manure, sand, leaf-mold and other potting accessories under cover. It is not pleasant scurrying around after these when a thick blanket of snow covers the ground.

Pansies.

Where pansies are to be wintered outdoors, it is still too early to afford protection. Wait until the ground is hard frozen for this work. In many places it is risky to attempt carrying these outdoors, and in such cases the plants should be put in coldframes at once. In addition to pansies, such plants as digitalis, Canterbury bells, rockets, double daisies, forget-me-nots and others of doubtful hardiness are best carried over in frames. Place no sashes over them until quite severe weather sets in.

Adiantums.

when received. They appear to be covered with oyster shell scale, a pest frequently attacking such shrubs as lilacs outdoors. This is an easier pest to destroy than the San Jose scale. If only one plant is affected, it would be well to burn it. If you do not want to do this, wash the wood with strong whale oil soap, making it quadruple the strength you would use for syringing. This will kill the scale. Whale oil soap of this strength will destroy foliage unless it is very tough. C.

STORING DAHLIAS.

On the approach of cold weather, dahlias should have their tops cut off to within a few inches of their crowns and should then be dug up. The roots should be placed where they will dry sufficiently to permit the easy removal of the soil which is clinging to them. Then they should be stored away in boxes or on shelves in cool, dry cellars, or in sheds where frost will not reach them. Dry soil or sawdust may be strewn among the roots. If shelves cannot be erected, the roots may be laid on boards or on the bare floors, if they can be kept quite dry.

It will save a great deal of confusion and annoyance in the spring if a little extra care is taken now in making sure that all varieties have correct labels securely fastened to at least a few of each lot of every variety stored away for keeping. M.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Carl N. K. Pedersen and Miss Jennie A. Shepherd, daughter of Alexander Shepherd, of Sandy Point road, were married October 29.

fronds are in active demand and all who have good stocks of well ripened fronds will find them good value. No matter whether the plants are in pots or benches, more care in watering will now be needed. Dryness at the root speedily causes the ruin of many fronds. Another fertile cause is damping overhead, which causes rot to set in where the fronds are the most dense. It is a good idea to look over the plants when time permits and remove any brown, yellowing or useless fronds to give those coming on every chance. A heavy shade keeps adiantums a good dark color, but on the other hand it makes them soft. Little shade should now be required until the latter part of February.

After cutting a plant down clean, it is best to keep it on the dry side for a few weeks before potting and starting it up again. Keep a sharp lookout for snails, and if they are troublesome lay baits, such as potato slices and cabbage or lettuce leaves, which should be frequently removed and examined.

OYSTER SHELL SCALE.

Would you kindly tell me what insect it was which laid its eggs on the small shoot which I am mailing? The other shoots are affected by something resembling scale. It is rather small and not resembling the San Jose scale, if it is scale. The shoots on the same bush were not affected in the least and not another one in the houses. The wilted condition of the leaves attracted my attention.

AT THE NATIONAL SHOW.

High Quality of Exhibits.

There is one thing which is beyond any question, and that is that the average quality of the blooms staged is of an extremely high order. I dare say that some of the vases are so good that if the same varieties are shown as good at Indianapolis, in January, they will surely land inside the money. I will not try to cover the whole list of classes in a reportorial way, but will merely give a few of the impressions as they came to me while I looked over the show. To use a slang phrase, we will merely "touch the high places."

The one thing which has impressed itself most distinctly on most of us is, that in white there is at this date nothing which can compare with White Perfection as an exhibition variety. In fact, there seems to be no variety of any color which, for form of flower, size, stem, calyx and general excellence, can compare with it. It might be called the all-around champion, which it proved to be here, when the vase of 100 blooms from Poehlmann Bros. carried off the sweep-stake gold medal in the class for 100. It is also worthy of note that all three prizes in the class for 100 white went to this variety, in spite of several grand vases of White Enchantress and a fine vase of Rudd's Mrs. J. C. Vaughan. This latter variety looks to be a splendid thing, though it needs a little more time to fill out the blooms right.

The Pink Classes.

In flesh pink, Enchantress was the only variety staged in the 100 class. This variety is so well grown around Chicago and in such quantity, it never fails to make a fine show. In this color there seems nothing in sight to displace it, so far as this exhibition would indicate. Several varieties were shown in smaller quantity, which will likely turn out to be first-rate commercial sorts. Noteworthy among these is Dorner's variety, Delight. (I understand this name is to be changed.) This is a smooth-edged variety, of beautiful build and fair size, and has a texture which enables it to stand rough handling. Knopf's Mrs. Charles Knopf also looks good. In the main it resembles Enchantress, but on closer observation it lacks some of its weaker points and is equally strong in its good points.

In the rose-pink class, Rose-pink Enchantress stands at the head again, with Winsor coming up and Winona proving itself a fine shipper and keeper, but undersized in competition. Mr. Heacock's variety in this color looks to be a splendid thing. At a first glance one might suppose it to be a vase of Rose-pink Enchantress, but a closer look proves that it has a better form and a more perfect calyx. No doubt it is a good thing.

In dark pink, Aristocrat knocked the persimmon, with Afterglow a close second. A few vases of Mrs. Lawson showed that, when well done, this variety is still to be reckoned with.

Some of the Reds.

In red, O. P. Bassett led the way, principally on account of its grand stem. The bloom is good and has a good red color; in fact, it is strong all around. Beacon needs a few more weeks to take on its proper form and color. Some nice vases were shown. Victory was here in fine shape, but, though strong in texture and color, it lacks form and stem thus early. Pres. Taft is a full double flower, which ought to be a good shipper. It is of good size, with a good stem. Its light red color suffers when placed alongside of Victory.

Bertermann's James Whitecomb Riley, which is a pure yellow, made a nice appearance. An average commercial sized bloom, of splendid color, with good form and stem, always appeals to the grower.

The 100 blooms mixed proved quite an attraction to many. The winning vase, by Poehlmann Bros., was made up from standard varieties, all in fine shape. More interesting, however, was the vase of seedlings from Dorner's. This is a class in which this firm is always strong with the growers. They enjoy standing by and dreaming of how, when this one or that one comes out, they will surely get in on it and make a hit. They have wonderful visions of bud-laden benches, producing blooms of the very top grade, for which the trade will clamor as never before.

The Seedlings.

In seedlings there are several which give promise of being good. Apple Blossom is shown pure white, with good form, stem and calyx. Georgia traveled in good shape and reminds one much of Vesper, being about the same size and build. Hill's red has fine stems, fine color and form, and fair size. A crimson from the same firm looks good all around and of average size. Ruby has fine, large blooms, and stands up nicely. A deep pink from Zweifel looks like a splendid thing, No. 108. A white, No. 36, from Dorner's, has good size, form, calyx, stem and texture, and looks a really good thing. Their scarlet 175-06 is a fine, bold, deeply fringed bloom, on a good stem, and the color is fine. A pure yellow, of fine color, also looks good. A mottled variety from the Chicago Carnation Co. made a beautiful appearance, much prettier than Prosperity, on account of the mottling being pink. Wanoka has a good crimson color, has a good stem and looks nice.

The pot carnation Alvina, from H. Eichholz, should appeal to every plant grower. It makes an enormous plant and throws its blooms in crops, enabling the grower to get plants with many blooms at one time.

The temperature and ventilation in the hall are good and as most of the stock looks in prime condition the carnation show should be good for several days.

ROSE WM. R. SMITH.

I have noticed various items of late, especially by Edwin Lonsdale, in regard to the rose Wm. R. Smith, and as we have grown this rose for the last four years, possibly more extensively than any other firm (having at present nearly 25,000 plants), I believe that a few more words concerning its good qualities will not come amiss.

Our possession of the Wm. R. Smith rose was an accident. About four years ago we purchased a quantity of roses from the E. G. Hill Co., for field planting. For lack of space these were planted in a very poor place in the field. The soil, too, was old rose soil. Needless to say, the roses did not do well, but among the lot we noticed four plants of a different nature from the others, with different foliage and different growth. What the roses were we did not know, but we lifted and potted them, propagated all we could and have been growing them extensively and successfully ever since. We called Mr. Hill's attention to the plants, and he immediately told us they were Wm. R. Smith.

It is unquestionably the best summer forcing and field rose we have ever seen. It is the freest in every way, the strongest and most rampant grower of any roses we have ever had, and the house in which it is now planted looks like a jungle. Its stems are stiff and strong, often growing from three to four feet long (we have it staked on 5-foot stakes). Its foliage is as large as the Beauty's, its color deeper than the Carnot's. It has as much substance as the Beauty and its flower is nearly as large. For us it has never had the black spot, nor does it mildew.

Give this rose the same treatment as the Kaiserin, and it will make you excellent and better returns. As a field rose it is a marvel, for it is just as good a grower this way as under glass. The last summer, with the worst drought we have ever had, its growth was wonderful—far better than that of the Cochet or any other tea or hybrid tea in the field; 2¼-inch plants, planted in the field the last week in May, are now large bushes, two to three feet in height.

Its good qualities are many and its bad ones few. In fact, we know of only one fault—the flowers after the middle of November lose color, but what summer rose is good after this date?

We do not want to seem egotistical, but we believe this rose would have been lost to the trade had we not discovered its good qualities. The E. G. Hill Co. at one time had practically all the stock, and at the time we called their attention to what a fine rose it was we believe they had about discarded it as being of no account.

A word about My Maryland. It is unquestionably a "korker." Killarney will have to take a back seat when this rose becomes better known.

HERBERT HELLER.

VIOLETS FOR COLDFRAME.

Do you think I can raise violets successfully in a hotbed under the following conditions? The bed will be right next to a building on the south side of it and I thought of using heavy grade plant bed cloth for covering. The frame of the bed will be made of 1-inch boards with sawdust between and the walls, when completed, will be four or five inches thick. Do you think Princess of Wales the best variety to grow in a hotbed? I thought they were about as hardy as any and they give as large flowers and long stems as any variety, do they not? If you would not advise this variety, name some you think best in singles and blue color. T. E. H.

Princess of Wales is decidedly the best violet to use for such a frame as you describe and there is no reason why they should not succeed well under such conditions. Let the soil be well manured, air on all possible occasions in winter and, as moldiness may set in if the plants through severe weather and heavy snow are closed up for a number of consecutive days, pick them over occasionally. You can hardly expect to pick many flowers during winter, but after March 1 with increasing sunlight you will get a heavy crop and they are always of a darker color than when grown with fire heat. By keeping your board shutters, which should be used over the cloth, on until late in the winter, you can probably have the crop in season for Easter, a time when violets sell especially well.

BEST SINGLE VIOLET.

Will you kindly inform me as to the relative merits in the market of the different varieties of single violets? I am a novice in the work, and have my greenhouse filled with violets, so you will understand that any information in regard to the culture of violets will be gratefully received. I. L. A.

Princess of Wales is by long odds the best and most popular single violet in America. There are some other sorts, such as Luxonne, La France, Baron Rothschild and California, but none are as good all-round sorts as Princess of Wales. A new variety, named Boston, has recently been placed on the market. It is a sport from Princess of Wales and, it is claimed, is superior.

A Bunch of Mums.

Single violets should be grown in solid beds and be given a night temperature as near 40 degrees as possible in winter. It is a mistake to house them before October. C. W.

BUNCH OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The bunch illustrated, made of Major Bonnaillon chrysanthemums and autumn leaves tied with ribbon, may be used on sad occasions where rich coloring is admissible. The flowers were all perfect specimens, the foliage oak leaves. The ribbon, ombre, shading from the flower color through the varied tinted foliage colors, blended harmoniously. The bunch shown was by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. It also is used as a bunch for debutantes. PHIL.

FRYEBURG, ME.—Eugene O. Abbott, formerly with L. C. Goddard, at Portland, will engage in business here on his own account.

HITZ'S HOOSIER HOME.

The business of L. E. Hitz, at Madison, Ind., was established by John G. Hitz, the father of the present owner, as far back as 1872. The accompanying illustration shows the present range of glass, which includes 15,000 feet. The business is retail and in this range of glass nearly all the stock is grown that is handled in the store, both plants and cut flowers. As is usual in a town of this size, Mr. Hitz handles everything in the list, clear down to vegetable plants, which are a considerable item of the spring trade. He also has a large planting of fruit trees, selling the fruit, and a nursery in which there is a large variety of small fruits, fruit trees and ornamentals, in which a considerable business is done.

Besides conducting his own business, Mr. Hitz finds time to perform the many public duties which fall to the lot of a florist in a small city. He believes it is the duty of everyone so located to make himself generally useful and a benefit to the community in which he lives. Some of his outside activities are connected with Springdale cemetery, of which he is superintendent; the Madison Chautauqua Association, of which he is director; the Middleton Monument Board, to beautify grounds, of which he is a member; the Mite Building and Loan Association, of which he is a director, and he holds membership in a number of fraternal societies.

EXPRESS ON FLOWERS.

Benjamin Hammond, chairman of the legislative committee of the S. A. F., under date of November 4, addressed a strong letter to J. H. Bradley, general traffic manager of the American Express Co., setting forth in detail the claim of the wholesale florists that cut flowers should be included with the some twenty other commodities packed with ice for shipment, and for which an allowance of twenty-five per cent of weight is allowed, to cover the ice. He offered specific evidence as to the volume of the traffic and the conditions.

Under date of November 6 Mr. Bradley replied as follows:

"I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of November 4 and I will at once investigate the question of ice with shipments of cut flowers. I had not supposed that such shipments were being made to any great extent where ice was used for preservation.

"I am today making inquiry of our agents at the principal cities referred to in your letter, and will give you further reply later.

"There is one point referred to in your letter which I may as well say to you now cannot be changed, and that is the charge on returned empties. Our classification always provided that returned empties must be delivered at the depot by the shipper and taken from the depot by the consignee. We know that our agents did not live up to the classification in this particular and they had been picking up and delivering these empties for certain patrons. Agents at other points did not do so for any patrons, and it constituted a discrimination which we were obliged to overcome by putting into effect a classification providing for an additional charge where pick up and delivery service was rendered. Shippers and consignees still have the option of delivering the empties at the depot, and calling at the depot for them, in which case there is no additional charge made.

"We must not lose sight, either, of the fact that the transportation and delivery of cut flowers during extreme cold or extreme heat, etc., calls for extra service in many cases."

ST. PAUL.The Market.

Trade has been good since the first of the month. Social events are numerous, and as flowers are now considered indispensable for such occasions, the heart of the florist is glad and his purse heavy. There has also been a good demand for funeral flowers, while shipping trade has been excellent. There is no particular shortage reported outside of lilies and violets, which are somewhat short in quantity and for which there has been a heavy demand. Mums are coming in quite freely and are in good demand. Some of the growers in the Twin Cities have been bothered with a green bug in the buds, which has done considerable damage.

Various Notes.

The national flower show has been the chief topic of discussion in florist circles, and a goodly number of Twin City rooters are in attendance at Chicago. We expect to have a full report of their doings at our next club meeting, which will be held at Columbia hall, Merriam park, Tuesday evening, November 17, at 8 o'clock. A. J. Smith will read a paper on mums and J. P. Jorgenson will tell us all about the national show.

O. J. Olson, of this city, and G. A. Clausen, of Albert Lea, have gone deer hunting in the northern part of the state. X. Y. Z.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

Business last week was reported as fairly good in all lines and all are looking for a steady increase from now on. There was quite a lot of work for social affairs with the uptown florists and in the downtown district a good deal of funeral work and counter trade was reported. Now that the election is over, the florists' business should take a boom to last throughout the season.

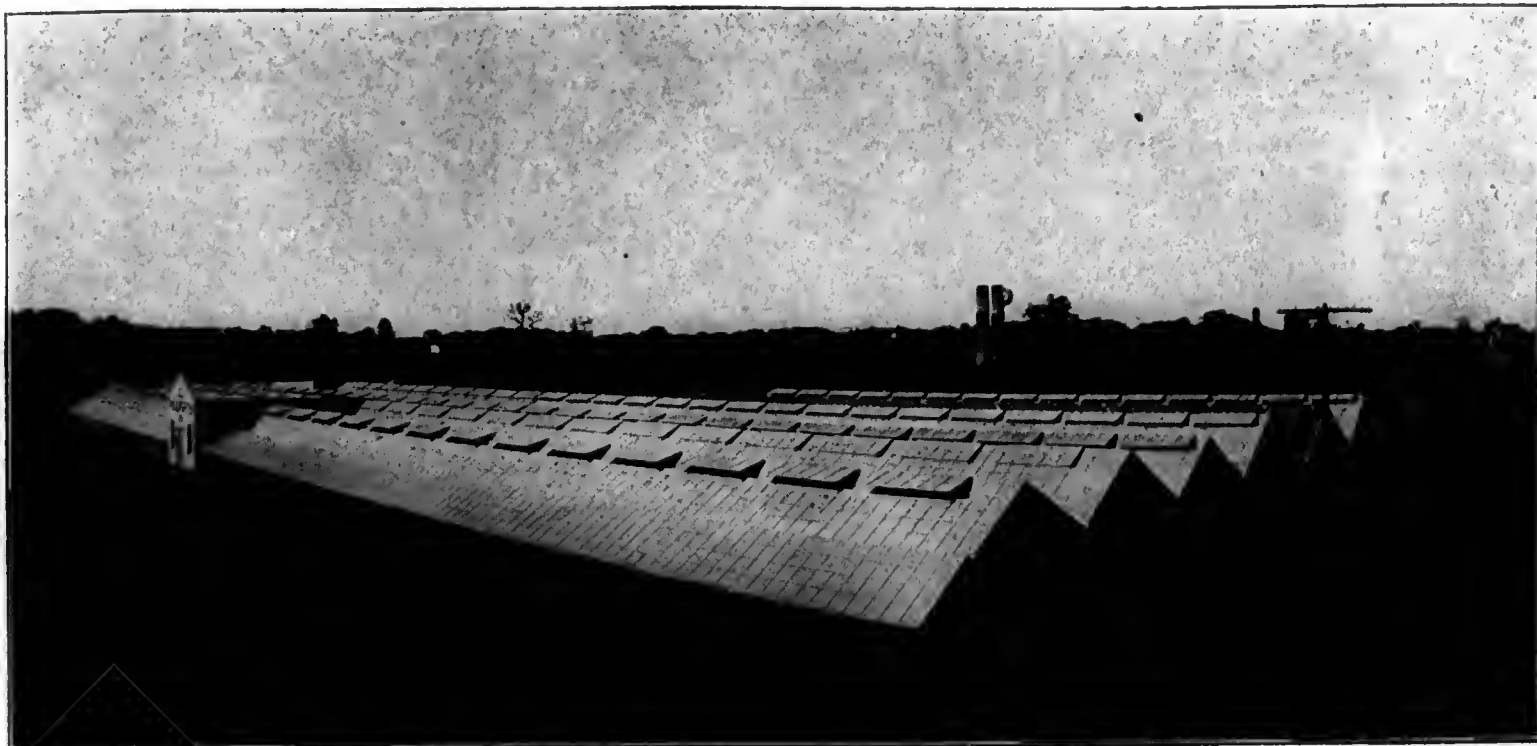

The wholesale houses were stocked up pretty well all of last week, with good quality of stock in everything in season. Chrysanthemums are selling well and especially so with fancy blooms. White and Pink Ivory are good sellers. Carnations are abundant at all the houses, with fair demand for all colors. Violets are selling well and are looking better each day. Roses, too, are plentiful, but first-class stock always sells well. Beauties have been off crop of late. Lily of the valley is of extra good quality and plenty of it. Bulb stock has not yet arrived, but Paper Whites and Romans should be in by next week.

Various Notes.

The free chrysanthemum show given by the directors of the Missouri Botanic Garden opened Monday, November 9, and will last through the week. Superintendent Irish and the students have been busy all week preparing for the show, which is being held in a big tent erected for the occasion near the entrance of the garden. All the plants are at their best.

Greenhouse Plant of the C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee.

The new fern, Nephrolepis Scholzei, which was exhibited by Henry Dreer and won the Henry Shaw medal at the St. Louis show last week, was greatly admired by all the florists and J. J. Karins, the firm's representative who staged it, took a great many orders from St. Louis firms.

C. C. Sanders, chairman of the flower show executive committee, is much pleased with the paid attendance. He says: "I don't believe we made any money, but we did not lose any," and that is saying a whole lot where previous shows have proven failures financially.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting November 12, for the first night meeting in the Knights of Columbus hall, Grand avenue and Olive street. The December meeting will be held, as usual, in the afternoon.

There is quite a delegation of St. Louis florists in Chicago this week, attending the national flower show.

The Ellison Floral Co. reports decorating for a large reception at Alton, Ill., November 11. They have been busy all week with dinners at the St. Louis Club. After the Alton affair Mrs. Ellison will visit Chicago to take a look at the big show.

George Angermueller says business has opened up good. Everything seems to be in demand. Consignments of Beauties and mums have been quite heavy all week. He has just received a large shipment of florists' supplies.

At C. A. Kuehn's last week stock of all kinds was abundant and of extra good quality in Beauties, carnations and chrysanthemums. Ed Gerlach, the manager, says the supply and wire departments have been busy.

The florists' bowlers bowled November 9 at the new De Soto Olive alleys, at Olive and Vandeventer avenues. President Cannon and Secretary Smith were in Chicago, but the attendance was good and some good scores were made by the young bowlers. J. J. B.

THE POLLWORTH PLANT.

The accompanying illustration shows the plant of the C. C. Pollworth Co., of Milwaukee. This establishment has made considerable growth in the last few years and now consists of a range of twenty-five large, modern houses, devoted to roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and all varieties of palms and ferns. The cut flowers are handled through the downtown store and in addition to their own cut, they also handle the cut of some of the principal growers in their vicinity. They enjoy a heavy shipping trade through the northwest.

They also make a specialty of greenhouse requisites and use their own establishment as a basis of experiment with the goods they send out to their customers. Azaleas, as well as Christmas and Easter flowering plants, cold storage valley and lilies, are likewise grown in quantity by them.

BOSTON.

The Market.

With the single exception of roses, which are selling better at advanced prices, the cut flower trade is still far from satisfactory. The quantity of material arriving is simply more than the market can gorge, and prices ruled low on chrysanthemums and carnations last week. With the early passing of mums an improvement may come. It is certainly much wanted.

Roses show a decided hardening tendency and the supply has fallen off. All varieties have shared in a moderate advance, the greatest improvement being in the standard sorts, such as Beauty, Richmond and Killarney. A few White Killarney are seen. Another year this promises to be the leading white.

Carnations are far too abundant still. Whites sell the slowest. Sales of these at $5 per thousand last week attest the condition of the market, some going even lower.

Violets are not yet overabundant and move fairly well. There is still an avalanche of chrysanthemums, but another week should see a falling off in receipts, some growers being almost cut out.

A few Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi are seen, but are not in much request yet. Lilliums are good, as is lily of the valley. Candytuft is of slow sale. Some cosmos is still coming in, chiefly Lady Lenox. This variety flowers too late to suit growers as a rule.

Adiantum is good and Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus are of excellent quality.

Various Notes.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, November 17, Eber Holmes, of Montrose Greenhouses, will read a paper on "How We Can Improve Our Club." Nominations of officers for the ensuing year will be made, reports of the national flower show will be heard and much other business transacted.

By the will of George Francis Parkman the sum of $5,000,000 is left for the support of the Boston parks. The interest, some $200,000, will make many improvements possible. This is the largest bequest Boston has ever had for park purposes.

Visitors to the chrysanthemum show were numerous. Among those noted from a distance were G. F. Struck, New York; H. Hurrell, Summit, N. J.; T. W. Head, Groton, Conn.; F. C. Green and T. McCarthy, Providence, R. I.; F. Heeremans, Lenox, Mass.; J. J. Karins, with H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia.

H. H. Barrows & Son have worked up a fine stock of their new fern, Nephrolepis magnifica, to be introduced in 1909. It promises to be even better than Whitmani.

Mann Bros. are marketing good Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites. They have an unusually fine lot of lilies, of which latter they are large growers.

Five magnificent specimen chrysanthemums destined for the late Boston show and grown by Mr. Spiers, John E. Parsons' skillful gardener in Lenox, averaged eight feet in diameter and could not be gotten into the baggage car at Pittsfield, so they had to be left behind. The plants, being trained on wire frames, could not be tied together.

The annual business session of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will occur November 14. Polls will be open from 12 to 4, for the election of directors and other officers.

THE WEEKLY
FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly,
New York; vice-president, George W. McClure,
Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

WITH this issue the REVIEW celebrates the completion of its eleventh year.

PAY fair prices, and ask them, and insist on a fair article in each transaction.

THE only kind of business that is worth having is founded on giving satisfaction to one's customers.

YOU often can tell what quality of stock is in a greenhouse by a glance at the grounds surrounding it.

YOU will get out of your business just about what you put into it; nothing worth while is to be had without well directed effort.

WHEN one can buy a season's supply of printed letter-heads for 75 cents it seems strange that so many growers and small florists still write their business letters on the children's school pads.

PITY the poor express companies! The annual report of the "U. S." shows only $37,734 profit from operation in the year just passed. But income from investments was sufficient to maintain the regular dividend.

ONE of the reasons why a florist is entitled to a good profit from his business is that in the majority of cases his residence is not over twenty feet from the greenhouses and not even in his sleep is he free from the care of the stock.

CANTERBURY BELLS are easily forced when in pots and well established. They should be kept in cool frames until the time arrives for inciting them into growth. Campanulas are gross feeders and will respond generously when they are given ample room and plenty of nutriment.

WHEN the early flowering chrysanthemums are cut from benches, sweet peas that are growing in pots may be planted in their place, without much preparation of the soil. Sweet peas are often a good crop when grown in that way, and are especially useful to the grower who is also a retail florist.

OBITUARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Groll.

Andrew Groll and his wife, Katherine, died within a few hours of each other, October 30, at their home in East Williamsburg, N. Y., and were buried together on the following Monday. Mr.
Groll died of pneumonia shortly after noon. Mrs. Groll, who had been suffering from consumption for many months and was now a helpless invalid, gave directions for her husband's funeral as she lay in bed. Just three hours after her husband's death, she also passed away. Mr. Groll's age was 63 and Mrs.
Groll's 48. They are survived by five children. Mr. Groll was one of the oldest florists in the East Williamsburgh cemetery section.

Leroy L. Crocker.

Leroy L. Crocker, a pioneer California horticulturist, died near Loomis, Placer Co., October 30, a victim of heart disease, from which he had suffered for many years. Mr. Crocker was 70 years of age. He leaves two daughters and one son. His grounds at his late home consist of over 1,000 acres, more than half of which was planted to fruit trees, vines and shrubbery, while the balance was maintained as an experiment farm and pleasure park. He leaves an estate valued at half a million dollars.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Name of Hydrangea.

The following statement is made in response to some inquiries, and to settle some apparent misunderstandings, regarding the name of the hydrangea registered by the E. G. Hill Co. July 21, 1906, as Hydrangea arborescens alba grandiflora:

Professor Sargent, after consideration, decided that the proper name for this variety was Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora forma nova. The registration was corrected to that effect, and the latter is the name accepted and recognized by this society.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The facts of supply and demand have been lost sight of this week by the event of the year—the national flower show.
More visitors have been in town than at any other one time in the history of the market and everyone has been busy—shaking hands.

There was not much business the latter part of last week. The shipping demand far eclipsed the local trade, and even the former was light. This week business has continued on the quiet side, as it always is when any special event is on.
Shipping is fair, but not up to what it should be, or even up to what it was at the end of October. Local trade is dull.
The retailers who have entered at the show have used only trifling quantities of the choice stock and less attention than usual has been given to pushing the local retail trade, so prices on the miscellaneous lots that have to be cleaned up, have sunk rather than risen.

There has as yet been no influx of the late varieties of chrysanthemums and strictly fancy stock is not overabundant.
There is call for Eaton and the market looks for a revival in general demand

We have the Grade of Stock required for shipping—and we have it in quantity—so

LET US GET TOGETHER FOR THANKSGIVING

All buyers can call on us with the certainty that they are drawing upon the largest supply of uniformly good stock in the west. We have everything the season affords—but we have only one idea, and that is to handle every flower received as it should be handled, and so keep on gaining new support while retaining the old. If you are not a customer, let's get together. :: :: ::

CARNATIONS

Finest stock in largest quantity. That's enough said. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." Try it—right now, for Thanksgiving, or any time.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Our stock is the kind the trade wants. Large supply of each grade of the fine late varieties and also a fine lot of Pompons—these are good sellers. All colors.

BEAUTIES

Our Beauties are so good they almost sell themselves—if shipping orders don't take them, city buyers snap them up. Better get your order in.

VIOLETS

There is no house in the west that is pushing violets any harder than we are—and we certainly are getting the stock. Our supply of the Cream of the Hudson river doubles is very large and we have fine Home-grown singles. Our stock for Thanksgiving will be especially good—and moderate in price.

VALLEY

We handle the finest valley in Chicago and have practically unlimited quantity.

Plenty of fancy Bonnaffon, Appleton, Robinson and other best sorts; also medium and small Mums.

Killarney

We have a large cut of splendid Killarney, the kind of stock it is a pleasure to sell. Let's show you.

VIOLETS

Quality now up to winter grade—quantity enough to give everybody his share.

Richmond

Also order some of our Richmond—they are in the same class with the Killarney and sure to please your customers.

Carnations

We handle more carnations than any other house in this market. Can offer good stock at reasonable prices.

Valley

We supply Fancy Valley in quantity every day in the year. Order of us and you will not be disappointed.

THANKSGIVING

If you desire good service on any holiday it is safest to order from the house that has the largest supply of good stock. For this reason we can give you the best holiday service. Book orders now.

We make a specialty of Fancy Hardy Cut Ferns—Fine stock. Order a case.

For Xmas we shall be headquarters for HOLLY and GREEN. Write for prices. Now booking orders.

If you haven't our new catalogue, send a postal and keep it handy.

as soon as the good late varieties can be offered in quantity.

There is an abundance of roses and the quality has improved steadily since good weather came. Killarney is fine and there are some magnificent Richmond. These latter are selling a little better than they did. Bride and Maid are getting toward midwinter quality, but prices have not advanced in keeping with the improvement, although the weaker stock still is hard to move. Such varieties as Kate Moulton, Jardine and other specialties are selling fairly well. Beauty would be scarce if there were any demand.

Carnations are in somewhat larger supply and are improving in quality. The demand hardly has kept pace. There appears to have been a considerable increase in the use of violets as a result of the good quality and low prices. Fully as great quantities as ever reached this market in November are now coming in and they are cleaned up each day, although at lower prices than the growers would like. However, some of the wholesalers think they are averaging as good a return as last year, at this date, which, if true, is more than can be said of other flowers.

Sweet peas are slightly more plentiful. There is an abundance of valley, lilies and such other stock as is seasonable. No change in the market for green goods.

Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is only a fortnight away and the wholesalers are beginning preparations for it. Thanksgiving amounts to about two good Saturdays and stock promises to be so plentiful this year that the wholesalers are booking orders freely, having every assurance that they can fill them.

Growers should be cautioned that if stock is held back next week, the result will be a slump at Thanksgiving, while if each day's cut is sent in as ready there should be a fair market November 23 and 24.

Club Meeting.

There was a good attendance at the club meeting at the Union November 5. The special feature was the election of twenty-five new members, as follows: Charles Swanson, William Meyerlus, M. Schattls, Charles Hollenback, H. Hillmers, A. Iralson, M. Mielander, Joseph Kohout, J. A. Valentine, Peter Schonsboe, William Arnold, George Collins, Phil L. McKee, Walter S. McGee, Harry Rubel, Duncan A. Robertson, John J. Shimanek, Henry L. Seitz, Charles Arnold, Joseph Bieber, Frank Johnson, W. W. Abrahamson, Frank Kadlec, Emil Fransen and John Prickett.

The club appropriated $100 for a ladies' night December 8.

President Kill appointed H. N. Bruns, E. F. Winterson and F. F. Benthay as a committee to bring in nominations for new officers at the December meeting.

A number of visitors were present and brief addresses were made by J. A. Valentine, W. F. Kasting, H. E. Philpott and others.

Various Notes.

Joseph Bauler, who formerly was foreman at the Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum greenhouses, and his brother, Nick, are now in business at Jonesville, Mich.

Frank Oechslein says he has not grown any Chinese primroses, except young stock for the trade, for several years, but last season there were calls for it and he is now flowering a quantity. It takes up so much room, when well done, that a fair price is necessary.

years a piece of property comprising twelve lots has been owned at Park Ridge and recent assessments for public improvements caused them to conclude to sell it. Vacant, it was slow sale, so a cottage was built on one lot. This sold quickly, so another is going up.

H. N. Bruns says that a good many people who used to buy cut valley in this market are now forcing it for themselves. He has standing orders from a considerable number of them for regular weekly shipments of pips from cold storage. Mr. Bruns says he was short on valley all summer, but now that he has his new house up he is able to maintain a constant supply in this market.

The name of Zech & Mann was inadvertently omitted last week in stating the places where trade tickets to the flower show can be had in quantity. John Zech is a member of the committee and, as all the members get for handling the sale is the advertising they get through it, he is entitled to mention.

George M. Garland says he has received a great deal of correspondence about his sectional concrete bench, but that orders for molds are slow in coming in, in spite of the fact that sectional benches should be made in winter to be ready when wanted.

R. R. Jampolis, a stockholder in and attorney of Kennicott Bros. Co., is assistant corporation counsel for the city. He has just prepared an opinion affecting the rights of the Illinois Central railroad to the use of certain streets on the south side, which has attracted much attention.

Vice-president W. E. Marshall was called to the chair, while Mr. Weathered requested the acceptance of his withdrawal from the contest, referring feelingly to the uniform kindness and assistance of the members in the discharge of his obligations while in office.

C. W. Scott, William Gotthardt and S. E. Bryner were elected to membership and J. H. Feisser and Herman Schaelzel were proposed.

The motion of Secretary Young to change the by-laws, so that $50 instead of $75 be the payment for life membership in the club, after an interesting discussion was unanimously approved. Messrs. Traendly, Young, Weathered and Hallock made application for life membership.

Mr. Weathered dilated upon his pet project, a permanent home for the club, and the wisdom of adding the funds received for life membership to the fund in its behalf. Mr. Traendly moved that the matter of the life membership receipts and their use be left in the hands of the board of trustees.

Letters from Benj. Hammond concerning express rates and from the general manager of the express company were read and the matter was referred to the legislative committee of the New York Florists' Club.

Mr. Traendly gave an interesting account of the national flower show, having just returned from Chicago. He said the exhibition was well worth the trip and that the large plant growers from the east had done nobly. Mr. Bunyard moved the club send a congratulatory telegram to the secretary of the national society, which was heartily endorsed by all. A. L. Miller moved sending a telegram of congratulation to Mayor Breitmeyer, of Detroit. The club also congratulated A. C. Zvolanek on his victory in securing the office of justice of the peace at Bound Brook, N. J.

which was awarded a cultural certificate, and Herman Scholzel exhibited his new crested Scottii fern, Nephrolepis Scholzelii, for which he received a first-class certificate.

Various Notes.

The New York representation at the national flower show was not as large as anticipated, but, no doubt, the select few will give a good account of themselves and return with many helpful suggestions for our own big exhibition next week at the Museum of Natural History, where great crowds are expected. Several of the leading retailers have announced their intention of exhibiting table decorations, bouquets, etc. Properly advertised, there is no doubt of an enormous attendance. This week the preliminary exhibition will take place at the American Institute building, much too small for either exhibits or attendance.

The Violet Growers' Protective Association has been formed at Rhinebeck, to further the general interests of the industry. The violet train was delayed on Tuesday and some inconvenience resulted. The horse show has helped demand. Special hundreds sold for $1.

The New York Retail Florists' Association will be formed at a meeting this week. A meeting was called at the Savoy for November 11.

J. J. Cotsonas is enlarging his store.

The Weigel stock was auctioned November 11.

William Swayne, of Kennett Square, Pa., is in town.

The Florists' Club's smoker, November 18, will be attended by a host of visiting gardeners and florists, who will be in the city attending the flower show. There is room and welcome for all. Out-of-town florists are advised to make their

New York visit convenient for the enjoyment of this splendid reunion. Chairman Rickards has a great musical program. Among the singers will be George Clarke, of Portland, Ore., one of the firm of Clarke Bros. Mr. Clarke is a tenor robusto of rare ability and will have two numbers on the program. He is here with his sister, completing his musical education.

The auction sales at Elliott's continue to draw good crowds, and the big importation of hardy stock is going rapidly. The end of the month will see the auction marts closed for the season.

Nurserymen in this vicinity have been especially favored in closing up their fall shipments. Perfect planting weather has made this a record season with all of them. Bobbink & Atkins are still digging and shipping every day. The development in the nursery department of their business has been phenomenal.

Ambrose Cleary has an enormous importation of evergreens, boxwoods, roses, shrubs and rhododendrons in the big store of the Cleary Horticultural Co., on Vesey street, and at the annex around the corner. Sales by auction every Tuesday and Friday continue. A catalogue has been issued by the firm, and heavy shipments are made out of town daily. There will be little left by Thanksgiving.

Mr. Kessler, of Schumacher & Kessler, is not a brother of Phil Kessler, the well-known cut flower wholesaler.

The Cut Flower Exchange directors met Saturday, November 7, at their headquarters in the Coogan building. The present lease of the building expires in May. Bonnet & Blake's new store, at 130 Livingston street, Brooklyn, is up-to-date in size, ice-box, lights and all conveniences, including a fine office. Mr. Blake says it is an ideal headquarters. The old store is to be turned into a first-class retail place, handsomely mirrored and improved. The lieutenant for James Mallon's Sons for many years will open there in a few days.

A movement is on foot by the New York retailers, with a view to forming a society on the lines on which the Brooklyn organization was created some months ago. Joseph Leikens is one of the leading spirits in the project.

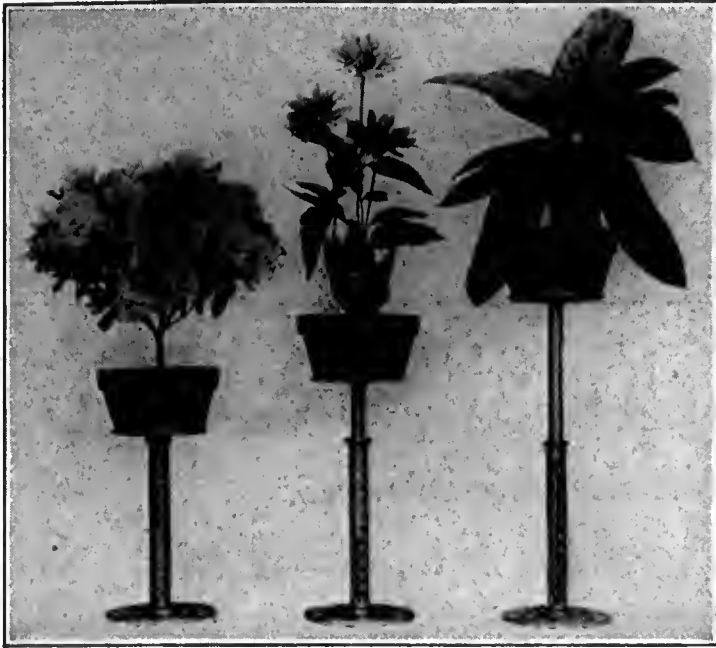

Russin & Hanfling are now receiving their large importation of immortelles and baskets. "Prices lower," Mr. Hanfling says, "than last season—good demand for Thanksgiving trade."

H. Kenney, of Brooklyn, reports a great fall demand for his supply specialties, wire designs and moss. The firm will soon build a large storage warehouse and factory on its Flatbush property.

Harry Hoffmeir, who has a branch at Atlantic City, has fitted up his store at Eighty-third street and Broadway quite out of the ordinary, with birch bark,

The Rising Eastern Market.

There is a perceptible improvement in the cut flower market since the people decided upon their first magistrate for the coming four years. Whether the improvement is due to that decision, or to the fact that outdoor flowers have disappeared even further south than here, will be left to our readers to decide. The improvement is here, and is gratifying, but it is by no means so pronounced as to cause flowers of ordinary grades to bring prices that one cares to talk about to one's neighbor. Prices continue low for all but the finest flowers. Carnations, for example, are so plentiful that the wholesale houses are glad to sell them at prices that would be scorned were it not for the certainty that the stream of flowers would soon swamp the market were listed quotations depended upon to move all the stock.

Chrysanthemums are less plentiful than a week ago, or at any rate they seem less plentiful, the demand being about sufficient to take all that reach town in salable condition. There has been no advance in prices, although a few select Chadwick are reported as having been sold at $4 a dozen. The yellow Mrs. Jerome Jones is an important factor, the white variety not being so plentiful. Mrs. Hurley, erroneously classed among the whites last week, should have

News Column

The retail buyers of cut flowers demand a great variety of stock. They are always looking for something different from what they had before. It will pay you to carry an assortment of cut flowers, so that you can offer your trade something which cannot be had every day in the year. Below we give you a few of the specials we are offering:

BOUVARDIA
$3.00 per 100

We can furnish this in pink and red. As a suggestion, for instance, it would make a very attractive center piece. Your customer would think it something out of the ordinary.

PANSIES
$1.00 per 100

A very fine strain of unusual merit. Most all bright colors. Nothing like them in quality is being offered elsewhere.

SWEET PEAS
75c and $1.00 per 100

We can supply them in pink and white. The quality is good, and for this time of the season, exceptionally fine.

Pompon Chrysanthemums
$3 and $5. per doz. bunches

They have been a great seller this season. If you have not tried them, you should include some in your next order.

Business is good with us, thank you.

COMING-OUT TEAS

We can offer you plenty of fine Chrysanthemums; the large flowered varieties and the little pompoms, which are very popular this season. The extraordinary values which we have been able to give you are not likely to be continued next week, as the height of the chrysanthemum season has been reached. We would suggest that you give your customers especially good value next week in Carnations; the Lawson, Enchantress and Winsor shades of pink give an excellent variety from which to choose, all are very fine, also the whites and scarlets. Another suggestion is Bouvardia, which makes a beautiful center-piece, most appropriate for a debutante tea-table. We also ask you to remember our fancy single Violets, which have large flowers and long stems, and another specialty suitable for decorating, Wild Smilax.

been among the yellows. Rosette is an addition to the list of pinks. Nearly all the sorts named last week are still important factors.

Orchids have been strengthened by the addition of Vanda cœrulea, a lovely shade of blue. Cattleya labiata has lasted until the first trianæ are with us. Oncidiums have stiffened perceptibly.

A noticeable feature in the rose market is the improvement in Bride and Bridesmaid, both varieties being fully equal to shipping requirements today. Brides have been in demand. Valley has been selling better for some time past. Lilies are in over-supply. Single violets are fine. Their size, stem, and fragrance warrant their being pushed by the best of the local buyers. Marie Louise doubles are becoming more popular, and in the course of a week or two will undoubtedly take a prominent place on the list. The rest of the list requires little special mention, beyond saying that gardenias continue scarce, that valley is a shade livelier, and that there is a fair demand for Asparagus plumosus in bunches.

November Club Meeting.

It is election night and there are vacant chairs visible all over the room, but the attendance is fair, with many of the leading members in their accustomed places. There is a lively debate in progress. It is a question of finance, and a question that has been agitated before and probably will be agitated many times again. But the interest never flags, new views being ably presented as the speakers warm to their work.

While the debate is in progress there is time for a glance over the personnel of the meeting. President Hahman is in the chair, his pleasant smile and forceful use of the gavel presiding and commanding by turn. He is a master both of persuasion and of command, and generally manages to control the situation at the most critical times. When for a moment excitement waxes high and Babel ensues, he quietly bides his time, regaining leadership while the combatants pause for breath. On his left sits Secretary Rust, ready with every scrap of information desired. His reading of the minutes and reports is clear and expressive. Next to him at the table in the corner is the treasurer, George Craig, never heard in debate, yet powerful in his silent command of the purse strings.

On the seats facing the chair are the supporters of the government and the opposition, mixed indiscriminately, except that the government finds its readiest speakers on the front benches, where the members who have been members since the first organization of the Florists' Club are generally seen. Foremost among them is William K. Harris, a fluent speaker, on whom every president has relied for an intelligent opinion, couched in good, common sense language, and has never relied in vain, even when the knottiest questions were before the house. Mr. Harris' forte lies in terse expression, embellished by homely simile, often humorous, reminding one of Abraham Lincoln. Near him is John Westcott, an acknowledged leader of the house when action is demanded. Mr. Westcott has a taking way of putting things that appeals to men of all shades of opinion; an admirer once described him as the most natural man on the floor. Near him sits Edward Reid, an invaluable member of the government, because when the tangle is most hopeless he keeps his head, unraveling the twists with calm deliberation.

The opposition varies with the question; there are a few members who are always in the opposition, a number who are generally in the opposition, and a great many who are sometimes in the opposition.

In the center of the room, just back of the ministerial seats, Adolph Farenwald rises to address the chair. Mr. Farenwald is vehement, giving each word its full force. He says what he means and means all he says. Whether the ranks of the opposition are behind him in unbroken lines or whether he is alone in what he says, matters little to him.

He is never fazed; an invaluable member of the body politic. Over on the left is a young man, neat and jaunty in appearance, who has lately come over into the government ranks. He has named the vice-president, no small honor for a young man these days, and is chairman of an important committee.

"Mr. President," he is saying, "money is the grease that makes the wheels of progress run smoothly; without that grease the axle creaks, progress is slow." The house is with him. This is Charles H. Grakelow.

There are some other speakers on both sides of the chamber, and many who prefer to remain listeners, of more than local repute; men whose names are household words in circles floricultural and whose doings and sayings are frequently chronicled in these columns. But the chairman is calling his motion to adjourn and the eyes have it.

Various Notes.

The Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society held its annual chrysanthemum show in Joclyn hall November 3 and 4. The private gardeners at the Hill made an excellent showing.

F. J. Lincoln, Trenton, N. J., paid a flying visit to this city a few days ago.

Frank L. Polites will open a cigar, candy and flower shop on the elevated terminus at Market street ferries.

The people's flower show in Horticultural hall, Fairmount park, was opened Sunday, November 8. Large crowds view the beautiful color effects in chrysanthemums.

Alexander B. Scott left North Philadelphia on the eighteen-hour train November 9 for Chicago with a choice exhibit of his new White Killarney.

Max Nitzschke has succeeded Thomas H. Best as manager for J. J. Habermehl's Sons at the Bellevue-Stratford.

Plath thought the congestion in the eastern market at this season worse than in San Francisco, and spoke enthusiastically of home business conditions.

A. W. Perry & Son, Media, Pa., have been sending fine Princess of Wales violets to Lilley & Upton.

The chrysanthemum show of the Germantown Horticultural Society was held in connection with the November meeting in Association hall, Germantown, November 9. Miss Adeline H. Jacobs spoke on "Our Common Trees."

A. Blane is selling for Eugene Weiss, of Hatboro, Pa.

Edwin Lonsdale, who has been judging the national flower show in Chicago, November 6 to 10, is expected home the end of this week.

Robert Kift is pleased with the demand for his new fern and berry globe.

John A. Shellem exhibited two fine new chrysanthemums at the November meeting of the Florists' Club.

The Robert Craig Co. has a white Baby chrysanthemum the exact counterpart of the yellow.

M. Rice & Co. have been working overtime to keep up with their orders.

I have stated on two occasions in this column that the dahlia, Jack Rose, is a seedling of William F. Bassett, Hamonton, N. J. This is an error. It is a seedling of L. K. Peacock, Williamstown Junction, N. J., and half of the stock is sold by Mr. Peacock to Mr. Bassett.

J. D. Eisele, vice-president of the Henry A. Dreer Co., advises me that the new nephrolepis, Scholzei, was awarded the Shaw gold medal, the silver medal of the S. A. F., and the St. Louis Horticultural Society's certificate a few days ago.

The fall show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was opened in Horticultural hall, Tuesday, November 10. A full account of this exhibition is postponed until next week, owing to the national flower show at Chicago.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. received 400 cases of supplies on the steamer Marquette. Edward Reid predicts an improvement in business conditions. He thinks the demand which is now commencing will far exceed that of last year.

When he went to board the train for the west at Broad street station, the Pullman porter put him in the Washington car and the conductor was sufficiently careless to take up his Pittsburg ticket and issue receipt therefor. Mr. Rosnosky had an appointment with a customer in Pittsburg, which he missed, and in addition there was the loss of his temper, which latter he fears he will not recover until the Pullman people settle his claim for damages.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There is nothing new to report about the general trade. While all are looking and hoping for prosperity, they realize it is too soon to expect much change. There are mountains of flowers coming into the wholesale houses and fine stock is selling cheaper than ever before, but weak-stemmed mums and carnations that are not the finest are not in demand at large work, and as a number of the largest grow chrysanthemums and the warm weather has brought them in with a rush, they never sell or use anything else if chrysanthemums can be made to answer.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met November 3, and notwithstanding the fact that it was election day, there was a large crowd present. President Burki was absent on account of illness and John Jones acted as chairman. As there was a competitive display, the chair appointed the following judges: T. P. Langhans, Robert Lilley and John Featherstone, who awarded prizes as follows:

Six cut chrysanthemum blooms, Mr. Price, gardener for J. B. Laughlin, first on Bright-hurst; David Fraser, gardener for H. C. Frick, second on F. S. Vallis.

Twelve chrysanthemum blooms, one of each, Mr. Prince first, Paul M. Madsen, gardener to R. H. Boggs, second; Mr. Jenkins, gardener to A. R. Peacock, third.

Specimen plant, Mr. Price first on Garza. Honorable mention, Mr. Price for vase of Mme. Perrin, grown in bunches the same as pompons.

Among other things shown were a vase of Beatrice May by Mrs. Madsen and a fine plant of Mary Richards, pompon, by Mr. Price.

Mr. Weisenbach, gardener for R. B. Mellam, exhibited plants and flowers of chrysanthemums which he grows outdoors and in frames, which were much better than the average stock grown under glass, and for which he received many compliments.

Schenley park, John Jones foreman, exhibited cut blooms of nearly a score of mums. This stock was fine, and the fact that Mr. Jones as foreman of Schenley park cannot compete at the shows, resulted in Henry Negley taking the floor, and after stating that he has been visiting all the best places in this country and Europe, including the public conservatories in eastern and western cities, he finds that as a grower he has failed to meet Mr. Jones' superior and rarely his equal as an all-around plantsman. Mr. Falconer being called to the chair, a motion was made that a committee be appointed to arrange for a gratuity to be tendered Mr. Jones on behalf of the club. The call for remarks brought forth some of the most complimentary references to his cultural skill by the men who have watched him for years. The committee is Henry Negley and T. P. Langhans.

There was some comment as to the advisability of growing chrysanthemums in bunches rather than single flowers, selecting the sorts that do well, as private gardeners report their people prefer the smaller plants for decorations.

Various Notes.

Those who left for Chicago are: Fred Burki, E. R. Reinemann and wife, E. C. Ludwig, wife and son, Gustave Ludwig and wife, and Fred Kocher. The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. sent a box of Appleton chrysanthemums and several boxes of carnations for the exhibit.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The cut flower trade is quiet just now, with an abundance of flowers coming in.

Saturday and Sunday, November 7 and 8, the greenhouses of H. H. Rogers, of Fairhaven, were thrown open to the public. There was a grand showing of mums and other plants. Fairhaven is across the river from New Bedford.

S. J. Donaghy, formerly gardener at the Taber estate, has started in business for himself. The other week his friends presented him with a new delivery wagon, this being in the nature of a great surprise to him.

F. C. Covil is now with J. W. Howard, of Somerville. W. L.

The Market.

Business is good. Everybody seems to be busy. All Saints' day caused a good cleaning out of all stock on hand. Since then trade has been good. There seems to be about enough of roses, carnations and mums to meet the demand.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel arrived home, from a trip to Germany, on election day. He was just in time to cast his vote. He found everything at his greenhouses in good shape. The roses and carnations are looking fine here.

Ben Kramer finds business good. He is selling lots of mums.

Royston & Fenton are receiving mums and carnations from W. J. Ritterskamp, of Princeton, Ind. E. L. F.

HOULTON, ME.—Harold Chadwick, who recently erected a greenhouse on High street, has now opened a downtown stand in French's.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—John A. Lambert, formerly superintendent of parks at Chattanooga, Tenn., is now manager for John L. Parker, the florist of this city.

A STUNT FOR LUTHER.

"No other name
To Burbank's fame
Could ever hold a candle,
If that wise gent
Would but invent
A melon with a handle."

PRACTICALLY all vine seeds are worth good money this year.

BEANS are turning out fully as light a crop has been anticipated.

ONION seed is not of so great interest as it was at this date a year ago.

REPORTS are to the effect that both bouquet green and holly will be of good quality and plentiful this year.

SWEET CORN will be, with few exceptions, probably equal to the demand and of much better quality than last year.

OLIVER BELL, who is in charge of the interests of the Laughlin Seed Co., San Jose, Cal., at Kenton, O., states that they grow onion seed only, no sets, in Ohio.

G. B. McVAY says that the seed and plant business in Birmingham, Ala., has increased twenty-five per cent as the result of the "city beautiful" movement there.

THE work of pricing the retail catalogues is rendered easier by the wholesale lists that are coming to hand, but these latter discourage any idea of advancing prices in proportion to the shortages on the scarcest items.

THE corn crop of the United States will surpass expectations. The average yield will be 26.2 bushels per acre, indicating a total production of 2,642,687,000, or over 50,000,000 bushels in excess of last year's yield, according to the preliminary estimates announced in the government crop report for November, issued November 9. The yield per acre in 1907 was 25.9, as finally estimated, and averaged 25.6 for ten years.

BEST SHELF JARS FOR SEED.

Please let me know from whom I can buy seed bottles suitable for carrying all kinds of garden seed on the shelf, to dispense for the retail.

J. E. F.

The most economical and practical bottle for this purpose is the Mason jar, in quart or pint sizes, as desired. With a good lithographed label on them, they look well on the shelf, and they are safe, owing to the firm fitting cover, which is so easily removed and screwed on again. For display only, the globe-shaped bottle is the proper thing, but it is of no value when dispensing seed is

PLACE TO BUY SEEDS.

The Rural New-Yorker has been one of the most insistent of the farm papers in its demand that seedsmen guarantee the seeds they sell, and even the slight modification of its views as indicated in the editorial published October 17 will be appreciated by the trade. The reference is as follows:

"The seed business stands alone in the fact that no absolute guarantee is given by the dealers. If we buy seeds we know before we plant them that the dealer will not be responsible for the crop. In Maryland, and we think in some other states, efforts have been made to pass a seeds law based on the principles of the fertilizer laws, but it is not likely that any court could compel the seedsmen to guarantee varieties. The character of the seedsmen therefore becomes of even greater importance than in the case of fertilizer manufacturers. There are a number of seed houses which have for many years conducted an honorable trade. They do their best to secure strong and vital seed—true to name. Since, from the present nature of the seed trade, no positive guarantee will be given, the safest plan is to deal only with those firms who are most conservative in their statements and have a reputation for fair dealing."

BULB GROWING IN HOLLAND.

Consul-general S. Listoe, of Rotterdam, makes the following interesting, though perhaps somewhat prejudiced, statements in regard to the rapidly growing Dutch bulb trade:

"An industry characteristic of the Netherlands is the growing of tulip and hyacinth bulbs. Attempts have been made in several parts of the world to grow these, but nowhere can the experiment be said to have been successful, as the proper kind of soil for the propagation of perfect bulbs seems only to exist in the small space of territory between the cities of Leyden and Haarlem. This stretch of country is in reality the bottom of the old Haarlem Sea (Haarlemmer Meer), which was laid dry about the year 1852, and this sea-bottom soil, a combination of sand and decomposed vegetables and plants, appears to be the

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market has dropped to a low point. Tuesday saw the counters of the Exchange loaded with stock of all kinds, especially mums and roses, and a thin rank of buyers in attendance; all this in the face of a season replete with unusually brilliant social functions. No one ventures a prediction as to the immediate future. The prolonged autumn weather has had much to do with the situation, and the products of growers might be considered prolific. Prices are overlooked until a clearing out is imperative. Ordinary concessions do not seem to influence demands.

The chrysanthemum naturally leads at this time, and, on the whole, prices are far below last season's prices. With an influx of roses greater than the market can absorb, there is considerable sacri-

or Amaryllis Hallii.

A perfectly Hardy Amaryllis, producing beautiful pink flowers.

DESCRIPTION:—Lycoris Squamigera produces in early spring attractive green foliage which grows until July, when it ripens off and disappears, and one not familiar with its habits would think the bulb had died, but about a month later, as if by magic, the flower stalks spring from the ground to a height of 2 or 3 feet, developing an umbel of large and beautiful lily-shaped flowers, 3 to 4 inches across and from 8 to 12 in number, of a delicate lilac-pink, shaded with clear blue.

CULTURE:—As the bulb is perfectly hardy without any protection, it can be planted either in the fall or spring, but we consider fall the best time, as the bulbs will have splendid chance to get established before flowering time. Cover the crown about 4 inches.

Very useful for the hardy border or among shrubbery.

ficing of these flowers. Carnations are plentiful and dragging; prices are not a factor. Present prospects are not particularly rosy.

Various Notes.

J. Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia, Pa., gave an illustrated lecture on the Yellowstone Park and Puget Sound, on Monday night, November 9, in the club room of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. It also was ladies' night and a large gathering resulted.

C. Keur, of C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, was in Baltimore looking for orders for peonies.

James Glass had a pretty display of mums in Lexington market Saturday, November 7.

Charles Hamilton, of Mount Washington, sent some fine mums to the Exchange last week.

Leroy Oldham has purchased eight acres of fine land at Catonsville. He is going to devote it to growing flowers and nursery stock and expects to build in the spring.

E. A. Seidewitz is having extensive improvements made to his store on Charles street.

The members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will attend the Washington florists' mum show on Friday, November 13. A stop will be made at College Park, Md., to inspect the new greenhouses. Quite a lot of experimenting has been done here with mums and lettuce. Professor White has charge of the greenhouses. A bowling match will be in order for the evening, between the Baltimore and Washington bowling teams.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND.—McDonald & Steel have added to their outfit a handsome new delivery wagon.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The American Rose & Plant Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $25,000, by E. H. Jackson, Carl E. Glenn, Opha Jackson and Thad and B. McLaughlin.

The Market.

Now that the election is over, we hope that business will settle down to its normal conditions, which should be fairly good at this time. And from present indications we are going to have a fair amount of trade in the near future. Flowers, however, are very plentiful, and the prices, owing to the excess of bright weather, are away down. Mums have never been finer and great quantities of them are sold daily, both in the stores and by the street hucksters. Roses are only in fair supply, but carnations can be had in any quantity, at almost any price.

L. longiflorum has taken the place of the Japanese lilies and sells well. Valley continues to move slowly. A few early narcissi have made their appearance. Sweet peas are completely out of season. Violets are plentiful, but are completely bought up daily. There is little other outside stock of value to be seen in the market, and until the bulbs are in greater evidence there will be little to mention. Smilax is much more plentiful than at any time this season and quite a quantity of it was used last week in the various political displays.

Various Notes.

J. M. Holland has disposed of his Piedmont store to M. H. Morse and will in future devote his entire time to his floral business at East Berkeley.

N. Røllerli has opened a floral establishment at 573 Eighth street, Oakland, Cal.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 84th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

RUDOLF KAHL has charge of the C. A. Stevens place at Delavan, Wis., where considerable landscape work is in progress.

NUT GROWERS MEET.

The seventh annual convention of the National Nut Growers' Association was held at Chattanooga, Tenn., October 27 to 29. Much interest was shown and the attendance, while not larger than usual, was representative, being made up of members from eighteen different states.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—J. B. Wight, Cairo, Ga.
First vice-president—J. B. Curtis, Orange Heights, Fla.
Second vice-president—H. C. White, Dewitt, Ga.
Secretary—J. F. Wilson, Poulan, Ga.
Treasurer—C. P. Close, College Park, Md.

New members on the executive committee are Robert T. Morris, of New York, and C. P. Close, of Maryland.

Albany, Ga., was selected as the place for the next meeting.

Among the prominent speakers present were H. E. Van Deman and C. A. Reed, of Washington, D. C.; J. B. Wight and H. C. White, of Georgia; Sam H. James, of Louisiana; W. N. Roper, of Virginia; Prof. H. A. Gossard, of Ohio; Prof. C. G. Woodbury, of Indiana; W. F. Heikes, of Alabama.

A feature of this convention was the exhibits of nuts, nursery stock, etc. This embraced several very interesting collections, especially one from Indiana, which indicated great possibilities for the pecan in territory farther north than it is supposed to thrive. Another exhibit, from New York, gives promise of the English (Persian) walnut rivaling the famous apple orchards of that state as a profitable resource.

WINCHESTER, TENN., NURSERIES.

Perhaps the leading enterprises which contribute to the wealth and prosperity of Winchester are the nurseries. The Southern Nursery covers about 1,000 acres of fine land on the southern suburb of Winchester, lying on the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railway. Its capital stock is $50,000; 150 laborers are employed on the grounds, and 100 agents. Large shipments are made to California, Oregon and Washington on the west, through the middle west, south and east to New York. The annual output averages from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 plants and trees.

The office quarters are modern, with up-to-date equipment. A large fireproof vault protects the books, orders and valuables. There have been 25,000 orders stored there at a time, in alphabetic order. The shipping season is on now and many interesting phases are presented. The tree-stripper turns out about 100,000 trees daily. In the packing moss and shingle tow, which hold the moisture, are used. The cars are on their own sidetrack.

The business has had an almost phenomenal growth under the present management. It is one of the few enterprises not affected by the financial stringency of 1907. The orders this fall tax even its large capacity. Hon. H. N. Camp, who resides in Knoxville, is president; Nathan W. Hale, who served a number of years in congress from the Second district, is vice-president; E. W. Chatten is secretary, treasurer and general manager. He has been connected with the plant since 1902. Others connected with the business who are worthy of mention are: E. H. Dudley, of the west Tennessee territory, with headquarters in Memphis; Gilbert Marshall, division superintendent, with headquarters in Little Rock, Ark., and R. N. Coles, superintendent of the California division, with headquarters in Riverside, Cal.

The success of the Tennessee Wholesale Nursery is a demonstration of push and enterprising ability. Its founder and promoter, J. C. Hale, began with ten acres of leased land in 1897, on which he grew 200,000 peach trees. In 1904 he occupied 500 acres of fine land and placed on the market 4,000,000 peach trees. Having specialized peaches with success, he then added pears and cherries.

A wholesale business is conducted, and 4,500,000 trees are now ready for shipment. The office quarters are east of Winchester. The equipments are all modern. CAULIFLOWER WILL NOT HEAD.

Will some man of experience in this particular line explain why apparently good strains of European cauliflower, purchased from reliable sources in this country, will frequently not head in a satisfactory manner and sometimes will not head at all? The writer believes he knows how to grow and cultivate cauliflower, but frequently cannot get satisfactory results. MARKET GARDENER.

The best cauliflower growers often fail to get their plantations to head uniformly. They know that the head will not be regularly formed unless the growth of the plant proceeds continuously, without check from beginning to end.

Adverse weather conditions are probably the main cause of the heads not forming properly. At Chicago, where there are some very successful cauliflower growers, the aim seems to be to get the plants set out early enough to get them well along to the heading stage before the hot, dry weather. Cool, moist weather is one of the essential things in the cultivation of cauliflower. It will not head well in the hot summer weather, and a dry spell coming at a critical time will blast the heads, even though they are well along and give excellent promise.

It requires considerable skill and favorable weather to make a good crop of spring planted cauliflower. In the fall it requires less skill and it seems much easier then to get a good crop. The same seed is used for both spring and fall planting, and frequently seed that fails to make a good spring planted crop will make an excellent fall planted one.

In the opinion of the most successful growers, favorable weather does more than anything else to make a good crop of cauliflower. Cultural skill is necessary; so is good seed, but the weather has most to do with it.

SOIL STERILIZATION.

[A paper by B. H. Thorne, of Wooster, O., read at the meeting of greenhouse vegetable growers in Cleveland, October 31, 1908.]

In sterilizing soil in the greenhouse we have two general classes of diseases to contend with. In the first class we have bacterial or fungous diseases, such as drop and rosette, and in the second class insect diseases, such as nematodes.

There are two efficient methods of sterilization. One method is by the use of formaldehyde or formalin, the other by the use of heat, usually in the form of steam. Formalin is useful only in cases of fungous or bacterial diseases, while steam is efficient in all cases.

Sterilization With Formalin.

In describing the methods of sterilization we will begin with formalin. The soil to be sterilized can be handled best if placed in the beds where it is to remain, or, in case of old soil, if left in its original beds. The beds are prepared the same as for planting, taking care to get the soil as fine as possible, and if any manure or new soil is needed it should be added at this time. If the soil is loose it should be firmed or tramped.

The bed is then watered enough to bring every particle of soil into a moist condition. As soon as the surplus water has drained off and the surface can be raked without soil sticking to the teeth of the rake, it is ready for treatment. The watering of the soil is to bring bacteria and fungi into an active state of life, and to moisten the soil enough so that the least amount of mixture will do the work.

Mixing and Applying.

The mixture is made of two pounds of forty per cent formalin to fifty gallons of water and can be applied with a barrel force pump and hose, or it can be put into the water tanks, when a tank is used, or may be applied with a mixer, to be described shortly. The formalin can be run into the watering system and applied by the usual method of watering.

In applying the mixture to the soil, the bed is first raked about an inch deep. This raking allows the mixture to settle faster into the soil and prevents its spreading over much surface. The bed is watered as heavily as possible the first time and then gone over from one to three times more, or until you are absolutely sure the mixture has gone down to the bottom of the soil and, in the case of ground beds, from one to two inches deeper. If the mixture is doing its work properly, fishworms leave their skin behind them as they crawl along and they die in from ten minutes to half an hour.

The bed is then let stand from four to six days, or until all traces of formalin have disappeared and it is dry enough to plant. If planted too soon, the young plants will die. About a gallon of mixture is needed to the cubic foot of soil.

The Formalin Mixer.

The formalin mixer is made of two ordinary kitchen range tanks, one above and at one side of the other. The upper one holds the formalin and the lower one is the mixer. The tops of both are connected by a small pipe with a valve in it. This pipe is to equalize the pressure in both tanks by the passage of air back and forth.

The formalin tank has a glass water gauge at the bottom to show when the

Mrs. Chas. Knopf

A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The flower is 4 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal, with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal, closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, and holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives one good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby

Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives one grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

formalin gets low, and the lower tank has a gauge at the top to show when the water gets too high. From the bottom of the formalin tank a $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe goes down to meet the pipe from the waterworks, running into the bottom of the lower tank. Connecting the end of the $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe with the waterworks pipe are a needle valve to regulate the flow of formalin and another glass gauge to show that the formalin is running properly.

The formalin and water are mixed in the lower part of the lower tank by the moving water coming in continuously and the mixture runs out about one-third of the way up, back into the waterworks system. The apparatus is connected to the regular watering system through a by-pass.

In order to get the right proportions of formalin and water, run fifty gallons of water through the apparatus and time it, and then regulate the needle valve to run out two pounds in the same time. An air pump is needed to force air into the upper tank, to force back the water in the lower tank when it gets too full.

With this apparatus one man can apply the mixture as fast as the water runs.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Now that election is over, there is an air of business on all sides. While no notable change has taken place, still everyone seems to have more confidence and it is only a matter of time until things will be humming again. Let us hope for some more of the days as we had them in 1906-7, when it was often late in the night before all the orders were out.

There is plenty of good stock of all kinds to be had at most reasonable prices. There is also an abundance of asparagus and smilax.

Various Notes.

A brother of Robert Watson is a member of the council in Detroit and at present it looks as though he would be the president of this body for the coming year.

Harry Pearee, of the Pontiac Floral Co., has been in the Upper Peninsula on a hunting expedition.

It is rumored that August Von Boesclager is contemplating building some more houses.

Some of the old familiar faces were missed at the recent outing to Mount Clemens, Robert Flowerday, Frank Holz-nagle, Ed Beard, and others.

The only brother of Wm. Dilger died last week in Chicago and was buried at Sandusky, O. This was probably the reason Mr. Dilger was not with the boys last week.

Waldemar Maebius, of Pittsburg; George Kimmons and Samuel Virgin, of Pontiac; Mr. Boeringer, of Bay City, and C. Winterich, of Defiance, O., helped make up the party to Mount Clemens recently. Mr. Boeringer is a member of the Detroit club.

Quite a party from Detroit left for Chicago Sunday, November 8. Among them were W. B. Brown, Walter Taepke and Albert Pochelon. Fred Breitmeyer left November 5.

A neat invitation announced the opening of the new flower shop of Edward A. Feters at 114 Farmer street.

The last regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held November 4. Quite a large number were in attendance, to congratulate the new mayor of Detroit. During the evening City Boiler Inspector J. C. McCabe gave a talk on greenhouse heating, which was very interesting. After adjournment a lunch was served by the entertainment committee. H. S.

Smith's New Chrysanthemums

Are in strong demand each year.

Past experience of commercial growers has established the merits of our products.

Of those which we have sent out during the last twenty years, many are still favorites and live issues.

The present year novelties have been well received. Those of 1909 are of the same high standard. They have good stem and foliage, producing fine flowers from late buds.

Early propagation and planting are not such important factors as with the many foreign novelties offered.

NEW ORLEANS.

Since my last report, in which I gave my full impression about the last All Saints' day, I have met many florists, who are all well satisfied with the business done on that day. There was not exactly a shortage of flowers among the growers, but private gardens suffered during the rainy season and this created an increased call on the trade. Flowers which came from Chicago were generally found good, and so far few complaints have been heard.

We had this week a committee meeting for the last arrangements about our flower show, and two days before the opening a general meeting of the club will be called. Everything seems to promise success.

O. G. Bishop, representing S. L. Allen & Co., of Philadelphia, was in town.
 M. M. L.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The presidential election caused quite a stir in Buffalo and made some business for the store men.

Chrysanthemums have moved well during the last ten days and also have been scarcer than usual. Late varieties have arrived much earlier this year, and it looks as if Thanksgiving mums were going to bring a good price. While mums have reigned supreme, carnations have stood practically still. Stock piles up every day and thousands have gone to waste. Roses have also moved slowly.

Business bids fair to be good up to the holidays, as several balls are to be given in honor of debutantes of the season. There seems to be a large number of parties booked, which is bound to help business.

The Club's Flower Show.

The committee of five, appointed by President Sandiford for the arrangement of the flower show, has completed arrangements, as stated in the following letter, addressed to the growers:

The Buffalo Florists' Club will hold a flower show, November 18, at the Iroquois hotel parlors. Exhibition opens at 3 p. m. and banquet at 8 p. m.

The committee of arrangements has endeavored to procure flowers of interest to you. A paper will be read by Prof. John F. Cowell on his visit to the national flower show, held at Chicago.

WILLIAM C. SMITH

61st and Market Sts., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The club extends an invitation for the afternoon of November 18, and also to the banquet in the evening. The banquet will be a stag affair; the price of banquet tickets will be $1. The club will be very grateful to you should you have any flowers or plants of interest that you could send, not necessarily chrysanthemums, but any other flowers of commercial value will be acceptable. Exhibits sent are at the disposal of the committee.

William Legg has been appointed manager of the show, and George McClure, Jr., chairman of the press committee.

The club will be glad to receive flowers, mums or others, that a grower might wish to ship. They would be especially glad to receive any novelties, which will surely be placed on exhibition to the growers. The committee has arranged, also, to invite the elite of the town; also prominent business men.

If you should desire any information on the subject, write to J. R. Cloudsley, 584 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Remember the date—November 18.

Various Notes.

Flower shows were the main attractions last week. The conservatory at South park, under the direction of Professor Cowell, had a large display, which attracted many hundreds to the place.

W. J. Palmer had a fine display of large blooms in both stores, as did the Wm. Scott Co., at the greenhouses at Main and Balcom streets. R. A. S.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Miss Annie Wittvogel, proprietor of the Eau Claire Greenhouses, has moved her Columbia headquarters to 1611 Main street. She has 20,000 feet of glass.

FULTON, N. Y.—Chas. B. Wetherby, the Hannibal street florist, will build a greenhouse on the land between Morrill Bros.' printing plant and the Stephens property on Cayuga street.

The Market.

Business continues to be good. Retailers and wholesalers alike are busy, and everything goes along merrily. Every indication points to a continuation of the present good business.

The fine, large midseason mums are with us now and they are selling well. In fact, all kinds and sizes of mums are selling well. Thanksgiving day will soon be with us and it ought to bring out a good business this year. That day will about be the finish of the mum this year. The dry season has tended to bring in the mums more rapidly. After Thanksgiving the big cut of mums will be over and then the rose and the carnation will come back into their own.

Roses have been selling out well. It has been impossible to fill all orders for Beauties, and pink roses also are not equal to the supply. Carnations have also been selling well, but there are perhaps more of them coming in than roses, as they do not clean out so well.

Violets are good property and so are lilies and valley. Green goods are selling well. New bronze galax and bronze leucothoe are on the market now and meet a steady demand.

Various Notes.

Quite a few of the florists of this city went to the national flower show at Chicago. Many more would have liked to go if it had been possible for them to get away. Among those who intended going were Fred Gear, George Tromeay, C. E. Critchell, R. Witterstaetter, J. A. Peterson and many others.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerlock, of Lexington, Ky., were callers on their way to the show in Chicago. Mr. Honaker, also of Lexington, joined them in this city for the same destination.

Julius Baer had a window display of many varieties of orchids, which was most beautiful and attracted a great deal of attention. C. J. OHMER.

TORONTO, ONT.—Plans have been made for the erection of a palm house in Allan Gardens, to cost $32,000.

BATAVIA, ILL.—The Riverbank Greenhouses have secured a part of the J. C. Strader drug store at the county seat, Geneva, and will open a retail department.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been fairly good. Stock is plentiful, but the prices keep up. Violets are not yet plentiful. Mums are fairly good all over, roses and carnations good and plentiful.

Various Notes.

A number of Minneapolis florists planned on going to the convention, but business prevented them from carrying out their intentions. Theo. Wirth, H. C. and H. F. Will and J. Jorgenson went down November 7, and a few more may go later. Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Desmond will be among the latter.

Miss Whitted had the decorations for a couple of weddings and other social affairs, and had a busy week.

James Souden had one of the largest coming out receptions at the Minikahda club last week.

R. A. Latham did good business last week, a couple of large dinner decorations calling for orchids, valley, etc., and the general cut flower trade has been first-class.

Rice Bros. find the out-of-town business good, and no difficulty in getting good stock.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has a fine stock of mum plants and Primula obconica. It is cutting a good crop of mums and the cut of roses and Beauties is excellent.

T. H. Hall and T. S. Lynes are out on a hunting trip at Wheaton, Minn.

The City park greenhouses are having a mum show.

Visitors:—Geo. E. Valke, Minot, N. D.; N. P. Lindberg, Rugby, N. D.; Mr. Shotwell, Fargo, N. D. M. E. M.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

Many funerals in the city are keeping the florists busy this week. Beautiful work is being turned out. Chrysanthemums are now in the height of their glory and are seen at most of the social functions. Roses and carnations are coming on finely, while violets are not very choice yet.

Various Notes.

Mr. Tong, formerly manager of the Massassauga Gardens, Erie, is now in partnership with Mr. Weeks in Ashtabula, O. The new firm is known as Tong & Weeks.

Mrs. C. T. Glover, formerly saleslady for the Baur Floral Co., has moved from Corry, Pa., to Erie. B. P.

MONEY BACK IF NOT PLEASED

Now that Election is Over and the Uncertainties Removed Prepare for Thanksgiving and Christmas

We protect the trade. We employ no fakers, no drummers. No department stores handle our goods. We have great faith in Uncle Sam (the mail). He is our partner.

Look at the photo! What a lively time at Aschmann's, the busy bee unpacking his big importations of Azaleas, Palms, etc. We have it. Have what? An immense stock of the choicest salable plants in season and everybody who sees them will be astonished and say, "No use talking, you're a cracker-jack." I am going to make things lively this fall. Five thousand Araucarias, twice as many Ferns, Palms and Azaleas and many thousands of other salable stock must go at panic prices. By Christmas all must be sold. Why? We want the room to force our extensive Easter stock.

We Lead the Country in Araucarias

Have been in the lead in the past; have it now and shall lead in the future.

We have houses full of choice Excelsa robusta compacta and Excelsa glauca; enough to supply the entire country.

Will you pay 50 per cent to 100 per cent more by buying from others who are not specialists? Hope not; the wise are on guard. We are going to sell all of them and without drummers. By jingo, we must sell them; an elephant for 40c, 50c and 60c; a jumbo for 75c to $1.00; and a holy terror in size for $1.25 to $1.50.

TAKE NOTICE!

Plants have grown considerably and are now fully 10 per cent to 20 per cent bigger than advertised below.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitman and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in sunny houses (not white-washed), which will produce stiff fronds; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, spring importation 1908, have a houseful; plants 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 4 years old, 22, 24, 26, 28 to 30 inches high, the same in width, perfect beauties, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 up to $2.00; specimens, 40 inches high, $2.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Scottii Ferns, never before were as fine, 5-in., 35c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c and 60c; 7-in. pots, very fine, 75c; $1.00 to $1.25.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 tiers, 10 to 12 inches high, 40c; 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Perfect shape, no finer can be grown, a houseful to sell, 3 to 4 tiers, 4 years old, 20, 25 to 28 inches, $1.25, $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Pieroni, 6-in., 50c.

Whitman, 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, made up or as big as a bushel basket, only $1.00, worth $1.50; 8-in. pans, three large plants in a pan, 75c; 9-in. pans, 3 large plants in a pan, as big as a wash tub, $1.25 to $1.50. We have a big stock of these varieties and they are pot, not bench grown Amer-pohlil, 5-in., 30c, 35c to 40c.

Wilson, 6-in. pans, made up, 25c to 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 to 6 good leaves, 5½ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 20 inches high, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, a large one, about 40 inches high, in the center, surrounded by three smaller ones, $4.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 36 inches high, $2.00; specimen, 7-in., 40 to 50 inches high, $2.50 to $3.00; 6-in., 30 inches high, $1.50; 6-in., 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00; 6-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in., 50c; 4-in. pots, 35c.

Cocos Weddelliana, bushy plants, 3-in., 15c, 18c and 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, 2½-in., $4.00 per 100; 3-in., 6c. A big stock, best assortment.

Cycas Revoluta, or Sago Palm, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 5 to 20 leaves to a plant, 10c per leaf.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, three plants in a pot, ready for 5-in., 30c.

Ficus Elastica, rubbers, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus, 2½-in., $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100; 4-in., $10.00 per 100.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, in bloom now and will be up to Christmas. Of this so much admired Christmas novelty we have a big house full, raised from leaf cuttings only, large bushy plants, free of any disease, 5-in. pots, 40c; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00; 7-in. pots, $1.25; 8-in. pots, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Begonia, newest type of improved Erfordii, an immense bloomer for Christmas and all winter through, 4-in. pots, 15c; 5½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.

Begonia Rex, 5-in., 25c each. Only one, but best variety.

Primula Sinensis and Obconica, best improved strain, 4-in. pots, $10.00 per 100, or 10c each. Sinensis, 3-in., $5.00 per 100; 5½-in., $2.00 to $2.50 per dozen.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown. Remember, only pot-grown. Can successfully be forced for Easter blooming, nicely branched, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c to 50c.

Azalea Indica have just arrived, raised under contract, from our regular Azalea grower in Ghent, Belgium. Have an immense stock of the choicest, full of buds, with all their foliage, etc.

Azalea Indica. Start in now to force Azalea Indica for Christmas blooming. Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner, Vervaekeana, Apollo, Hexe and Mme. Petrick, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each. Christmas varieties can also be kept for Easter. Azaleas for Easter Forcing. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Empress of India, Professeur Wolters, Apollo, De Schryveriana, Niobe, Andre alba, Dr. Moore, John Llewellyn, Helene Thelemann, Memoire de L. Van Houtte, Empereur du Bresil, and others, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00.

Cineraria Hybrida, H. F. Michell's improved strain, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100. Poinsettias, 3-in. pots, 7c; 4-in. pots, 10c.

Jerusalem Cherries (Solanum), full of berries, 6-in. pots, 2½c, 35c, 40c and 50c. Multi-florum, the best improved variety.

Daisies, yellow and white, 2½-in., $3.00 per 100. Periwinkle, or Vinca variegata, 4-in., 10c.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The election, no doubt, was the cause of the falling off in business last week. Flowers of all kinds continue plentiful. Chrysanthemums still hold the fort, and have a bad effect on roses and other flowers.

Various Notes.

The coming week will be show week. If advertising with posters and the press will make a flower show a success, this one will certainly be a winner. November 8 the Washington Sunday Times had a whole section devoted to flowers, and called the Flower Show Section. Gude Bros. and F. H. Kramer had full-page advertisements, while every other store had from a quarter to a half-page. Mr. Marche had a striking ad, which read: "Formerly table decorator to their Majesties, the King and Queen of England." There will be at least eight table and mantel decorations entered. The Botanic Gardens and Agricultural Department will exhibit specimen plants and novelties.

F. H. Kramer will have a voting contest to name two seedling pink roses, to be named for the two most popular ladies of Washington.

William F. Gude and Adolphus Gude are doing the national show, but will be back in time to look after their exhibits in the local show.

Mr. Goudy, of Dreer's, Riverton, N. J., stopped over on his way south.

The last bowling score was as follows:

Cooke	155	172	163
Shaffer	146	169	163
Ernest	154	153	150
McLennan	167	181	169

PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual."
—J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

HORTICULTURAL BOOKS

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price.

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 35 cents

The Dahlia.

By LAWRENCE K. PEACOCK. A practical treatise on the habits, characteristics, cultivation and history of the dahlia with a descriptive list of all the best varieties. Copiously and elegantly illustrated. 30 cents

Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual.

By ELMER D. SMITH. Revised edition. A complete practical treatise, concise directions for every stage of the work of propagator and grower. The result of 22 years' experience. Fully illustrated. 40 cents

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

The Propagation of Plants.

By ANDREW S. FULLER. Illustrated with numerous engravings. Describing the process of hybridizing and crossing and also the many different modes by which cultivated plants may be propagated and multiplied. Cloth. 359 pages. $1.50

The Rose—Its Cultivation, Varieties, etc.

By H. B. ELLWANGER. Directions for cultivation—for planting, pruning, propagation, the treatment of diseases and insect enemies—particularly valuable for its classification. Alphabetical and descriptive list of nine hundred and fifty-six varieties. Cloth. $1.25

Greenhouse Construction.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

Mushrooms—How to Grow Them.

By WM. FALCONER. This is the most practical work on the subject ever written, and the only book on growing mushrooms published in America. The author describes how he grows mushrooms and how they are grown for profit by the leading market gardeners, and for home use by the most successful private growers. Engravings drawn from nature expressly for this work. Cloth. $1.00

The Nursery Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalog of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.25

Handy Manual.

By J. W. JOHNSON. Illustrated with plans for greenhouse heating and ventilating, by a practical steam and hot water engineer of long experience. 125 pages. $1.00

Commercial Violet Culture.

By B. T. GALLOWAY. An illustrated, comprehensive and complete treatise on the commercial culture, growing and marketing of violets for profit. Of interest to the amateur as well as the commercial grower. Cloth. 224 pages. $1.50

By F. R. ELLIOTT. Designed for city and suburban residences and country schoolhouses, containing designs for lots and grounds, from a lot 30x100 feet to a 40-acre plant. Cloth. $1.50

Gardening for Profit.

By PETER HENDERSON. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.

By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

MT. CLEMENS, MICH.

What was some ten or twelve years ago but a little pleasure trip to the city of florists and baths by a few Detroit florists has now become a regular annual outing, in which no less than seventy-five per cent of the Detroit club members participate. This year the club paid all expenses. A special tourist car was chartered for Thursday, November 5. Fifty-four florists and friends left Detroit. Mayor-elect Philip Breitmeyer accompanied the party.

J. F. Sullivan's place is not in Mount Clemens, but this was the first stop. The stock all looked good.

The second stop was at the small but nicely kept plant of Leopold Mallest. Mr. Mallest deserves considerable credit. With practically nothing to start with, he has built up a nice business in a few years and his carnations are second to none. With his violets he has not been as successful this year as in former years, but they could be much worse.

Arrived at Breitmeyer's, the visitors were taken to the large shipping department. Here were plates heaped with real German sauerkraut, red-hot frankfurters, sandwiches, pickles and plenty to wash it down with. After we had satisfied our interiors, President Brown announced that we had about one hour in which to look over the immense plant. Breitmeyer's stock is better than it has ever been before. A new passageway is being built along the west end of the new range of houses, partly to protect a 5-inch feed pipe recently installed.

Robert Klagge received us with open arms. His is a model plant in model condition. The Detroit city boiler inspectors who accompanied the florists complimented Robert on his well equipped heating plant.

A. J. Stevens' range of houses is but a stone's throw from Mr. Klagge's. Mr. Stevens is a firm believer in doing but one thing and doing that well. That thing in his case happens to be carnations.

From Stevens' to James Taylor's is quite a long walk and were it not for the good hot coffee which Mrs. Taylor had prepared I am afraid some of the boys would still be suffering from the chills, for the wind was pretty cold. Some fine chrysanthemums were seen here. Mr. Taylor heats his houses with hot water with a forced circulation. He gave a demonstration of its workings.

The next stop was at Carey's. Here another long table was spread with all sorts of eatables and of course every one was hungry. The carnations and chrysanthemums at Carey's were good, but it was the roses that received most of the comment.

The car was in waiting at Carey's and from here we went to August Von Boeselager's, where the trip was brought to a very interesting end. The ceiling in the large potting shed was partly covered with white cloth and under this was spread a long table. On one side of the table was a row of plates with the picture of the defeated candidate for president upon it and at the other the smiling countenance of President-elect Taft. The boys were asked to pick out their favorite side and eat to their heart's content. Speeches were now in order and many of the florists responded, among them Wm. Breitmeyer, Jerome K. Stock, President Brown, Mr. Miesel and City Boiler Inspector J. C. McCabe. H. S.

With 6-in. Glass—Blind Mortised—Tight Joints—Bars Firmly Fastened on Bottom Rail—Primed with Pure Linseed Oil—Absolutely the Best on the Market.

We are the largest makers of Hot Bed Sash in America. Our Florists' Special is a better made and higher grade Hot Bed Sash than dealers retail for double our price. If a thorough examination does not prove this a fact, ship them back at our expense.

16,000 Florists' Hot Bed Sash ready to ship! Quality, safe delivery and satisfaction guaranteed. These sash are made of genuine Louisiana Cypress, the best material known for the purpose. Blind-mortised, tight fitting joints, pure linseed oil priming, scientific construction and the use of best quality of putty and plenty of points, insure years of satisfactory service. We pack in paper and crate carefully. We replace any glass broken in shipment.

45 overlapping lights give perfect drainage, prevent leaks and double the durability and strength of the sash. The lights overlap generously, making 80 points of reinforcement. We build the strongest sash on the market—yet make them up in such enormous quantities that we can undersell everybody.

MOISTURE-PROOF JOINTS—Will not ROT or SPREAD. Every florist knows that moisture attacks ordinary hot bed sash in the joints and quickly rots them out. We guard against rotting by blind mortising and making solid, tight, moisture-proof joints. No "come apart" to Gordon-Van Tine Sash—no trouble with rotting joints.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEATING WITH A FLUE.

We are contemplating building a small greenhouse, about 20x20. Can we successfully heat it, when the mercury falls to 20 and 25 degrees below zero, with a horizontal flue, the length of which would be seventy-five feet? What provision should there be for cleaning out the flue whenever necessary? What size should the flue and furnace be? We are located in Nebraska. G. H. P.

I would not advise the use of a flue in a house of these dimensions in your climate, unless the house was intended merely to bring on plants in the spring in much the same way as a hotbed.

L. C. C.

PIPING IN MICHIGAN.

I am erecting a greenhouse 25x150 feet and twelve feet eight inches to the ridge. The height of the walls is six feet, with three feet of glass in each wall. One gable end is glass. The house has an even-span roof and runs east and west, with the boiler shed attached to the east end. I wish to heat it with hot water and should be pleased if you would give me the best plan for piping it.

I have a thirty-five horse-power locomotive type of boiler, with one 6-inch opening in the top and two 4-inch openings at the bottom. The top of the boiler is three feet below the surface of the ground. I wish to heat the house to 60 degrees in zero weather. I wish to use as small pipe in coils as possible. Would it be a good plan to break up the coils into lengths of fifty feet?

C. S. B.

The only way I can devise by which to shorten the length of the flow and return pipes in your house would be to place the boiler seventy-five feet from the ends and carry the pipes in either direction to the ends of the house, arranging the returns across the middle. As you have located the boiler, nothing can be gained by dividing the coils into 50-foot lengths, unless you desire to partition the house into three rooms. If you wish to use it as a single house, it will be as well to use two 3-inch flow pipes from the boiler to the far end of ern Massachusetts. The house is to have glass on top, one end and one side. The rest of the walls will be double boarded, with an air space. The flue will be of brick, 8x8 inches inside measure, and will run the entire length under the bench on the wall side, with a rise of about a foot and a half to a 25-foot run. F.

A heater to heat the house in question should be large enough if rated to carry from 200 to 250 square feet of radiation. The house should have about 140 square feet of radiation in it.

L. C. C.

A SMALL LEAN-TO.

How much 1-inch or 2-inch pipe will be required to heat to 55 or 60 degrees, here in Ohio, a lean-to 12x18, with an average height of nine feet? It runs east and west and has a south exposure, with two feet of glass in the south side and glass ends. The lower walls, four feet high, are brick. There is a door at the northeast corner. The hot water is taken from a heating plant using a circulating pressure at 140 pounds.

J. F. S.

I judge that if you run four lines of 2-inch pipe from the door the length of the house and across the opposite end, it will give sufficient radiation. If you use 1½-inch pipe, five lines installed as above noted will be sufficient. I should not use 1-inch pipe for hot water, even in so small a house.

L. C. C.

HEAT FOR LIVING ROOM.

I am building a living room off from the boiler room of the greenhouse, and I desire to heat it with two radiators. Will your heating expert tell me how best to get right results? I heat with hot water. The farthest point in the greenhouse is 100 feet from the boiler, while the farthest point in the living room will be thirty feet. Will the system be a success if the flows to the radiators are on the same level with the greenhouse, and the returns the same, or will it be necessary to have them exactly on a level? My greenhouse flow is 3-inch. Should the radiator flow be the same size? I am located in Indiana.

L. G. B.

If you have an expansion tank several feet higher than the highest pipe in the greenhouse or the radiators in the living room, you will be able to place the radiators wherever you please, so long as you do not have them lower than the heater. The size of pipe usually used for hot water radiators of moderate size is 1¼-inch or 1½-inch. If more than one radiator is to be fed from a single flow, it will vary in size according to the amount of radiation to be supplied. The usual dwelling seldom requires more than 2-inch pipe. I judge that 1¼-inch or 1½-inch pipe will prove ample for your needs.

L. C. C.

IMPERFECT CIRCULATION.

Please let me have some information on the heating of two connected houses, 14x20 and 20x22, four feet high at the sides and eight feet to the ridge, all glass. I have a No. 16 Wilks boiler. Each house has one 1½-inch flow and three 1¼-inch returns. There are two expansion tanks, with a capacity of ten and fifty gallons, respectively. They are four feet above the highest flow pipe and are connected at the return near the boiler. Each flow pipe, at the highest point, has one ¾-inch air escape, eight feet high, and in case of hard firing will

Isn't This the Boiler You Want?

The following tributes to the all-round efficiency of Capitol Boilers are the best advertisement for its practical merit we can put before you. Read:

"The large Capitol Boiler put in my greenhouse in 1906 has been well tested, and has satisfied me in every way. Needs little attention, is moderate in its demand for fuel, and furnishes all the heat you claimed it would, and more."—CHARLES W. NORTHRUP, LaGrange, Ill.

"The Capitol Boiler has given me entire satisfaction, so much so that I purchased one more today for heating my greenhouse No. 2."—HERBERT S. NASE, Sellersville, Pa.

"The Capitol Boiler has given me complete satisfaction. I find it to be a fine, clean boiler to fire, no coal waste, and a first-class heat producer. I fully recommend it."—BERNARD KATZWINKEL, Mendota, Ill.

It is better to be safe than sorry. Put in a Capitol Boiler, because it's the best boiler made for greenhouses. Any of our Branches or Sales Agencies will promptly furnish you with details, suggestions, prices, etc., or write us direct.

STYLE 1

Diameter, 6 inches

PRICE, $5.00 EACH

Arranged with blinding posts to be connected with wires, so as to ring a bell. Can be set at any two points on entire scale. Especially adapted for Greenhouses.

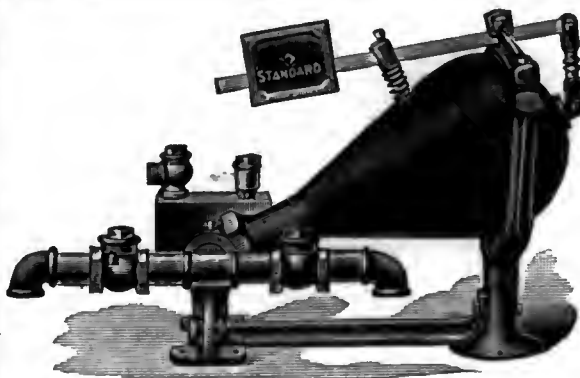

These thermostats are all right and I have recommended them everywhere and feel sure that some sales through my talk have been made. I am not now talking for a bonus or money, as I feel the thermostat saved me from being frozen out with a sleepy fireman, so feel grateful.

throw out water. How can this be corrected?

The small house works well. The larger house, with a riser forty-six feet long, has an elevation of eight inches and then drops twenty-five inches to the first tee; then six inches to the second tee and six inches to the ell. The three 1¼-inch returns are gathered in one 1½-inch pipe fourteen feet from the boiler and drop two inches lower to the bottom of the boiler. The two lower returns have little circulation and are only warm. How should they be arranged?

The houses are located in Texas and are protected from the north by dwellings. I used 3,000 pounds of coal last winter. I grow general greenhouse plants. E. F.

The pipe in the large house is smaller than would generally be used on runs of this length. If you had a 2-inch flow and 1½-inch returns, I believe the service would be more satisfactory. Then, too, a little more radiation in the large house would probably prove an advantage. I believe that with the expansion tanks arranged as you have them, it will be best to take out the vent pipes and plug the openings, except for an ordinary air valve, which can be opened two or three times daily to see that there is no air in the system. The expansion tanks should then force a circulation. L. C. C.

Current Comment.

Alex M. Rennie, formerly in business in this city but for several months past in Boston, was in town last week calling on acquaintances previous to departure for Chicago, where he has accepted a situation.

Among the recent foreign importations through the Providence custom house were the following: From Rotterdam, fourteen packages of seeds; from Antwerp, five packages of plants.

George Kelley, 239 Waterman street, has been erecting an addition, 20x30 feet, to his range of greenhouses.

The Woonsocket Horticultural Society, at its meeting a few days ago, elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, A. B. Warfield; vice-presidents, George M. Welles, Warren A. Cook, Gilbert Staples and John McLaughlin; secretary and treasurer, Herbert Whitaker; auditor, Warren A. Cook. The report of the treasurer, up to September 30, showed that the expenses were $282.45 and the receipts $340.60, leaving a balance on hand of $58.15.

DEAR SIR:—If the Morehead Return Trap cost ten times what you ask for it, it would be cheap when time, labor and cost of repairs are considered, in comparison with the steam pump I had installed before getting your Trap. I cannot praise it too highly and I recommend it to everyone who talks steam. Yours, Chrysanthemums now hold the center of the stage and are bringing from $1 to $4.50 per dozen at retail. There are plenty of blooms of a good quality and the demand keeps the supply well bought up without any crowding.

Mrs. William Hoffman has opened one of the finest stores in Pawtucket, on Main street, and the interior has been fitted up in an attractive manner. Friday last she had one of the largest funeral orders ever received in this state.

Losing his balance while standing on the whiffletree of his wagon on the afternoon of November 2, V. A. Vanicek, of Newport, jumped to save himself, but instead he fractured a bone in his left leg. He was at his nurseries in Middletown at the time of the accident.

William B. Hazard, of this city, made an immense floral plaque resting on an easel for the funeral of George Milner, of Moosup, Conn., one of the directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. The piece was composed of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and lilies of the valley, with ferns and asparagus.

The Market.

Conditions last week were about the same as at last writing. Stock of all kinds went slowly the first part of the week, but there was a decided improvement later, and on Saturday there was a rush for stock that almost cleaned the counters.

Roses are still going slowly, except red, which are cleaned up readily. Carnations are fine, but the demand is not what it should be. Some of the late varieties of mums are now to be had, among which are some fine yellow Chadwick, Bonnaffon and Maud Dean.

Various Notes.

A delegation of Cleveland florists left for Chicago on Sunday evening to attend the national exhibition. Among them was Herman Knoble, of Knoble Bros.; John Kirchner, Charles Bartells, Guy Bate, Frank Williams and Sam Pentecost.

The Calla Cut Flower Co. is sending some fine carnations and mums to this market.

Harry Flickinger, of Barberton, was a visitor last week, and reports having built two new houses this season. He reports good trade.

W. A. Calhoun has started cutting Gov. Herrick violets. His plants give promise of a good season's cut.

The F. R. Williams Co. has installed another Murphy automatic stoker at its greenhouses, having had such good results as to warrant a sure saving in the coal bill.

Knoble Bros. report some heavy funeral orders for last week. B.

LEBANON, N. H.—The Haskell Floral Co. is building another house, made necessary by an increase in business.

PONTIAC, MICH.—H. J. Pearce, of the Pontiac Floral Co., has developed an entirely new aster of the peculiar shade of pink known only hitherto to the Day-break carnation. The flowers are large, averaging about four inches across, and have found a ready sale.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

This city has some excellent greenhouse and nursery establishments, which indicate that the people, not only of this immediate vicinity, but of southern Texas in general, make liberal use of flowers and plants.

W. T. Hauser, manager of the Houston Floral Co., began business here about four years ago and has built up an extensive trade. He is an expert in all that pertains to floriculture and has made his greenhouses and nursery on Dumble street a popular attraction. He was formerly engaged with his father in the floral business at San Antonio and is still interested in that concern. He has an office and store at 603 Main street.

William Kutschbach's greenhouses, at 2526 Washington street, have been in operation during the last fifteen years and the growth of the business has been steady and substantial. He is not only well patronized in the city, but makes frequent shipments of flowers, plants and bulbs to outside points. His store is located at 913 Main street.

Henry Palmer, at 2521 Washington avenue, has had many years' experience in the growing of fine flowers and in the making of artistic designs, and merits the success that he has won. His greenhouses contain some rare and expensive plants, as well as the popular commercial varieties.

CALUMET, MICH.

A. E. Lutey, who recently resigned as manager of the Lakeside Floral Co., has decided to open a flower store in the Hohnan block, on Fifth street, with Miss Georgie Draper in charge. Miss Draper is well known locally, having been employed in the florists' business by Mr. Lutey for the last five years. The store is to be opened at once, the flowers coming here from Milwaukee, where Mr. Lutey has leased a block of greenhouses, and placed his brother, Harry, in charge. The latter was manager of the greenhouses at the Chassell plant of the Lakeside Co.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

V. Burgevin's Sons, of Kingston, N. Y., planted a new house, 34x180, with hybrid teas and are cutting some fine blooms. Catering chiefly to retail trade, they realize the advisability of growing as varied a stock as possible, and they are right up to date. This house contains Perle, Sunset, Golden Gate, Ivory, Bride, Maid and Beauty. It contains, also, some of the newer candidates for favor, Mrs. Jardine and Rhea Reid. Both of these are doing splendidly, and if the latter will only hold its neck a bit stiffer (for it has no reason to hide its head), we have undoubtedly a grand rose. This house was a feast to the eye, being perfect in both foliage and bloom. The carnations are fine. Chrysanthemums are going well. The first cut is gone and Ivory and Bonaffon are in full crop. Side benches are used for blooms suitable for funeral pieces, and the artist who does the artistic work is indeed a fortunate person to have such a variety to draw upon. It is an acknowledged science to make a design look passable with material of poor grade, but it is a positive delight to perform the artistic when one has decent stock to work with.

Wm. Williams has purchased the Stow place at Kingston, and is getting things into shape. He had the misfortune to be bitten on the hand by a dog, but it is hoped that no serious results will follow.

P. J. Cookingham, of Ellenville, N. Y., is picking fine Enchantress. He is also a market gardener of note.

J. R. Hunt, of Ellenville, is an enthusiastic amateur and has just completed a large house, iron frame and cement, for general purposes.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IA.—Ground will be broken within a few days for the fine new flower store and greenhouse which is to be erected by Capt. Jas. G. Crozier, at Third avenue and Fourth street. The lot is one of the most convenient in the city. It is owned by the Rock Island and a long time lease has been secured by Mr. Crozier. The office will front on Third avenue and the greenhouse will run back to the alley. Mr. Crozier will have a most attractive place of business when his plans are completed, and he intends to make his store of real convenience to the public by arranging a part of it so that it may be used as a waiting room by patrons of the street railway company.

Mr. Florist, if you once get one of these cutters on your finger you will never be without it for many times the price. Just the thing for cutting your carnations, sweet peas, asters, melons, grapes, etc. Why be bothered with a knife or follow the old way of breaking your flowers when a Handy Cutter will do the work better and save you money and time? Don't continue breaking your carnations and thus ruin hundreds of young shoots daily, simply because a knife is unhandy to work with, but try a Handy Cutter. If you are not entirely satisfied with it you can return it and have your money refunded. These cutters are made of spring brass, highly nickel-plated, and contain a removable blade.

Looking Ahead

The National Flower Show, at Chicago, has demonstrated beyond all question that the love of flowers is growing throughout the country. The people are becoming educated in the right direction and everything indicates that the supply furnished for 1908 must be materially increased for 1909. More flowers will be used next year than ever before and the florists will be called upon to grow and produce them. If you are up to your capacity now, you will need to add more glass next spring and when you come to buy the new house, don't forget that we are foremost in the construction of the commercial greenhouse. Don't overlook the fact that we sell nothing that is inferior in quality, design or workmanship, and that, consistent with high-grade goods, our prices are reasonably low. We are always ready and willing to furnish sketches or estimates without charge and will be pleased to talk matters over at any time.

KING STEEL FRAME TRUSSED HOUSES

Patented Rights Reserved

Up to 50 Feet Wide
Without Posts

Type of 25-foot steel frame trussed houses, of which 1600 lineal feet have just been erected by W. J. Palmer & Son, of Buffalo and Lancaster, N. Y. This new type of Steel Frame House combines the advantages of the King trussed sash bar construction and the flat iron rafter construction, as compared with the flat iron rafter houses.

It casts less Shade. It has greater Stiffness. It can be built in wider spans without posts. It is less expensive. The introduction of this design marks a great advance in greenhouse building, making the highest type of construction available to the average commercial grower. "Ask the man who has one." Names given on application. Complete framework or fittings only supplied.

STORM-TIGHT and RAIN-PROOF in 30 seconds!

This is the famous "Blizzard" Front in actual use, while a furious storm is raging.

With the handy "Blizzard" in place, you can drive in comfort, regardless of snow, rain, wind or cold.

It will keep out every drop of rain and no matter if it is zero weather, the heat of your body will keep the inside of the buggy as comfortable as your "den" at home. No foot-warmers or extra robes necessary. Notice the large window.
It is 12x20 inches and made of tough, transparent celluloid, and a side light on each side.

The line pocket is 14 inches wide, and so strongly reinforced with metal that it cannot tear out or sag. Allows you perfect control of the horse.

You can quickly open the "Blizzard" at either side and get in or out with ease.

THE "BLIZZARD" FRONT
equalizes the strain on the buggy top and prevents it from rattling. It is made of Blizzard Cloth and will last as long as the top.

Why risk the dangers of exposure—Rheumatism, Colds, Pneumonia? Why not drive in comfort?

The "Blizzard" Front sells for $3.50. If your dealer cannot supply you, we will ship you one on receipt of price. Your money refunded if not exactly as represented. Write for attractive "Blizzard" booklet today. We send it free.

10,000 Gallons of Water at 90 Pounds Pressure

In one day for less than three gallons of gasoline, and you can use city or natural gas in the same engine, if you have it.

The Standard Pumping Engine is better than a windmill because it is reliable, better than a "Hot Air Pump" because you can get more water and more pressure for less money, and better than a Steam Pump because it is always ready and the expense goes on only when you are doing your pumping.

After years of experience in making and repairing engines, steam and power pumps and windmills, we designed the Standard Pumping Engine to meet your special needs and we give you satisfactory results before we take your money. Each machine is thoroughly tested before and after painting, and shipped to you all put together, ready to run.

RAMBLING JOTTINGS.

Duncan Aird, of Newburgh, N. Y., has some fine specimens of Lælia anceps and L. anceps alba coming into bloom. They will be used in a big decoration by the Yuess Gardens Co., which has bought his entire cut of chrysanthemums for the season. They have a fine batch of A. J. Balfour, J. K. Shaw, Peter Kay, Mrs. Robinson, October Sunshine and Col. Appleton. Pink and white Ivory are selling well, at a popular figure. There are inquiries for plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, naturally grown, and just at this time, when there is nothing in the shape of a flowering plant, such stock should sell well. Folks become tired of so much green in the house, restful though the color may be, and what is more cheerful in the dwelling than a flowering plant, especially after Jack Frost has cut down everything outdoors?

F. K. Lamereaux, of Port Jarvis, N. Y., reports good business, particularly with design work. He ships much out of town, where his fame as a designer is well known. Formerly in the dry goods business, he uses to advantage the taste acquired in the blending of colors into a harmonious whole, reminding me of another artist in the Salt City, who was formerly a milliner and is now a most successful designer.

E. A. Lorentz, of Middletown, N. Y., will have, when completed, the banner place of this section, which is quite an assertion. His houses have iron frames, with cement benches and walks. He has a palm house with ground glass, and a handsome office with a private room in which to entertain drummers. Nothing slow here. He says "Kill 'em Dead" is the greatest thing out in the tobacco line.

F. X. Dienst, of Middletown, has no kick coming, except about some cold storage lilies, which seem rather weaker than usual. All other stock looks well.

Joseph Richard, of Goshen, N. Y., has completed an iron frame house, 30x150, for roses and carnations. He is an extensive market gardener.

E. B. Holtslander, of Liberty, N. Y., reports fall business good. He has an up-to-date plant. M.

KINDLY discontinue my advertisement of alyssum. It did the work. I sold out clean and could have sold more.—
